Final Contrastive Error Analysis Report

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

This report presents the Qualitative Contrastive Error Analysis for 154 failure cases. Each case pairs an incorrect prediction with a correct prediction from the exact same Ground Truth Urgency, Scenario, and Style. The Gemini model was used to strictly extract the linguistic delta, the algorithmic blindspot, and propose actionable datset fixes.

Pair #1 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I am writing because my plan - Silver Home Broadband 24 - has increased in price mid-contract and I am finding the whole situation very worrying. I do not understand the technicalities and have phoned four times over the past three weeks (5 March, 12 March, 19 March and 23 March); each time I was told someone would get back to me but no one has. On 19 March I spoke with Claire who suggested that the increase was 'standard,' which is not an adequate explanation for changing contractual terms without clear notice. I am elderly, not confident online, and rely on clear, patient communication. Please either honour the original contract rate or allow me to leave without penalty; I would appreciate a written confirmation and simple step-by-step guidance on how to proceed if cancellation is necessary.

CORRECT TEXT: My name is Owen Patel, account holder. On 4 March you informed me that my monthly service fee would increase by GBP 3.50 from 1 April - mid-way through a 24-month contract that began on 1 June last year. I have spoken to customer services three times since then (live chat on 5 March with Nina; phone call on 8 March with call handler Mark; email response from general support on 10 March). None of those contacts provided a contract clause that allows this unilateral increase, despite my request to be shown one. I am technically competent and have reviewed the documents you sent; they do not contain clear wording giving you the right to raise the price during the committed term. I am asking for a written, clause-by-clause justification for the increase or for the price to be reverted to the original amount for the remainder of the contract. I have no interest in being transferred between teams. If you cannot produce the contractual basis for this increase within seven working days, escalate this to a manager and confirm in writing that you will either roll back the increase or offer an acceptable alternative. If this matter is not resolved satisfactorily I will refer it to the Energy and Utilities Ombudsman. I expect a substantive reply that addresses the contract terms and my specific demands, not a standard scripted response.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text contains explicit emotional language ('very worrying'), a statement of customer vulnerability ('I am elderly, not confident online'), and a clear history of repeated, unaddressed attempts to resolve the issue ('phoned four times... no one has'). The correct text, while detailing multiple contacts and an explicit threat of external escalation, maintains a more formal, less emotional tone and emphasizes the customer's competence rather than vulnerability.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on cues of emotional distress, stated customer vulnerability, and a history of unaddressed service failures, interpreting these as indicators of higher urgency ('Medium') even when the overall context and requested resolution align with 'Low' urgency. It fails to correctly weigh these against the absence of immediate, critical impact or an imminent, unavoidable crisis.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples of 'Low' urgency texts that include emotional expressions, statements of customer vulnerability, or descriptions of repeated failed attempts at resolution, to teach the model that these do not automatically escalate urgency.

Pair #2 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I am writing after repeated unsuccessful attempts to resolve what appears to be fraudulent activity on my family account. Timeline: on 28 March I received a text indicating a SIM change for one of my children's numbers; I did not authorise this. On 29 March I noticed two outgoing high-value calls billed to an unfamiliar premium-rate service totalling GBP 960. I reported the unauthorised SIM swap to your support line on 30 March (call ref 90512) and was told a fraud investigation would start - I was given an incident number, F-00377, and advised to contact my bank. I followed up by email on 2 April and via web chat on 5 April (chat ref 332188) because no holds had been placed and new charges continued to appear. On 7 April I spoke briefly to a specialist named Mark in fraud who said he would escalate to the fraud team manager; I have not had a substantive update since then. I have filed a police report (station: Hounslow, ref 2024-14839) and my bank has provisionally blocked the affected card, but the continuing exposure on the account presents a real risk to my family's finances and personal data. Please take the following immediate actions: freeze any further account changes, restore any altered security settings, reverse the fraudulent charges pending your investigation, and supply a written timeline of the steps you will take and the expected completion date. If you are unable to confirm these actions within 48 hours I will need to escalate this to the ombudsman and pursue formal complaints through the police report and my bank. I am calm about the process but require urgent and decisive action to prevent further harm.

CORRECT TEXT: I am an elderly customer and this is the first time I have ever had to complain. On 22/03/2026 at about 17:10 I received a text message claiming to be from your company asking me to 'verify my account' with a link. I did not click it but shortly afterwards a gentleman phoned from a number appearing as 020 7946 00XX and asked for my security code, saying he was from your technical team. I refused to give any code and told him I would call you back; the caller became impatient. At 18:05 I noticed my mobile lost signal as if it had been disconnected - I could not call my neighbour or the emergency number for my home alarm. I do not know if someone attempted to port my number or if my SIM was cloned. There are now two small unauthorised transactions visible on a merchant I do not recognise for GBP 29.99 and GBP 14.95 dated 22/03. I am not confident online and I am frightened that if my line is taken from me I will be unable to reach my daughter and the community nurse who visits twice a week. This is the first time I have raised this with you; please freeze any changes to my account immediately, block any SIM port requests, issue a replacement SIM if necessary and advise me step?by?step on how we will secure my account. I need someone patient and clear to talk me through next steps and to confirm by phone that my service is safe. Please treat this as urgent.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly links the service disruption to immediate personal safety risks and the inability to contact essential support (daughter, nurse, emergency services), amplified by the user's stated vulnerability ('elderly,' 'frightened'). The Error Text, while detailing significant financial fraud and data risk, frames the impact more abstractly ('risk to my family's finances and personal data') and includes a statement of being 'calm about the process,' which may have diluted the perceived urgency.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be under-weighting the cumulative impact of significant financial loss, ongoing data exposure, and explicit time-bound escalation threats when the user's emotional state is described as 'calm,' failing to recognize that objective risk factors can indicate high urgency independent of emotional expression.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where high financial fraud and data security risks, coupled with explicit time-bound escalation threats, are present, even if the user expresses a calm or neutral emotional state, to teach the model to prioritize objective risk over subjective tone.

Pair #3 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: On 02 March 2026 I telephoned your sales line to sign up for a student plan and spoke with an agent named Jack. He described a 12-month plan with 40GB of data at GBP 15 per month and reassured me twice that there would be no early termination fees and that content filters would be applied for parental control. Based on that conversation I accepted and gave my bank details. The confirmation email I received that evening, however, shows a 24-month contract at GBP 35 per month and no filters; it also includes an early termination charge. I called sales back on 04 March and spoke to Hannah who admitted there had been a mistake and said she would escalate to complaints. On 10 March I called again, spoke to Paul in complaints, who promised a manager would call me within five working days; no manager has called and I have received only automated updates. I am a student with very limited funds and the difference between what was promised and what has been applied is unaffordable. I have exhausted the normal channels and am now requesting a manager review and correction of the contract to the terms promised by Jack on 02 March. If that is not resolved promptly I will ask for intervention by the Ombudsman. Please provide the name of the manager handling this and a firm timescale for correction.

CORRECT TEXT: My name is Margaret Hill. I am 82 and not very confident with technology, so I want to explain calmly what went wrong and why I need someone in authority to take over. On 05 March 2026 a gentleman called me from your sales team-he said his name was James-and told me my monthly landline deal would be improved if I moved to something called Comfort Talk. I remember saying I was happy with my existing arrangement because my pendant alarm service uses the old number. James assured me the number would remain and that the change would be 'seamless'. Two days later, my pendant stopped working and my carers could not get through. I phoned your support line on 07/03 and spoke to Beth who opened a ticket and said an engineer would attend within 48 hours. When no one arrived I called again on 12/03 and spoke to a different advisor, Paul, who told me the number had been migrated and that it would take up to 10 days to restore. I'm frightened by the thought that if I fall and cannot press my pendant, help might not arrive. I have exhausted the normal helplines and am now asking for a manager to intervene immediately. If you cannot restore my original number and the pendant service within 24 hours I will need to take this to the ombudsman because the sale was made in error and has caused a safety issue. I do not want to be fobbed off with apologies; I need confirmation that the handset and pendant will be reconnected and an assurance that no billing change was authorised. Please arrange a callback to the landline-if the line is still out, call my neighbour, Mrs Patel at 12 Highfield Road, who has permission to liaise on my behalf.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states an immediate physical safety risk ('pendant stopped working', 'frightened by the thought that if I fall... help might not arrive', 'caused a safety issue') and couples the escalation threat with a very short, specific deadline ('within 24 hours'). The error text, while detailing financial hardship and a threat of ombudsman, lacks this explicit, immediate physical danger and a concrete, short-term resolution deadline.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is failing to prioritize explicit, immediate physical safety threats and specific, short-term deadlines for resolution over general financial hardship or contractual disputes, even when an ombudsman threat is present in both.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples that clearly distinguish between high urgency due to immediate physical safety risks with specific short deadlines, and medium urgency due to financial hardship or contractual disputes, even if an ombudsman threat is mentioned.

Pair #4 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I am a small business owner and my case has been mishandled for too long. On 2 March I reported a billing error where a duplicate charge of GBP 310 appeared on the account; I was promised a refund by 12 March by adviser Harpreet. That date passed and I called again on 15 March, was transferred three times, given two different reference numbers and told someone would call back - no call came. I escalated on 20 March and spoke to Emma who said the refund was authorised, yet my bank statement shows nothing. This complaint has been passed around with contradictory information and no resolution. I have exhausted the usual routes and now request a named manager to review the file, confirm the refund in writing, and provide a timeline for when I will see the money. If I do not receive a satisfactory reply within five working days I will submit a formal complaint to the ombudsman and include all correspondence.

CORRECT TEXT: I contacted customer relations on 3 May about ongoing dropped packets and intermittent DNS failures that affect VPN and remote work. The advisor, Mark, opened ticket REF-7742 and assured me a technical specialist would call back within 48 hours. No callback. I used the web chat on 6 May; that transcript is apparently 'not available' according to the follow-up email. I then received an automated note on 8 May marking the case as closed with no explanation. I am a young professional; my livelihood depends on stable connectivity and I work anti-social hours - this lack of coherent handling is unacceptable. I expect a named complaints manager to review my case, to retrieve and provide the missing chat and call logs, and to schedule a real technician visit within three working days. If you cannot do that, tell me now so I can make alternative arrangements; I will not wait in limbo.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text's ultimatum emphasizes immediate personal impact and the customer's intent to seek alternative solutions ('tell me now so I can make alternative arrangements; I will not wait in limbo'), conveying a higher degree of immediate urgency. The error text's ultimatum, while serious, refers to a future, procedural escalation ('I will submit a formal complaint to the ombudsman') which the model likely interprets as less immediate.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be less sensitive to urgency cues that signal an immediate need for the customer to take alternative action or that directly impact their current functioning, compared to cues that indicate a formal, future escalation process.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where 'Medium' urgency is conveyed through explicit statements of immediate personal impact or the customer's intent to seek alternative solutions if the issue is not resolved promptly.

Pair #5 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I cancelled my contract and switched provider on 05/02/2026. Your records are continuing to debit my bank account. A direct debit was taken on 10/03/2026 despite clear notice of cancellation and confirmation emails from the new supplier. I have contacted your billing teams repeatedly: I spoke with Claire on 12/03/2026 who advised a refund; I spoke with Michael on 18/03/2026 who said the matter was resolved; neither outcome occurred.

This is a formal notice: the charges taken after termination are unlawful. Under the Consumer Rights framework and your own terms, continuation of billing post-cancellation constitutes an unlawful deprivation of funds. I demand immediate repayment of all sums debited since 06/02/2026, a written explanation of why the direct debit mandate was not cancelled, and evidence that my account has been closed. Provide the refund within seven days and supply a named manager to handle this matter.

If you do not comply I will escalate to the Ombudsman and consider a claim in the Small Claims Court and referral to Trading Standards. I have exhausted standard channels and am requesting escalation to a manager and to the Ombudsman now. Please treat this as time-critical and respond in writing within 48 hours.
CORRECT TEXT: I am a vulnerable customer with reduced mobility and I am submitting this as a follow-up to my previous complaint raised on 02/03/2026 with reference CR-20260302-41. On 14/01/2026 I cancelled my broadband contract by telephone and received confirmation from your agent Hannah (call reference 14-01-26-HH) that the service would terminate on 31/01/2026 and no further payments would be taken. Despite that, on 15/02/2026 and again on 15/03/2026 your billing system debited GBP 64.99 from my account.

Under the Consumer Rights Act and the terms of your own fair treatment policy, I require an immediate reimbursement of the two charges totalling GBP 129.98 and written confirmation that no further sums will be taken. I also request written assurance that my account closure has been logged and that my personal data will not be used for marketing following cancellation. I raised this matter once before and received a holding response that did not resolve the refund. I am constrained in mobility and rely on clear written correspondence; please send a full statement of account to my home address and an email confirmation. If you do not provide a full refund and written confirmation within 14 days I will pursue alternative dispute resolution and will seek advice on my statutory rights.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly identifies the customer as 'vulnerable' and mentions 'reduced mobility', which are strong, often policy-driven, indicators for prioritized handling. The error text, while containing explicit legal threats, multiple escalation paths, and very short deadlines (48 hours), lacks this specific 'vulnerability' flag.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to heavily prioritize explicit 'vulnerability' keywords as a primary trigger for 'High' urgency, potentially under-weighting a combination of aggressive legal threats, multiple stated escalation channels, and extremely short deadlines when the vulnerability flag is absent.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where high urgency is conveyed through a combination of explicit legal threats, multiple escalation paths, and very short deadlines, even without explicit 'vulnerable customer' declarations.

Pair #6 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: When I switched from ClearWave on 02/02 I expected a smooth transfer. Instead I spent the next six weeks unwinding a mess that began with a sales call on 02/02 from an advisor who gave his name as Liam. He assured me I was being put onto the 'All-Inclusive Family' tariff with unlimited calls and 500GB data. I signed up based on that assurance. On 12/03 I received a bill showing pay-as-you-go charges totalling GBP 38 for calls and texts I believed to be included. I called support three times (cases 112233, 112244 and 112255) and spoke to Priya, then Marcus, then a chat agent who said a manager would call but nobody ever did. I also visited your King's Cross shop on 18/03 and left with no resolution. This has cost me both time and money; what began as wanting to consolidate accounts now feels like being boxed into the wrong product because of a mis-sold plan. I have exhausted the standard channels and request this be escalated to a manager immediately. If we cannot agree a correction and a refund of the erroneous charges I will pursue an independent review through the ombudsman. Please confirm corrective action and an itemised credit to my account within five working days.

CORRECT TEXT: When I first ordered a SIM-only upgrade on 11 March the salesperson put me on a 3G-only bundle despite repeatedly stating I needed 5G and unlimited tethering for remote work. I noticed the mismatch when my laptop would not see 5G speeds and the tethering option was greyed out. I called on 15 March and was told the order (ref: S-99321) would be corrected within 48 hours. That did not happen. To be thorough: the agent on 11 March asked for my IMEI and confirmed compatibility; the rep on 15 March (call handler Amir) said a provisioning change would be applied. I am tech-savvy and have already checked APN settings, restarted the device, and swapped the SIM into a spare 5G phone - the result is the same. I need the account re-provisioned to the 5G/tethering bundle or a full refund for the difference between what I requested and what was applied. Please respond with the exact steps you will take, a timeframe, and the name of the person handling the correction. I am on a tight schedule and would like this settled within three working days.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly states a personal time constraint ('I am on a tight schedule') and requests a resolution within a shorter, more immediate timeframe ('three working days'), directly linking it to an ongoing functional need (remote work). The Error Text, while requesting immediate internal escalation, provides a slightly longer resolution timeframe ('five working days') and frames the urgency more around past inconvenience and a future external threat rather than an immediate, ongoing personal impediment.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model appears to be under-weighting explicit internal escalation requests and future external threats when they are paired with a relatively longer resolution timeframe (5 days) and lack a clear, immediate personal impact statement. Conversely, it seems to prioritize explicit personal time constraints ('tight schedule') combined with shorter deadlines (3 days) and immediate functional impact.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where explicit internal escalation requests and external threats are present but the overall urgency is modulated by the requested resolution timeframe and the immediacy of the personal impact.

Pair #7 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: This is getting tedious. I was sold the 'Unlimited Home Fibre' plan over the phone on 4 February 2026 by an agent named Ben Carter (call record 04/02/2026, ref 102334). During that call I explicitly told him I wanted unlimited data at GBP 25/month and no fixed-term exit penalties. Ben confirmed this deal and said the order was placed. Instead, my contract shows 'Business Lite' at GBP 45/month with a 24-month minimum term - a plan I never accepted and which is unsuitable for my household. I raised this with support on 10/02 (chat ref 11001), 18/02 (phone ref 11444) and 02/03 (email to billing, ref 11987). Each time I have been given different explanations: billing system error, policy reasons, or promises that the paperwork would be amended. No correction has been made and I have been charged the higher monthly fee for March (GBP 45.00 taken on 01/03/2026).

I am a busy professional and have already spent hours on calls and emails. To be specific, I require: a) immediate reversion to the product I was sold (Unlimited Home Fibre) at the GBP 25/month rate; b) a full refund/credit for the excess amounts charged since activation; c) removal of any early-termination obligation arising from the incorrect contract; and d) written confirmation of these corrections and the timescale for completion. Please escalate to a senior billing manager and resolve within five working days. If you cannot fix this promptly I will request a formal investigation and pursue compensation for my time and the incorrect billing.
CORRECT TEXT: I switched to your service from BrightNet on 04 February 2026 and, regrettably, I was mis-sold a package during the onboarding call. The agent, Oliver P., on 04/02 (call reference 78645), explicitly confirmed activation of your "Student 35" broadband tariff at GBP 35 per month and said there would be no ISP exit fee from BrightNet. When my first bill arrived on 03/03/2026 it showed activation of "HomePlus 65" with a first-month charge of GBP 65 and a pro-rated early termination fee of GBP 120 for my old provider. I raised this immediately: I emailed support on 05/03/2026 and spoke to Hannah in complaints on 12/03/2026 (ticket 99201). Both times I was assured the matter was being investigated; instead I received another identical, incorrect invoice on 20/03/2026.

To be clear and chronological: 04/02/2026 switched; 03/03/2026 first bill incorrect; 05/03/2026 emailed with attaching the recorded transcript that my former provider gave me showing my contract end date; 12/03/2026 call with Hannah who said she would correct the tariff; 20/03/2026 second incorrect invoice. The financial consequence is immediate: my bank has rejected payments twice and I now face late fees from my student credit account. I have exhausted frontline remedies and I am asking that you (a) reinstate the correct "Student 35" tariff with retrospective billing adjustment to reflect what was promised at sale, (b) remove any incorrectly applied early termination fee charged by my previous provider, and (c) confirm these corrections in writing. If this cannot be resolved by a senior manager within seven days, I will be asking the Ombudsman to investigate the mis-selling and undue charges. Please escalate without further delay.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states an 'immediate' and severe financial consequence ('my bank has rejected payments twice and I now face late fees') that is actively happening and escalating. The error text, while detailing a past overcharge and repeated attempts to resolve, frames the financial impact as a past event ('charged the higher monthly fee') and future threat ('pursue compensation'), lacking the same explicit immediacy and severity of ongoing financial distress.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be highly sensitive to explicit declarations of immediate, ongoing, and escalating negative consequences (e.g., 'financial consequence is immediate', 'bank has rejected payments twice') as a primary indicator of 'Medium' urgency, potentially under-weighting the cumulative impact of repeated failed resolutions and past financial losses when the current, active threat isn't as explicitly severe or immediate.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where repeated service failures lead to an imminent, but not yet catastrophic, negative consequence, explicitly linking the history of issues to a present, escalating threat (e.g., 'After multiple incorrect bills, my account is now in arrears and I face service suspension next week').

Pair #8 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I am writing as the primary account holder for a family bundle with four lines (account reference 79-3045). Over the past three weeks I have identified a sequence of fees which were not disclosed at the point of renewal: a so-called 'admin charge' of GBP 17.95 applied on 03 March, and a recurring 'service management' fee of GBP 4.99 applied from 10 March. I have called customer services on 4 separate occasions (14 March, 17 March, 21 March and 23 March) and spoken with agents Rina Patel and a supervisor in billing, who logged references BIL-1423 and BIL-2147. Each time I was told that the charges were legitimate and that I would receive an itemised breakdown by email; that breakdown has not arrived.

As a parent managing multiple lines, transparent billing is essential. I require a full explanation in writing of the nature and contractual basis for these fees, a full refund of all unagreed charges applied since 1 March 2026, and confirmation that no such fees will be levied in future without express consent. Please respond within seven working days with the documentation I requested. If you cannot substantiate these charges, I expect them removed immediately and a written apology sent to my email address on file.
CORRECT TEXT: My bill dated 15 March 2026 includes a line item of GBP 12.99 described as a "connectivity administration fee" that is not referenced in the contract I accepted on 3 November 2025 nor in the summary pages provided at signup. As a technically literate customer I reviewed the documents available in my online account and the only administrative charges I accepted were for paper bills (which I explicitly opted out of). Please send a detailed breakdown of the GBP 12.99 charge, the date it was applied, and the contractual authority for levying it. If this fee was added in error I expect a reversal and an amended statement; if it was included intentionally you should point me to the exact clause where this fee was disclosed at point of sale. I am raising this now for the first time and would appreciate resolution within five business days.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states 'I am raising this now for the first time and would appreciate resolution within five business days,' clearly establishing a new, shorter deadline for initial resolution. The error text, while requesting a response within seven working days, also details a history of four prior unresolved calls over three weeks, which might dilute the perceived immediacy of the current request for resolution.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model appears to struggle with distinguishing between a history of unresolved issues (which should imply escalating urgency) and a clear, newly established deadline for a first-time resolution. It seems to over-index on the duration and repetition of the problem in the error text, interpreting it as a chronic, less urgent issue, rather than recognizing the implied escalation from repeated failures and the new demand for a written response.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where a history of prior unresolved attempts, combined with a new, explicit deadline for a comprehensive response, clearly indicates a 'Medium' or 'High' urgency, rather than being interpreted as a 'Low' urgency chronic problem.

Pair #9 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: My name is Margaret Davies and I am 78. I try to manage my single mobile line on a fixed pension but your March bill is wrong and I don't know what to do. I received invoice 003287 dated 12 March 2026 showing GBP 97.45 due. My contract is for a GBP 21.99 monthly plan plus GBP 1.49 line rental; I normally pay GBP 23.48. There are four extra items labelled as "premium content" on 02/03, 06/03, 08/03 and 11/03 totalling GBP 69.97. I do not subscribe to any services. My granddaughter, Jenna, checked my phone settings on 13 March and there were apps installed that I did not put there. I cannot understand the billing portal - the fonts are small and the layout confuses me. This is the first time I have complained to you. I do not have savings to cover unexpected charges. Please do the following: (1) remove the premium items, (2) refund GBP 69.97 to my debit card immediately, (3) put a block on my account so no further premium purchases can be made without my explicit spoken permission, and (4) send me a clear, printed statement to my home address at 17 Willow Road, Norwich NR3 4LP explaining what happened in plain language I can understand. If you need to call, please ask for my granddaughter Jenna who helps me - her mobile is 07788 332244. I am frightened about being billed again and I need this fixed straight away.
CORRECT TEXT: I am writing because your billing error has put me in immediate financial jeopardy and repeated attempts to remedy it have failed. I moved to a student SIM-only plan in February; the monthly charge agreed was GBP 18.50. Between 10/03 and 17/03 you billed me a partial amount and then on 24/03 took two direct debits totalling GBP 556.82 from my account. I contacted support on 25/03 (phone, spoke to Daniel at 09:42), on 27/03 (web chat with Yasmin at 14:10), again on 30/03 (email reply from billing@ saying they were investigating), and finally on 02/04 I visited my local store and spoke to Emma who advised that a refund would be processed within 10 working days. That has not happened. Because I live on a tight budget this error has caused my rent to bounce, I have been charged three bank fees totalling GBP 45.00, and my landlord is now threatening notice if funds are not cleared by 07/04. I have collected screenshots of the direct-debit mandate, bank statement entries, and all reference numbers (fault ref: BIL-3392, call ref: DNL0927). I need a corrected, itemised bill showing exactly why you debited twice, an immediate refund of GBP 556.82 to my bank, reimbursement for the GBP 45 bank charges, and written confirmation within 48 hours that you have escalated this to your senior billing manager. If you cannot resolve this within that timescale I will submit a formal complaint to the Ombudsman and seek advice from Citizens Advice about my tenancy risk. I am exhausted by the calls and wait times; please do not delay further.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly details severe, time-bound, and externally-imposed consequences (e.g., 'rent to bounce,' 'landlord is now threatening notice if funds are not cleared by 07/04') and a history of failed internal resolution attempts. The Error Text, while expressing financial vulnerability and fear ('I do not have savings to cover unexpected charges,' 'I am frightened'), lacks these specific, imminent, and externally-driven threats, and explicitly states it's the 'first time I have complained.'

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be less sensitive to general expressions of financial vulnerability and emotional distress, and more reliant on explicit, concrete, and time-bound external threats (like eviction deadlines or documented repeated failures to resolve) to classify 'High' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where high urgency is indicated by specific, time-bound external consequences (e.g., eviction threats, utility cut-offs, legal deadlines) and a clear history of unresolved issues, even if the language isn't overtly aggressive.

Pair #10 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I need to cancel one line on our family account and would like that process completed promptly. On 22 March I used the online cancellation form but did not receive a confirmation number, and the line remains active with a further payment due on 1 April for GBP 27.50. As the account holder and parent, I require the line to be ended and any future billing for that line stopped; please confirm cancellation and provide a refund for the pro rata amount already charged for April. I expect written confirmation of cancellation and the date it will take effect.

CORRECT TEXT: I have been a customer since 2008 (account 4532-789-001) and am requesting immediate cancellation of my broadband and mobile bundle. I first raised this on 10 March via live chat, then phoned on 17 March and again on 24 March; I spoke with Emma R. and Raj K. who both said the cancellation would be processed and I would receive a confirmation. As of today I have had no written confirmation, no final bill, and no cancellation reference despite four contacts over three weeks. Please confirm the service end date, any final sums due, and issue a written cancellation reference within five working days. If you cannot complete the cancellation, explain the reason and provide an escalation contact so this can be closed promptly.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly details multiple prior failed attempts over an extended period ('four contacts over three weeks') and includes a conditional demand for an 'escalation contact' with a specific deadline ('within five working days'). The Error Text, in contrast, mentions only a single failed attempt and an upcoming financial deadline, but lacks the explicit history of repeated failures or an escalation path.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is failing to adequately weigh the cumulative impact of a single, clear financial deadline and strong 'require' language (Error Text) as a 'Medium' urgency signal, instead prioritizing the combined signals of multiple prior failed interactions, an explicit deadline for resolution, and a stated intent to escalate (Correct Text).

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where a single, clear financial deadline or a strong demand for prompt action, even without a history of multiple failed attempts or an explicit escalation clause, should still be classified as 'Medium' urgency.

Pair #11 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: My name is Dorothy Kemp and I am writing because my direct debit was taken for another year of the package I explicitly told your adviser in February I did not want to renew. I do not understand how this happens. I first rang on 2 February to ask about canceling; I spoke to Sophie and she said she would note my account. On 15 February I called again after noticing an email I did not understand; Mark told me everything was fine. On 1 March I saw a new charge of GBP 28.99 on my bank statement and I phoned straight away - I spoke to Lucy who told me the system shows an automatic renewal and referred me to your app. I do not use the app. I am 78 and not confident with smartphones or online forms; I told every person that and yet my card was debited without my permission. I am upset and exhausted by having to explain myself repeatedly over several weeks. I want the renewal reversed and a clear note on my account that I want no further renewals. Please do not ask me to use the app; arrange the correction by phone or post. If you need to call, please call during weekday mornings when my hearing aid is switched on - I find evening automated systems impossible. Thank you.

CORRECT TEXT: I didn't expect to have to explain this twice, but here we are. I'm registered disabled and I rely on predictable billing because managing appointments and medication is already a juggling act; I noticed an automatic renewal on 15/03/2026 for a subscription I did not agree to - the "Entertainment Pack" at GBP 8.99 - and it drained my account. I called on 16/03/2026 and spoke with Aisha, who said she'd cancel and refund it; nothing has been refunded and the service is active even though I never opted in. The first time I raised it I was told it was a technical glitch; I accepted that explanation but the lack of follow-through is upsetting. I'm asking now, calmly but firmly: cancel the subscription, refund the GBP 8.99 to the card ending 4321, and make sure my account is marked as not to auto-enrol into any bundles. I can wait for a proper resolution, but please don't make me chase this again - I have limited energy and need this sorted without another long phone call.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly de-escalates urgency with the phrase 'I can wait for a proper resolution,' despite containing strong indicators of personal impact like 'drained my account' and 'registered disabled.' The error text, conversely, lacks any such de-escalation and instead emphasizes prolonged frustration, repeated failures over 'several weeks,' and vulnerability ('I am 78 and not confident with smartphones'), which the model appears to have interpreted as escalating urgency.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on cumulative negative sentiment, repeated attempts at resolution, and customer vulnerability (age, tech literacy) as indicators of 'Medium' urgency, even when the immediate critical impact is low. It fails to adequately prioritize explicit statements of patience or de-escalation when present, leading to misclassification when such explicit cues are absent and other 'frustration' cues are strong.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where customers express significant frustration, repeated issues, or vulnerability but explicitly state they can wait for a resolution, to teach the model to prioritize explicit de-escalation over cumulative negative sentiment.

Pair #12 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: So you cancelled my line on 2 March 2026, which is helpful, because I expressly asked for the family plan to be pared back. Your website even sent me a cancellation confirmation reference: CF-83912. Imagine my surprise to see the direct debit taken on 25 March for GBP 42.50 for the very line I asked to remove. I appreciate systems can be slow; I also appreciate that charging for a service that was confirmed as cancelled is not best practice. Please reverse the payment and confirm the refund date, and while you are at it update the account so the rest of the family plan is charged correctly. I am a parent juggling school runs and work; handling billing errors offers me no pleasure, only inconvenience. I expect a correction on the next statement and a brief note explaining what went wrong.

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

CORRECT TEXT: Cancelled on 02/03/2026. Still charged on 20/03/2026 bill. Called 4 times over the last three weeks. Spoke to Daniel on 11/03 and to two different agents on 16/03 and 18/03 - all said refund would be processed. No refund. Stop billing me. Refund the amount taken on 20/03 and confirm cancellation in writing within five days.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly details multiple prior failed attempts to resolve the issue ('Called 4 times over the last three weeks... No refund'), which is a strong indicator of escalating urgency. The Error Text, while describing a significant billing error and expressing inconvenience, does not mention any prior attempts at resolution, presenting it as a first-time complaint.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to heavily prioritize explicit mentions of repeated, unresolved contact as the primary trigger for 'Medium' urgency. It fails to adequately weigh other cues like the directness of demands for a significant billing error or the expressed personal inconvenience when the explicit history of failed resolution attempts is absent.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more 'Medium' urgency examples that involve significant, clear-cut billing errors and direct demands for resolution, but without explicit mentions of prior failed contact, to teach the model to infer medium urgency from the nature of the problem and the customer's immediate demands.

Pair #13 | True: LOW -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I reported a faulty handset on 5 March after my replacement phone started randomly losing network and dropping calls mid-transaction. I spoke to Hannah on your support line who logged the fault and promised a courier replacement within 48 hours. It is now 22 March and nothing has arrived, the phone continues to cut out every day and I am losing business opportunities. I have made one previous attempt to resolve this and was given the runaround; I am not prepared to accept another vague promise. I need either a working handset dispatched by recorded delivery today, or a credit for the days I have been without reliable service. I run a small trade business and rely on a functioning phone to take orders. Please stop delaying and do what was agreed with Hannah on 5 March.

CORRECT TEXT: Hello - I'm Mrs Joan Fletcher and I'm ringing about the handset you sent me (Model: A12, IMEI 352938102938475). I raised this once already on 12 March with a lady called Helen and was told someone would ring back; it's now 26 March and nobody has replied. The phone loses charge very quickly, the screen goes black for minutes at a time and I can't answer calls properly. I'm not clever with tech - I followed the simple steps on the leaflet and even charged it overnight, but the problems remain. I don't want to be on repeat calls forever; can someone please either sort a replacement or give clear, plain instructions I can follow? I can wait a few days, but it's getting tiresome having to ask twice.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text contains explicit, time-sensitive demands for immediate resolution ('dispatched by recorded delivery today') and direct statements of significant business impact ('losing business opportunities', 'rely on a functioning phone to take orders'), which are absent in the Correct Text. Conversely, the Correct Text explicitly states a willingness to wait ('I can wait a few days'), which is a strong counter-urgency cue.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism over-prioritizes explicit temporal demands ('today') and direct statements of financial/business impact as definitive 'High' urgency signals, failing to correctly weigh these against the underlying 'Low' urgency of a chronic customer service issue that, while frustrating, does not represent an immediate critical threat.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where customers express strong frustration, demand immediate action, or state business impact, but the overall context still warrants a 'Low' urgency label due to the nature of the problem or an explicit statement of patience.

Final Contrastive Error Analysis Report

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

Pair #14 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I am attempting to cancel my broadband and mobile bundle because I can no longer afford the monthly payments as a student living on a tight budget. I started the cancellation process via your app on 14/03/2026 and was repeatedly blocked by an error message that simply returns to the homepage. I then tried the online chat on 15/03/2026 where the agent advised me to call the cancellations line; the agent said there would be no early termination charge if I provided evidence of financial hardship, but when I called on 16/03/2026 the automated options routed me into a lengthy queue and I had to leave for a lecture after a 40-minute wait. The app also shows a pending bill of GBP 42.30 for 01/04/2026 which I cannot afford if I am still tied into a monthly charge. I am asking you to cancel my service, confirm whether any termination fee applies, and if a fee is charged to consider a reduction or waiver given my student circumstances. Please respond with the straightforward steps I need to follow to confirm cancellation without additional financial burden and a firm date by which the account will be closed and final charges processed.

CORRECT TEXT: After twelve years with your company I attempted to cancel one of my services and the process has been needlessly obstructive. I called on 20 March to terminate the line associated with my old home broadband service; the advisor (Sonia) confirmed cancellation and gave me reference CXL-2048, promising the direct debit would be stopped immediately. I was then charged on 23 March and, on calling back on 24 March, Mark in Customer Care insisted the service was still active and that no cancellation had been recorded. I was told a supervisor would call back; no call has been received.

This is an unacceptable handling of a straightforward request from a long-term customer. I have been given contradictory information twice and charged for a service I requested to end. I want immediate confirmation that the cancellation is processed, an immediate refund of the latest payment, and a written apology. If you cannot resolve this to my satisfaction please escalate to a manager and advise how to proceed with an Ombudsman referral. I expect a response within seven days.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly states an inability to afford an upcoming, dated financial obligation ('pending bill of GBP 42.30 for 01/04/2026 which I cannot afford'), directly linking financial hardship to an imminent future event. The correct text, while mentioning an incorrect past charge and demanding an immediate refund, does not articulate an inability to afford a specific, future payment.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be overly sensitive to explicit mentions of an inability to afford an upcoming financial burden, interpreting this as a higher urgency signal ('Medium') even when the overall context of the request (e.g., resolving a cancellation process) aligns with 'Low' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more 'Low' urgency examples that include explicit statements of financial hardship and references to upcoming bills or payments that the customer cannot afford, ensuring the model learns to differentiate between a process-related financial concern and an immediate financial crisis.

Pair #15 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I raised the early termination fee issue once already on 12 March with a representative named Ben, and since apparently the terms of my contract are more accommodating to sudden life changes than the customer service notes suggest, here I am again. My doctor has confirmed a change in my mobility (documents submitted on 15 March) and I am moving to a residence that your coverage cannot reach. The agent on 12/03 told me the fee would be reviewed; I was then presented with a charge of GBP 425.00 on my account on 18 March.

I am asking, for the second time, that you waive this fee on compassionate and practical grounds. I would prefer not to escalate, but I cannot reasonably be expected to pay this sum when the service is no longer usable for me. Please confirm a waiver or offer a reasonable settlement within seven days.

CORRECT TEXT: How considerate of you to charge a termination fee that was never mentioned when I asked about switching plans. I left your service on 10 March after being told by a sales agent that there would be no early termination penalty; instead I have been billed GBP 240 on my final statement dated 31 March. I raised this with your team on 1 April (advisor Nina, ticket 99421) and was told someone would call back. No call has been received and the charge still stands.

If your records show a different promise than the one I received, please show me the signed agreement or the precise clause that permits a GBP 240 fee. Otherwise I expect the fee removed and a corrected final bill issued. I would prefer not to pursue external dispute processes, so please reply with a clear resolution within seven days.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text couples the desire 'not to escalate' with an explicit statement of personal financial hardship and the unreasonableness of the charge ('cannot reasonably be expected to pay this sum when the service is no longer usable for me'), whereas the correct text's mention of avoiding 'external dispute processes' is not accompanied by such a strong, personal justification.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model appears to over-index on explicit declarations of personal inability to comply or strong statements of injustice/unreasonableness, interpreting these as higher urgency cues, even when the overall context (like a seven-day resolution window) suggests a 'Medium' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where strong personal statements of hardship or unreasonableness are present but the overall urgency remains 'Medium' due to the presence of a clear resolution path and a reasonable deadline.

Pair #16 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: Account number 455-781-992: I am disputing recurring overcharges that have been billed since 1 February. The monthly plan on my contract is GBP 39.50 but invoices for February, March and April show GBP 56.42, GBP 56.42 and GBP 76.42 respectively. I have contacted you on 2 February, 9 February, 23 February and most recently 18 March - five separate contacts - yet the charges persist. Under the Consumer Rights Act 2015 and the terms of my contract, I request an immediate correction of the account, a full refund of the overcharged amounts (GBP 49.76 total), a written itemised bill for the disputed period and confirmation of any remedial adjustments to my tariff. I also require an explanation of why automated billing failed to reflect my agreed plan and what measures you will take to prevent recurrence. If I do not receive a substantive written response within 14 days I will consider escalation to the Ombudsman Services and seek interest on the refunded sums.

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing as I do not understand why my bill for March 2026 shows an extra charge of GBP 31.99. I am on the standard plan and expected to pay GBP 35.99 this month; instead the total is GBP 67.98 with a line item for device insurance (GBP 12.99) and a premium channel charge (GBP 19.00) I did not ask for. I do not use the app easily and I am not confident changing settings myself, so this is my first time contacting you about billing. Please remove the two items added in error, refund the GBP 31.99 difference to my account, and send me a plain English explanation of what happened and how you will prevent it occurring again. I would appreciate a phone call to confirm between 10:00 and 12:00 if that is possible.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text includes an explicit, time-bound threat of external escalation to a regulatory body ('within 14 days I will consider escalation to the Ombudsman Services') and highlights a history of failed internal resolution attempts ('five separate contacts - yet the charges persist'). The correct text, while requesting resolution, contains no such explicit threats of escalation or mention of prior unresolved attempts.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model is over-sensitive to explicit, time-bound threats of external escalation and indicators of persistent, unresolved issues, classifying them as 'High' urgency even when the overall context (a billing dispute with a future escalation deadline) suggests a 'Medium' urgency. It fails to recognize that a threat of future escalation, especially with a 14-day window, often falls within 'Medium' urgency rather than immediate 'High' crisis.

3. Actionable Fix:

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

Add more training examples of 'Medium' urgency where customers explicitly state an intention to escalate to external bodies or mention a history of unresolved issues, but with a clear future deadline, to teach the model to differentiate between immediate crisis and a serious but not yet critical complaint.

Pair #17 | True: LOW -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I am contacting you as the account holder for a family plan (three lines) to report a faulty handset and to request a prompt remedy. The handset in question is listed on the account as my daughter's device, a Huawei P30 with IMEI ending 4827, purchased through your online store on 11 February 2025. Since 9 March 2026 the device has exhibited persistent problems: the screen intermittently fails to register touch input, applications freeze, and the phone sometimes reboots without warning. These faults make it difficult for my daughter to use school apps and to receive messages from the family group, although there is no immediate safety issue.

This is the first time I have raised this matter with you. Please confirm whether this device is covered under the 24-month manufacturer or retailer warranty, and advise whether you will provide a repair, a replacement handset, or a temporary loan device while any repairs are undertaken. I would appreciate written confirmation of the next steps and an estimated timeframe for resolution. You can reach me on the account mobile 07xxx xxxxxx or by email at myaddress@example.com. Thank you for attending to this matter; I would prefer a clear schedule for repair rather than open-ended delays.

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing to report a recurring fault with the handset provided when I switched to your service on 04/03/2026. The device (Samsung A53, IMEI ending 1123) exhibits persistent issues: the microphone intermittently cuts out during calls, the screen flickers on wake, and the battery drains from 80% to 25% within three hours of light use. I reported these faults to customer support on 05/03/2026 (call handled by Raj Patel, incident reference REF987654) and was advised to perform a factory reset. I completed the reset as instructed but the defects remain. This is my second formal contact about the handset; the previous troubleshooting has not resolved the matter. Given the symptoms and prior diagnostics, I request either a replacement device or a written specification of the next technical steps you will take, together with a timescale for resolution. Please escalate to your device support team and respond with a clear remedy within ten working days.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text emphasizes the direct, personal, and significant functional impact of the fault ('difficult for my daughter to use school apps') and expresses a strong desire for immediate resolution ('prompt remedy', 'rather than open-ended delays'), despite explicitly stating 'no immediate safety issue'. In contrast, the correct text, while containing stronger procedural urgency cues (e.g., 'second formal contact', 'escalate', 'within ten working days'), describes functional issues without the same level of explicit personal impact or implied impatience regarding the speed of resolution.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be over-indexing on the qualitative description of significant personal disruption and implied impatience, interpreting these as indicators of 'High' urgency, even when explicit counter-cues (like 'no immediate safety issue') are present. It seems to struggle with balancing the severity of described impact against explicit negations of immediate danger or the procedural nature of urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where significant personal inconvenience or strong desires for promptness are present, but the overall urgency remains 'Low' due to the absence of immediate safety threats or critical system failures.

Pair #18 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: Cancelled my line on 14/03/2026 but your bill still charged GBP 27.99 on 28/03. I called once on 30/03 and spoke to Tom who said it would be sorted but I have had nothing back. I am elderly and this is confusing and stressful. Refund the GBP 27.99 and confirm cancellation immediately. A simple clear reply, please.

CORRECT TEXT: Cancelled on 02/03/2026. Still charged on 20/03/2026 bill. Called 4 times over the last three weeks. Spoke to Daniel on 11/03 and to two different agents on 16/03 and 18/03 - all said refund would be processed. No refund. Stop billing me. Refund the amount taken on 20/03 and confirm cancellation in writing within five days.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states a history of multiple, failed attempts at resolution ('Called 4 times over the last three weeks,' listing specific dates and agents), while the error text only mentions a single follow-up call ('I called once').

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is failing to adequately capture and weigh the cumulative impact of repeated, unresolved issues and the customer's persistent efforts to resolve them as a strong indicator of 'Medium' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where the 'Medium' urgency is primarily conveyed through a clear history of multiple, unsuccessful attempts to resolve an issue, rather than solely relying on single-instance urgency cues or emotional appeals.

Pair #19 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I have been a customer since 2010 (account 00457219) and am escalating this matter because your frontline teams have failed to resolve a complaint after multiple attempts. The original issue - repeated incorrect billing and failure to apply the loyalty discount promised when I renewed in January 2026 - was raised with Tom Harris on 2026-02-10 and again with Priya on 2026-02-18. I submitted a formal complaint by email on 2026-02-25 and received an acknowledgement; complaints reference CMP-9981 was opened on 2026-03-05 with a 10-day resolution target that has lapsed.

Since then I have had three further callbacks where I was given inconsistent information, promised a manager callback that never arrived, and provided with different compensation figures. I am no longer willing to be passed between teams. As a long-standing customer I expect your complaints procedure to be handled competently and within the published timeframes. I now require escalation to a senior complaints manager and a written response setting out: (a) why the loyalty discount was not applied; (b) a corrected account statement; and (c) the compensation you will pay for the service and handling failures. If I do not receive a satisfactory response within seven days I will refer this matter to the Ombudsman and consider terminating my services and seeking redress for breach of contract.

CORRECT TEXT: I am the registered account holder for the family plan (mobile numbers 07745 992104 and 07745 992105). On 20 March 2026 I discovered that the billing contact details associated with my children's SIMs had been altered without authority; a different email and a partial address were added. I have not authorised any change. This constitutes an unauthorised account modification and a potential data handling failure under the Data Protection Act. Your apparent inability to prevent or detect this is a serious compliance concern and places my children at risk of SIM fraud and loss of service for emergency calls. I require immediate reinstatement of the correct contact details, a full audit log of who made the change and when, and written confirmation of the corrective steps you will take to secure the account within 24 hours. If you fail to remedy this promptly I will notify the Information Commissioner's Office and Ofcom and seek redress through the courts and the Ombudsman. Please treat this as an urgent protection-of-children matter.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly states an immediate, critical risk to personal safety ('places my children at risk of SIM fraud and loss of service for emergency calls') and demands action within a 24-hour timeframe, reinforced by a direct 'urgent protection-of-children matter' statement. The Error Text, while detailing a severe service failure and a 7-day ultimatum for external escalation, lacks this immediate, explicit safety threat and the very short, explicit deadline for resolution.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to prioritize explicit, immediate threats to personal safety/security and very short, explicit deadlines (e.g., 24 hours) over the cumulative urgency of a prolonged, unresolved issue, even when it culminates in a clear, but slightly longer-term (e.g., 7-day) threat of external regulatory escalation.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where high urgency is conveyed through a history of severe service failures and a clear, but not immediate (e.g., 3-7 day deadline), threat of external regulatory or legal action, even without an explicit, immediate physical safety risk.

Pair #20 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I joined on 3 February on your 'Fibre 80' tariff and have repeatedly measured downstream speeds of 8-12 Mbps during off-peak and peak times (tests on 9 March and 18 March using speedtest.net). I raised this with your agent (reference 20260309-AL) on 10 March and was told it would be investigated; nothing has been resolved. Under the Consumer Rights Act and Ofcom labeling guidance I expect the service to meet the advertised reasonable performance. If you cannot supply a stable speed commensurate with the tariff within 14 days I will require either a proportionate price reduction, a technical remediation plan with milestones, or a contract termination without penalty. Please confirm the steps you will take and provide the technical evidence you will rely on for assessment. I expect an acknowledgement within 48 hours and a substantive response within 10 working days.

CORRECT TEXT: I am a disabled customer (mobility impairment) and I am writing to raise a formal concern about persistent low broadband throughput at my address. On 20 March 2026 I conducted three speed tests using the OFCOM-recommended methodology: average download 2.1 Mbps, upload 0.4 Mbps, latency 120 ms. My contract (Home Essential Fibre, clause 4.2) advertises a minimum expected download speed of 15 Mbps at my property. This is a first notification: I have not previously reported the matter but I expect you to investigate promptly and to comply with your obligations under the Consumer Rights Act 2015 and your own Service Charter. As someone who occasionally needs video consultations and online prescriptions, reliable connectivity is important; while this is not an emergency, it is causing repeated inconvenience. Please confirm receipt, provide a diagnostic timeline, and state what remedial steps you will take, including whether a speed uplift or alternative provision will be offered. I would prefer written confirmation of any appointment windows and clear accessibility support if an engineer visit is required.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly states a history of unresolved issues ('nothing has been resolved') and includes a clear ultimatum with a 14-day deadline and specific consequences (e.g., 'contract termination'), along with demanding short response times (48 hours, 10 working days). In contrast, the correct text explicitly states it is a 'first notification' and directly clarifies that 'this is not an emergency, it is causing repeated inconvenience,' thereby downplaying urgency.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on cues related to prior unresolved complaints, specific time-bound demands, and threats of action as indicators of higher urgency, failing to adequately weigh explicit statements that signal a first contact or directly negate emergency status.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where a history of unresolved issues or specific demands are present but the overall urgency is explicitly stated as low, or where explicit 'not an emergency' phrases override other potentially urgent cues.

Pair #21 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I have been a customer for over fourteen years and I am fed up with my handset continually failing. The device supplied by you under my current line stopped holding a charge and the microphone cuts out during calls. This began around 1 March and I logged faults on 5 March, 12 March, and again on 20 March (tickets 90543, 91210, 91987). Each time I spoke with different agents - Naomi first advised a factory reset, Lee later promised a loan phone and then that promise was not fulfilled. The phone now switches off mid-conversation and yesterday I lost an important work call because the other party couldn't hear me. I need either a replacement device of the same specification or a full refund for the handset, plus compensation for the lost work day. I have tried your basic troubleshooting repeatedly; the problem is hardware-related and has not been fixed despite multiple contacts over the last three weeks. Please resolve this without further delay.

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

CORRECT TEXT: I am contacting you regarding the replacement handset provided under my contract which has developed repeated faults and is causing a practical problem for me. I am registered as having limited mobility and rely on my phone for scheduled healthcare calls; since 4 January 2026 the handset intermittently fails to power on, misses incoming calls and sometimes reboots during conversations. I have raised this matter by telephone on 11 January, 25 January and again on 8 February, speaking to advisers Helen J. and Omar B., and each time I was told a replacement would be sent but nothing arrived. For clarity: ticket reference 41092 was opened on 11 January and remains unresolved. As a vulnerable customer I request a priority replacement device or a full refund for the handset within ten working days, together with confirmation that any essential numbers for healthcare contacts will be retained and forwarded if necessary. I would appreciate a formal written update and an accessible point of contact for follow-up.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text includes explicit, recent, and financially impactful consequences ('yesterday I lost an important work call', 'compensation for the lost work day') combined with a direct, immediate call to action ('Please resolve this without further delay'). The correct text, while detailing a critical reliance (healthcare calls) and vulnerability, frames the issues as intermittent and sets a resolution timeframe ('within ten working days') rather than demanding immediate, crisis-level intervention.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model appears to be over-indexing on the recency, specificity, and direct financial/professional impact of a single recent event, and the strong, immediate call to action, interpreting these as 'High' urgency cues, without sufficiently considering the broader context of ongoing, frustrating, but not immediately catastrophic, service failure.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where recent, specific negative impacts and strong calls for immediate resolution are present, but the overall context still indicates 'Medium' urgency due to the nature of the problem or the requested resolution timeframe.

Pair #22 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I switched over from my previous provider on 1 April and the package was meant to be active from that day. The router shows no sync and I was told by Tom in sales that an engineer named Mark would call to arrange an installation. Today is 6 April and nobody has called - the online tracker still says 'engineer scheduled' with no date. I work from home and cannot do my job without the line. This is the first time I'm reporting it but I need a proper update now: confirm whether an engineer will attend today or tomorrow and give me a time window. If you can't, escalate to someone who can. I chose your company for reliability; at the moment I'm left without the basics.

CORRECT TEXT: Hello - I'm a student and I've got no broadband at my flat since 03 March, so I'm writing about it for the first time. I need to be online for a coursework submission next week and I can't rely on my phone's tethering for hours of research. I haven't spoken to your support team yet; this is the initial notification. Please can you book an engineer visit that fits within the next 24 hours or provide a temporary 4G hotspot at no charge until the line is fixed. A quick confirmation by email or text would be appreciated so I can plan my study schedule.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly states a critical, impending external deadline ('coursework submission next week') directly linked to the need for service, coupled with an explicit demand for resolution or a temporary workaround within a precise 24-hour window. The Error Text, while detailing significant ongoing professional impact ('cannot do my job') and requesting an update 'now' with an escalation, frames the resolution timeframe as 'today or tomorrow', which is slightly less precise than the 24-hour window.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be less effective at weighing the cumulative impact of an ongoing critical service disruption (e.g., 6 days without work) and direct escalation requests as highly urgent, compared to a single, explicit, and imminent external deadline with a precise 24-hour resolution demand. It seems to over-index on the specificity of the deadline and the exactness of the requested action timeframe.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where the urgency is conveyed through the cumulative impact of an ongoing critical service failure and explicit demands for immediate escalation, even if a specific external deadline isn't mentioned or the requested resolution window is slightly broader than 24 hours.

ERROR TEXT: I am writing because I'm elderly, not tech-literate, and utterly bewildered by the bill and the termination charge you've put against my account. Back in January I moved into sheltered accommodation and needed to cancel the line - I was told over the phone on 02/02 by Sarah that there would be a small admin fee and that someone would call back. Then on 09/02 Tom told me the charge would be waived because of my situation, and on 17/02 a different advisor said there was nothing showing in the notes and I'd have to pay GBP 220 to leave the contract early. I've rung four times in the last three weeks (02/02, 09/02, 17/02 and 25/02) and every person gives me a different story. I cannot manage apps or websites to sort this myself and I'm getting bills for a service I can no longer use. Please cancel the contract with the reasonable waiver I was promised on 09/02, or explain clearly who will come to help me in person - but do not put me through another runaround.

CORRECT TEXT: I'm a student, living on a tight budget, and I don't have tens of pounds lying around for fees I believe you're wrongly charging me. I signed up for Student Fibre 100 in September 2025 while in rented university accommodation. On 1 March I notified you that I'm moving to a different city for a placement and asked about ending the contract early. Since then I've phoned four times (1 March, 8 March, 15 March and 22 March) and each time I've been given a different answer: first that I owe an early termination fee of GBP 180, then that it might be pro-rated, then finally that "it depends on line checks". This back-and-forth is exhausting and costing me money I don't have - my monthly bill is only GBP 20 and a GBP 180 demand is nearly three months' rent for me. Evidence: my tenancy end date is 30 April (I sent the lease to support@example email on 8 March). I need a clear and final statement of charges or confirmation that I can cancel without the GBP 180 fee, and I need it within five working days. If this keeps dragging on I'll have to get advice from Citizens Advice because I can't afford to wait while you shuffle me around.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly states a deadline for resolution ('within five working days') and a clear threat of external escalation ('get advice from Citizens Advice'). The Error Text, while conveying significant distress and personal vulnerability ('elderly, not tech-literate, utterly bewildered'), lacks these specific, time-bound or action-oriented urgency cues, instead relying on implicit urgency from the customer's situation and emotional state.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model appears to over-index on strong personal vulnerability and emotional distress signals, interpreting them as 'High' urgency, even when explicit deadlines or threats of external action (which are characteristic of 'Medium' urgency) are absent. It struggles to differentiate between high emotional impact and concrete, time-sensitive urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where high personal vulnerability and emotional distress are present, but the urgency is 'Medium' due to the absence of immediate deadlines or explicit threats of external action, to help the model calibrate these signals.

Pair #24 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I am writing because on 14 February 2026 I rang to cancel my landline; the adviser (Sarah) confirmed the cancellation would take effect from 20 February and that my final bill would be pro rata. I am housebound due to limited mobility and cannot easily attend a shop or endure long automated menus, so I relied on that confirmation. Despite this a direct debit of GBP 56.80 was taken on 28 February and a further entry for GBP 32 labelled 'early termination' appears on my account dated 01 March. This is my first contact about the matter; I am asking you to remove the GBP 32 charge and post a closure notice to my registered address so I have a physical record of the account being closed.

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

CORRECT TEXT: I ended my plan online on 2 March 2026 using the cancellation function in your app and received an on-screen confirmation reference 8C-2931. I expected a final statement and closure, but my bank shows a direct debit of GBP 72.50 taken on 9 March 2026 and a subsequent automated email on 10 March that looks like a regular monthly invoice. I have raised this three times by chat and by phone over the past three weeks: I spoke to "Alex" on 11 March who said the charge would be reversed, I opened a live chat on 15 March that produced ticket #TKT-4512, and I phoned again on 20 March and got a different outcome. Each time I have shared the cancellation confirmation screenshot and the transaction reference. At this point I want the erroneous payment refunded and a corrected final bill showing a zero balance. If you need anything from me, I have the confirmation screenshot and the bank transaction reference ready; please confirm within five working days so I can close my records.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text includes a statement of personal vulnerability ('I am housebound due to limited mobility') which is absent in the Correct Text. Conversely, the Correct Text explicitly details multiple prior attempts at resolution ('raised this three times by chat and by phone') and a reasonable deadline ('confirm within five working days'), which are strong 'Medium' urgency indicators, while the Error Text explicitly states 'This is my first contact about the matter'.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model appears to be over-indexing on expressions of personal difficulty or vulnerability as an immediate urgency cue, potentially misinterpreting it as a 'High' urgency signal, while under-weighting explicit statements of 'first contact' and the absence of an immediate, critical threat or deadline.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where personal hardship or vulnerability is mentioned but the overall urgency remains 'Medium' due to the nature of the issue and the lack of prior escalation or immediate threat.

Pair #25 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I'm calling about how long it takes to get through to your support team - I can't keep doing 45-60 minute waits. I tried to call on 15/04/2026 at 10:30am about a lost voicemail and was on hold for 48 minutes before I had to hang up because my hands began to cramp (I have repetitive strain injury). The next day, 16/04 at 9:05am, I waited 35 minutes, listened to the same hold music loop, and again had to disconnect. I use the phone service to manage appointments and prescriptions; being on indefinite hold is not just irritating, it's a barrier to care. I don't use the app because reading small print on screens causes my dizziness to worsen, so telephone access is essential for me. This is my first formal complaint about wait times, but I need a practical alternative - a guaranteed callback slot, priority routing, or a scheduled time when an advisor will ring me back rather than making me hang on for half an hour. I'll accept a single dedicated callback within three working days and an assurance you'll log my account as needing a more accessible contact method. If that's not possible, advise me how to book a phone appointment so I'm not left in limbo again.

CORRECT TEXT: On 18 March I put my toddler in the buggy, dropped Milo at nursery and called to report an unexpectedly high direct debit; I was on hold for 58 minutes and missed the school pick-up because I couldn't hang up. Two days later, 21 March, I queued again for a billing explanation and listened to hold music for 72 minutes only to have the call drop when someone finally answered - the agent, Emma, cut out after five minutes. This is not a single annoyance, it's a pattern: I have tried webchat, email and phone and have yet to get a meaningful resolution. I manage the family plan and the delays are hitting logistics at home; please escalate this to a manager, explain what you will do to reduce these excessive waiting times, and let me have the complaints process and Ombudsman contact so I can decide whether to take this further if it isn't fixed within four working days.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text contains an explicit, time-bound ultimatum for resolution ('if it isn't fixed within four working days') coupled with a threat of external escalation (Ombudsman contact) and concrete, immediate negative consequences (missed school pick-up, hitting logistics). The Error Text, while detailing significant personal impact and a 'barrier to care,' proposes a future-oriented, non-immediate resolution (callback within three working days) and lacks a direct, time-bound demand for urgent action or an explicit escalation threat.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

The model's attention mechanism appears to be heavily weighted towards explicit, time-bound deadlines and threats of external action as primary indicators of 'Medium' urgency. It fails to adequately weigh the cumulative impact of ongoing 'barriers to care' and the user's stated inability to continue with the current situation, especially when the user proposes a non-immediate resolution rather than demanding one with a strict deadline.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where the user expresses significant ongoing disruption and a clear inability to continue with the current service, even if their proposed resolution is not immediate or does not include an explicit, time-bound ultimatum or external threat.

Pair #26 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I switched over from my previous provider on 1 March 2026 and since then I've been billed twice for the same month. My March bill shows two line rents of GBP 28.99, totalling an extra GBP 28.99 I did not expect. I have contacted support three times - on 5 March via web chat, on 9 March by phone, and again on 15 March through the app - and each time I was told it would be corrected, but the duplication still appears in my account. It's causing unnecessary stress while I'm trying to settle other moving costs, and I would like a refund for the duplicate charge and confirmation that it will not affect my credit record. Please correct the billing and send a revised statement today.

CORRECT TEXT: Following up on the issue I raised on 18 March (ticket 788412): my March invoice shows a GBP 97.50 data overage that does not match my usage. My app shows I am on the 50GB plan and the usage graph records around 18GB for the billing period. I submitted screenshots via the app but have had no update. I need this corrected before the direct debit is taken tomorrow as I cannot accept a charge that appears to be incorrect. Please suspend the payment, reverse the disputed charge and confirm the corrected amount in writing within 24 hours. I can provide log files if required; I expect a technical resolution promptly.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states an imminent, unavoidable financial deadline ('before the direct debit is taken tomorrow') and ties the resolution directly to preventing this event, reinforced by a tight timeframe ('within 24 hours'). The error text's deadline ('today') is for a revised statement, and its negative consequences (stress, credit record) are more general and less immediate than an impending financial transaction.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to prioritize explicit, short-term financial deadlines that directly prevent an undesirable transaction over general requests for immediate action or concerns about future financial impact (like credit scores), even when an immediate action is requested ('today').

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where the urgency is driven by a request for immediate action (e.g., 'today') to prevent a non-transactional negative outcome (e.g., stress, credit impact), even if there isn't an explicit, imminent financial transaction deadline.

Pair #27 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: My name is Ernest Finch. This isn't just a technical fault - it's a sequence of small failures that has left me without a reliable phone and confused. I bought a handset through you in December last year (you delivered a model called the ClearCall 7), and for the past month it has been crashing, the touch screen becomes unresponsive and the battery drops from 80% to 5% within hours. I called once before on 18 March and spoke with Alex in technical support; Alex opened ticket F-99823 and said a replacement would be posted out straight away. That replacement never arrived and when my daughter rang to check last week she was told a courier would call - again nothing. I am 78, live alone and am not confident with technology; I need either a working replacement sent by recorded delivery or someone to come and set it up for me at home. I don't want vague promises - please arrange a home visit or a same-day replacement and call me back on the landline by late afternoon with confirmation. This is my second request and it's becoming untenable.

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

CORRECT TEXT: I bought a handset from your online shop at the start of term because I could not afford anything more expensive and I rely on it for coursework, placement coordination and for calling university welfare if needed. On 2 February 2026 the screen began to flicker and on 6 February it failed to boot. I contacted your support on 7 February and then again on 14 February and 1 March; the advisors logged faults (refs F-20260207-98 and F-20260301-14) and arranged two exchanges that never arrived. I waited three days for a courier both times. On 12 March I spoke to Hannah in technical support who told me a local depot had the replacement but it would not be dispatched until I confirmed my address; I confirmed it immediately and received no further update.

Narratively, the effect has been cumulative: without reliable phone access I missed a supervisor's urgent message about a placement change on 9 March and could not submit a lab report on time because the only device I possess is the faulty handset. I have limited funds and cannot buy another phone to bridge this gap. I need either an immediate working replacement handset dispatched by next-business-day courier or a temporary loan phone so I can meet my academic obligations and contact support services as required. I will await written confirmation of dispatch within 24 hours; otherwise I will have to pursue other consumer remedies.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly details concrete, time-sensitive negative consequences that have already occurred due to the phone's failure (e.g., 'missed a supervisor's urgent message,' 'could not submit a lab report on time') and concludes with a direct, short-term ultimatum ('within 24 hours; otherwise I will have to pursue other consumer remedies'). The error text, while conveying distress and vulnerability, uses more general terms for impact ('left me without a reliable phone and confused,' 'becoming untenable') and its request for timely action ('call me back... by late afternoon') lacks the explicit, high-stakes threat of external escalation found in the correct text.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be less effective at identifying high urgency when it is conveyed through general statements of hardship, vulnerability, or repeated requests for timely action, and instead prioritizes explicit mentions of already incurred, time-critical negative impacts and direct, short-term ultimatums with stated escalation paths.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where high urgency is indicated by specific, irreversible, and time-bound negative consequences that have already occurred, or by clear, short deadlines coupled with explicit threats of external action if not met.

ERROR TEXT: Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing calmly but with urgency about the impact of your 3G switch-off on equipment that I depend on for health reasons. I use a medical alert pendant that connects via 3G and provides a lifeline should I fall; it stopped working after 14/03/2026. I attempted to resolve this by telephone on 15/03/2026 (spoke briefly to Nathan who logged a case), then again on 17/03/2026 (spoke with Priya in technical who advised a replacement SIM but could not confirm postage date). I have also completed the online complaints form and visited my local store; none of these actions has restored dependable service.

I am not comfortable with complex handset changes and need an immediate, practical remedy. Please escalate this matter to a manager or the Ombudsman and provide either an alternative connection that supports my pendant or a loan device until a permanent solution is in place. I would appreciate a named contact and a clear schedule for delivery within three working days, as this is a safety issue for me.

Thank you for your prompt attention.

Kind regards,

Margaret Lane
Account number ending 990
CORRECT TEXT: I joined your network in 2007 and have paid my bills on time ever since. The decision to switch off 3G in my area on 08 March has rendered my handset effectively unusable for mobile data and for several of my essential apps. I have spent three weeks attempting to resolve this through the normal channels: web chat on 11 March with Rakesh, a phone call on 13 March with Priya, and an email on 17 March. Each time I was given promises of a call back or a 'provisioning ticket', none of which resulted in a substantive solution. I am now formally requesting escalation. I need either a 4G/5G-capable replacement SIM and a temporary handset loan while you arrange a compatible device, or an immediate transfer to a tariff that covers a handset upgrade at no extra cost, together with reimbursement for measurable losses since 08 March. I am exhausted by being passed between advisors and cannot rely on standard queues any longer. Please supply the name and contact details of the manager assigned to my complaint and confirm the timescale for resolution within three working days, or I will refer this matter to the Telecommunications Ombudsman.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly states a direct, immediate threat to personal safety ('lifeline should I fall', 'safety issue for me') linked to a medical device failure, whereas the correct text describes significant inconvenience, financial loss, and a threat of formal complaint, but not immediate physical danger.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-prioritizing explicit mentions of 'safety issue' or 'lifeline' as direct indicators of 'High' urgency, failing to contextualize these phrases within the broader request for a 3-day resolution and standard escalation process, which typically align with 'Medium' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where explicit mentions of 'safety' or 'lifeline' are present but the overall urgency is still considered 'Medium' due to the nature of the requested resolution or the timeline.

Pair #29 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: My business depends on having reliable phone and broadband. I cancelled my Business Plus 100 bundle on 02/03/2026 because I was switching premises and arranged porting with a new provider. I spoke with Harriet in Sales on 02/03 and was given cancellation reference CXL-78421; she confirmed that my direct debit would be stopped and final billing calculated pro rata. Despite that, you have taken a full month's payment of GBP 145 on 01/04/2026 (see transaction reference DD-998244 on my bank statement) and issued invoice INV-202604 for GBP 145.00. This charge is incorrect and is currently tying up funds I need for wage payments and supplier invoices. I have paperwork proving the cancellation and the porting date, and I have not used the service since 15/03/2026. Please reverse the GBP 145 immediately, confirm that no further payments will be taken, and provide written confirmation that my account has been closed with no penalties. If this is not resolved within five working days I will have to escalate through my accountant and consider formal action - I can't afford ongoing uncertainty when my business relies on cashflow.
CORRECT TEXT: I cancelled my line and broadband package on 3 March 2026. I spoke to Claire in customer services at 10:42 that morning and she gave me a cancellation reference (she said she would also email confirmation). During that call I was explicit: no further billing, and my router would be returned via the pre-paid label she promised to send. I have now received my bank statement and there is a debit of GBP 46.50 taken on 20 March 2026 for a 'monthly subscription' after the cancellation date. I have been careful with dates and notes because I do not trust on-line forms; I wrote down the cancellation reference Claire provided but I do not use email reliably. I do not expect to be billed for services I explicitly cancelled. I need the erroneous charge reversed and confirmation in writing that my account is closed with no further liabilities. Please also confirm the return instructions for the router in a way I can manage without internet access - either a paper label posted to my address or a clear telephone contact. I would prefer to resolve this amicably but I need the refund within seven calendar days or I will pursue the matter through the appropriate consumer channels.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly links the financial issue to immediate business operational impact, stating funds are 'tying up funds I need for wage payments and supplier invoices' and 'I can't afford ongoing uncertainty when my business relies on cashflow,' culminating in a threat to 'consider formal action' within five working days. The correct text, while also threatening escalation within seven calendar days, uses less severe financial language and a more general 'pursue the matter through the appropriate consumer channels' threat.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on the combination of direct, immediate business financial distress and the specific phrase 'formal action' as definitive indicators of 'High' urgency, failing to recognize that such strong language can still fall within the 'Medium' urgency band depending on the overall context and scale of the issue.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where explicit threats of 'formal action' or direct links to business cashflow/wage payments, especially for a single incorrect charge, are labeled as 'Medium' urgency to refine the decision boundary between strong 'Medium' and 'High' urgency.

Pair #30 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I'm a full-time student on a very tight budget and I'm appalled at the unexplained charges on my March bill. On 04/03/2026 I noticed a GBP 24.99 "installation/admin" fee on top of my usual GBP 12 student plan. I have no installation to request - I've had the same SIM for two years. I phoned three different times: first with Hannah on 05/03 (she said she'd investigate and email me a breakdown), then with James, a supervisor, on 10/03 (who promised a refund if the charge couldn't be justified), and finally I sent an email to customerrelations@ on 15/03 after receiving nothing. Each time I've been given conflicting information and no itemised bill. Account number 78-442-129. I have exhausted normal channels and need this escalated to a manager immediately. If you cannot produce a clear explanation and full refund of the GBP 24.99 within seven days I will take the matter to the Ombudsman and submit a formal complaint with supporting call transcripts and my bank statements. Please refund the charge, provide an itemised invoice for March, and confirm what steps you're taking to stop these surprise fees happening to students on fixed incomes.

CORRECT TEXT: My name is Margaret Hargreaves and I am writing because I cannot make sense of the bill I received on 3 March 2026. I am not comfortable with computers and rely entirely on paper statements. On that bill there is a charge of GBP 37.50 described as "service admin" and another of GBP 12.99 for "equipment protection" which I never agreed to. I took out a simple phone and broadband package in January 2025 and was told there would only be the monthly subscription and a line rental. There was no clear explanation of these extra amounts when the salesman set up the account over the phone. I phoned your automated line and a recorded message directed me to the online account, which I cannot use. I then rang the number given on my paperwork on 10 March 2026 and was on hold for half an hour before the call was dropped. This is my first time raising the matter formally because I did not know where else to turn. Please explain precisely what these charges are, supply a breakdown in plain English by post, and remove any fees that were not explicitly agreed. I am puzzled and upset to see my limited pension being reduced by charges I do not understand. I need someone to write to me at my home address with a clear explanation and a corrected bill within seven days, otherwise I will have no choice but to seek advice from my local Citizens Advice office.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text explicitly details multiple, increasingly senior internal escalation attempts (speaking to a 'supervisor', emailing 'customerrelations@') and directly states 'I have exhausted normal channels and need this escalated to a manager immediately.' In contrast, the Correct Text describes failed initial attempts (automated line, dropped call) and explicitly states 'This is my first time raising the matter formally,' which might be interpreted as a lower level of prior internal engagement.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model is failing to correctly interpret the cumulative weight and explicit detailing of multiple, higher-level internal resolution attempts as a strong indicator of medium urgency, potentially over-indexing on the absence of a 'first formal complaint' phrase or under-weighting the depth of prior internal engagement.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where detailed accounts of failed internal escalation attempts, including contact with supervisors or specific departments, are present and explicitly linked to medium urgency, regardless of whether the text states it's the 'first formal complaint'.

ERROR TEXT: I'm a student on a fairly tight budget and bought a handset through your upgrade offer on 4 March 2026. Since about 20 March the touchscreen has become intermittently unresponsive and the battery dies after a couple of hours, which makes it difficult to keep up with coursework and part-time shifts. This is the first time I'm raising it with you - I haven't called previously - so I'm just asking whether you can offer a repair, a replacement handset, or a loan phone while this is dealt with. I can't afford an out-of-pocket repair fee right now, so a straightforward solution would be appreciated.

CORRECT TEXT: Hello - I'm Mrs Joan Fletcher and I'm ringing about the handset you sent me (Model: A12, IMEI 352938102938475). I raised this once already on 12 March with a lady called Helen and was told someone would ring back; it's now 26 March and nobody has replied. The phone loses charge very quickly, the screen goes black for minutes at a time and I can't answer calls properly. I'm not clever with tech - I followed the simple steps on the leaflet and even charged it overnight, but the problems remain. I don't want to be on repeat calls forever; can someone please either sort a replacement or give clear, plain instructions I can follow? I can wait a few days, but it's getting tiresome having to ask twice.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly states a low urgency with the phrase 'I can wait a few days', which is entirely absent in the Error Text. While the Error Text mentions it's a 'first time raising it', it emphasizes the functional impact ('difficult to keep up with coursework and part-time shifts') and financial constraint ('can't afford an out-of-pocket repair fee') without a direct counter-signal of patience.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on the immediate functional and financial impact described in the Error Text, interpreting these as 'Medium' urgency, especially when there is no explicit statement of patience or willingness to wait. It fails to sufficiently weigh 'first time raising it' as a strong indicator of 'Low' urgency when other impact cues are present.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where the user describes significant functional or financial impact but explicitly states a low urgency or willingness to wait, or where 'first contact' is the primary low urgency cue despite other impact factors.

Pair #32 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I have been attempting to cancel my service because my health condition makes maintaining this contract difficult, but the process has been repeatedly obstructed by the phone menu and a lack of follow-through. I first phoned on 2 March and spoke to Daniel who said he would email cancellation instructions; I called again on 9 March (Ravi), 16 March (Priya) and most recently on 23 March (line reference 99302), each time being promised a confirmation email that never arrived. Navigating the IVR is challenging for me and I specifically asked for an accessible alternative, which was noted but not implemented. I would like this account terminated and a confirmation sent to my email within five working days. If you cannot process the cancellation, please provide a named contact who will confirm a definite cancellation date and a refund of any overpayment. I am hopeful this can be resolved without further calls.

CORRECT TEXT: Oh good, another barrier from your end when I simply want to leave. I submitted a cancellation request through the dashboard on 18 March and received the kind of automated reply that says everything will be processed 'shortly.' Shortly, it seems, is your way of saying 'we will ignore you.' I rang your helpdesk on 20 March and spoke with Hannah, who read from a script and assured me someone would email me within 48 hours. No email arrived. So here I am, using this second attempt to tell you: stop pretending cancellation is optional. I have no interest in protracted retention calls. I signed up for a month-to-month plan and I expect you to terminate it as requested. If your systems require a form, point to it. If a human signature is necessary, send the link. I am not paying an extra month's fee because your processes are deliberately obscure. Fix this properly this time.

Final Contrastive Error Analysis Report

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly mentions a 'health condition' making the contract difficult to maintain and sets a specific, short-term deadline ('within five working days') for the entire resolution, whereas the correct text, despite its aggressive tone, frames the urgency primarily around avoiding an additional financial charge ('not paying an extra month's fee').

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on explicit mentions of personal hardship (like a health condition) and concrete short-term deadlines for resolution, failing to adequately weigh the overall context and de-escalating phrases ('hopeful this can be resolved without further calls', 'provide a named contact') that indicate a lower urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where personal difficulties or specific short deadlines are present, but the overall request and tone still align with low urgency, especially when accompanied by phrases indicating a willingness to continue the process or a non-immediate consequence.

Pair #33 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I switched over from my previous provider on 01/02/2026 specifically because your adverts and the sales agent promised improved indoor reception and reliable data on the 30GB SIM plan. Since porting my number, however, the reality has been a steady degradation: daily dropped calls at home, inability to send or receive MMS, and 3G/4G speeds plunging to unusable levels. Examples: on 04/03/2026 I missed an employer call at 14:40 due to a complete call drop; on 09/03/2026 between 10:00-10:20 my data stalled at 0.1Mbps while trying to upload a timesheet; on 15/03/2026 video calls failed repeatedly. I have logged the issue on multiple occasions - calls on 05/03 (Zara, ticket 621-03), 08/03 (Ahmed, ticket 623-07), a live chat on 12/03 (transcript LC-03-12) and a further call with Tom on 19/03 - each time I was told the case would be escalated and that an engineer or network team would contact me. No engineer has attended and there has been no substantive technical feedback. I have also run your diagnostics app and recorded RSRP readings showing -110 to -118 dBm inside my flat (logs available). For reference, my prior supplier delivered steadier indoor levels and allowed me to work from home reliably; that improvement did not materialise after switching. I need a site survey carried out at my address, a written summary of your findings, and either a tariff adjustment reflecting the degraded service or a contract exit without charge if you cannot deliver adequate coverage. I want a clear timeline and the name of the person responsible for the investigation - I will provide the diagnostic logs upon request.

CORRECT TEXT: I run a small photography business and poor indoor signal in my studio has become a persistent problem. I first reported dropped calls and patchy data inside 28 High Street on 10 January; the agent, Tom, logged a complaint and said an engineer would check local coverage. Nothing happened. I chased on 24 January and then again on 7 February; each time I was given a different explanation - congestion, a temporary mast fault, then a suggestion I switch to 4G only - and told someone would escalate to network engineering. There have been at least four contacts in total. On 18 February I had a call with Jas from technical support who booked a site survey for 3 March; nobody turned up and the survey was marked completed in the notes. The consequence is that I cannot reliably take booking calls from clients when I am in the studio; I have missed two tentative bookings because calls dropped, which is irksome and worrying. This is not catastrophic - payments and accounting are unaffected - but it is damaging to my reputation and causes unnecessary stress. I have tried everything short of changing premises. I require a proper local radio survey, a clear explanation of why appointments are being marked as completed when no engineer attends, and a timeline for any remedial action (signal booster or mast work). I will wait for a substantive reply, but I expect you to stop treating this as minor noise and give me one accountable contact to resolve it.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly includes a mitigating statement that directly downplays the severity of the issue ('This is not catastrophic - payments and accounting are unaffected'). The Error Text lacks such a direct, explicit statement of low severity and instead includes a strong escalation demand ('contract exit without charge') which the model likely interpreted as a higher urgency signal.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on strong negative consequences and explicit demands for resolution (like contract termination) when an explicit 'not catastrophic' statement is absent. It fails to correctly infer 'Low' urgency from the overall context of frustration and inconvenience when faced with a high-stakes demand like a contract exit.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where customers express significant frustration and even demand contract termination, but explicitly state that the overall impact is not catastrophic, to teach the model to prioritize explicit severity statements over high-stakes demands.

ERROR TEXT: Lovely to be billed for March even though I cancelled online and completed my switch to BrightLine on 12/03/2026 - thank you for charging me for a month I no longer have. Your final bill (invoice 4421) shows GBP 58.99 taken on 19/03 despite the port completing 12/03 and written confirmation from your own system that the line was deactivated. This is my first time contacting you about it, so here's your chance to refund GBP 58.99 without me having to chase or complain further. Please reverse the charge immediately and confirm by return; if I have to pursue this through the new supplier or the bank, I'll do so, but I'd prefer you fix your billing mess first.

CORRECT TEXT: I am 78 and not good with all this technology, which is why I trusted you to do what you said you would. I cancelled my landline and mobile on 1 March 2026 because the handset kept dropping calls and I could not hear properly. I phoned your helpline three times: 5 March spoke to Sam (reference 28391), 9 March to Amira in cancellations who promised a final statement, and 12 March to John who said the direct debit would be stopped. Despite that, you took a full monthly payment on 20 March and sent another invoice on 22 March. I have no idea how to sort this and I am frightened - I need to be able to call my daughter and my GP. I have been passed between people and given assurances that have not been kept. I now ask to speak with a manager and, if this cannot be resolved immediately, for you to provide contact details to the Ombudsman so someone else can intervene on my behalf. Please do not make me wait or explain procedures I cannot follow; cancel the charges, return the money taken on 20 March, and confirm in writing that my cancellation is complete and my direct debit stopped.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly states the customer's vulnerability ('I am 78 and not good with all this technology'), expresses emotional distress ('I am frightened'), and highlights a critical, life-impacting need ('I need to be able to call my daughter and my GP'), alongside a history of multiple failed resolution attempts. The Error Text, however, explicitly states it's the 'first time contacting you' and focuses on financial inconvenience and a general threat of escalation (bank/new supplier) rather than personal well-being or a history of prior failed attempts.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be over-indexing on the 'first time contacting you' phrase as a de-escalator, failing to recognize that explicit statements of personal vulnerability, critical safety/well-being needs, and a history of prior (informal) failed attempts are stronger indicators of high urgency, even when the formal complaint is new.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where explicit personal vulnerability, critical needs (e.g., health, safety), and a history of prior failed attempts are present, ensuring these are correctly labeled as 'High' urgency regardless of whether it's the 'first formal contact'.

ERROR TEXT: To whom it may concern,

I am the proprietor of Elm & Co. Florists (account BB-43219) and am writing about repeated incorrect charges on our business account for March 2026. Our contract is Business Connect 100, which was agreed on 01/02/2026. The March invoice (INV-20260301-119) shows an unexplained additional charge of GBP 45.00 labelled "Premium Support" and a separate one-off installation fee of GBP 120.00 (INV-20260315-203) which we were told would be waived as part of the introductory offer.

This is the fourth time I have raised this matter: telephone contacts were logged on 02/03 (John in billing), 11/03 (email from accounts), 16/03 (telephone with Maria, who promised a correction), and 19/03 (call reference 78-19-03). Each time I have been given different explanations and no credit. As a small business that depends on your lines for customer orders, these unpredictable charges are directly affecting cashflow. I need a clear audit trail showing why these charges were applied, confirmation that the GBP 165.00 will be refunded immediately to our business account, and assurance that future invoices will reflect the agreed tariff.

I require a formal written response to this email within five working days with the refund reference and corrected invoice. If the error is not resolved within this timeframe I will have to consider escalating to external regulators and seek compensation for any bank fees incurred as a direct consequence. Please contact me by email (accounts@elmco.co.uk) rather than by telephone during trading hours.

Regards,
R. Patel, Owner, Elm & Co. Florists
CORRECT TEXT: Dear Customer Services, I am writing on behalf of GreenLeaf Consultancy Ltd (account 78-44291) to dispute an incorrect charge on invoice 2026-03-15 for GBP 342.50, issued 15 March. The item described as "equipment rental" should not have been billed: our contract (signed 01 February 2025) includes hardware at no extra cost for the duration of the fixed term. I raised this matter on 22 March with Sarah Martin (case reference 87421) and was told the billing team would investigate; I have received no update. This overcharge is affecting cash flow for my business; please credit GBP 342.50 and issue a corrected invoice within 14 days of this letter. If further information is required, contact me by email; otherwise I expect the credit to appear on the April statement.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text integrates the financial impact, required action, and deadline into a single, concise statement within one paragraph. The error text, despite containing stronger individual urgency cues (shorter deadline, explicit escalation to regulators), distributes these cues across multiple paragraphs, with the strongest threat appearing in a distinct, concluding paragraph after several other detailed requests.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to struggle with synthesizing distributed urgency cues, particularly when the most severe escalation threat is presented in a distinct, final paragraph, potentially leading it to underweight the cumulative urgency signal.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where strong, explicit escalation threats and tight deadlines are presented in a separate, concluding paragraph, following a detailed description of the problem and its impact.

Pair #36 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: Account name: Gavin Sinclair. Account number ending 2345. Ten years as a customer, and several weeks of billing errors later, I am writing to insist on a proper resolution.

Since 02 March I have been charged recurring late payment fees and interest that are incorrect. I have contacted you repeatedly: on 05 March I spoke with Amira (reference 1122), on 12 March I spoke with Kyle, and on 19 March with Nadia. Each agent acknowledged an anomaly and promised correction. To date I have received no refund and no corrected itemised bill.

This is not an emotional outburst; it is a formal request under the Consumer Rights framework. Provide a full itemised billing history for the period January-March 2026, remove any improper charges, refund all amounts wrongly applied, and provide compensation for the repeated inconvenience. If you cannot comply, explain precisely why, cite the relevant contractual term, and provide your proposed remedy. I expect a written reply within 14 days. If you treat this as a low-priority administrative matter again, I will have no choice but to contact the relevant ombudsman - I would prefer not to, but I will if necessary.

CORRECT TEXT: I have been a customer for over a decade and I am submitting this as a formal complaint following an incorrect billing that I first reported on 12 March 2026 to advisor Raj (case 4321). My latest invoice contains an unexplained surcharge labelled 'line maintenance' of GBP 6.99 for February and March. I did not agree to this and it is not referenced in my contract. Please supply a full breakdown of these charges, correct my account, and issue a refund for the unauthorised amounts. If I do not receive a satisfactory written response within 14 working days I will escalate to the Ombudsman and notify Ofcom of a persistent billing irregularity. I expect acknowledgement of this complaint and a timeline for resolution by return.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The FAILED PREDICTION text explicitly details a history of multiple, documented, and acknowledged internal attempts at resolution that have repeatedly failed to produce any results ('contacted you repeatedly', 'Each agent acknowledged an anomaly and promised correction. To date I have received no refund'). This cumulative history of unaddressed issues is absent in the CORRECT PREDICTION, which mentions only one prior report.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on the explicit enumeration of multiple failed internal resolution attempts and the resulting tone of exasperation ('no choice but to contact'), interpreting this detailed history of non-compliance as an indicator of 'Medium' urgency, rather than a 'Low' urgency complaint with a strong background of frustration.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where a detailed history of multiple failed internal resolution attempts and a conditional, but strongly worded, external escalation threat still correspond to a 'Low' urgency label.

Pair #37 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I run a small landscaping business and we have lost our primary business number and online billing access due to what appears to be fraudulent activity on your systems. On 11 February 2026 an unauthorised port-out occurred; my trading line was moved without my consent and invoices started appearing against a new account. I called on 12 February (ticket 93172) and spoke to Ellen in fraud who said she would freeze the account; that freeze was not actioned. I have called three further times - 19 February with Raj (case 97410), 03 March with Fatima (case 98421) and most recently 18 March with a supervisor, Ben, who promised a forensic audit and refund timetable. I am still awaiting both. The port-out has cost me multiple lost jobs this season and I have had to explain to clients why I cannot receive calls. Financially I cannot absorb these losses, and there is clear evidence of account compromise. I require an immediate full freeze of any outgoing changes, immediate restoration of my business number, a forensic report of the breach, and provisional reimbursement for demonstrable lost earnings within seven days. I will report this to Action Fraud and the Information Commissioner's Office if you do not secure my account and provide full remediation without further delay.

CORRECT TEXT: I write as the proprietor of a small retail business that depends on your fixed-line and broadband services for card payments, order processing and remote bookkeeping. On 9 March 2026 I noticed a series of unauthorised changes to my account and multiple outbound premium-rate calls billed to my line totalling GBP 3,640. I reported this on 11 March (case FRAUD-20260311) and have escalated the matter on 18 March and 23 March, speaking with your fraud team members Jordan and Ms Patel. Each time I was assured an investigation would follow; no substantive remediation has been completed and the unauthorised charges remain on my account. I have preserved call records and transaction logs and I am formally requesting that you: (a) immediately suspend all third-party call routes on account 07xxxxxxxx, (b) reverse the disputed charges in full, (c) confirm within 48 hours that you have lodged a report with Action Fraud and notified the Information Commissioner's Office under the Data Protection Act if personal data was exposed, and (d) provide a subject access copy of all account-change logs back to 1 January 2026. Continued delay is causing significant cashflow disruption to the business and exposes me to regulatory reporting obligations. If you do not act within the requested timescale I will seek a statutory remedy through Ofcom and consider civil recovery. I expect written confirmation of the immediate mitigations and a timetable for a full refund by close of business within two working days.

Final Contrastive Error Analysis Report

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly states multiple, very short, and concrete deadlines for critical actions and confirmations (e.g., 'within 48 hours', 'within two working days') directly preceding or following the threat of external action. In contrast, the Error Text, while using 'immediate' for some requests, provides a longer deadline for financial remediation ('within seven days') and a more general 'without further delay' for the ultimate threat, which dilutes the sense of immediate, time-bound crisis.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be less sensitive to the general term 'immediate' or a relatively longer deadline (7 days) when compared to very specific, short-term deadlines (48 hours, 2 working days) for critical steps or confirmations, especially when these short deadlines are directly tied to escalation threats. It might be weighting the specificity and brevity of the deadline more heavily than the presence of the word 'immediate' alone.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where high urgency is conveyed through explicit, very short deadlines (e.g., 24-72 hours) for initial actions or confirmations, even if the full resolution timeline is longer.

Pair #38 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I have called multiple times and been left waiting. On 08/03/2026 I waited 40 minutes, on 12/03/2026 another 35, and today (18/03/2026) I put the phone down after 50 minutes on hold. I am 78, I do not understand these menus, and this is not acceptable. Each time I am trying to sort why my landline shows as connected but there is a hiss on outgoing calls. I need someone to ring me back at a time I can answer: weekday mornings between 10 and 12. Please stop making me hold for so long. - Janet Reeves.

CORRECT TEXT: Called four times between 2 March and 18 March. Typical waits: 22, 27, 19 and 31 minutes. Each call either dropped or resulted in a callback promise that never arrived. This is getting inefficient. Provide a reasonable callback window or an automated booking for a support slot. Account number 764210938.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text includes explicit statements of personal vulnerability ('I am 78, I do not understand these menus'), strong emotional frustration ('this is not acceptable'), and direct, pleading language ('Please stop making me hold for so long'). The Correct Text, conversely, maintains a more objective and understated tone ('This is getting inefficient') and presents solution-oriented requests without personal appeals.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on explicit emotional markers, personal vulnerability, and direct, strong statements of dissatisfaction, interpreting them as indicators of higher urgency (Medium) even when the underlying problem's impact or criticality remains 'Low'.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where customers express strong frustration, personal vulnerability, or direct pleas for non-critical, low-impact issues, ensuring these are consistently labeled as 'Low' urgency.

Pair #39 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I am making a formal second request for immediate waiver of the early termination charge applied to my account (A/C 842179). I first raised this matter on 4 March 2026 with Mr Patel in your retention team and was given no substantive response - simply a promise someone would call back. I have not received that call. I am registered disabled with a mobility impairment and attend weekly hospital treatment. My clinician advised that my move to sheltered accommodation was essential and unavoidable; therefore terminating the contract early was a medical necessity. The invoice dated 9 March 2026 for an early termination fee of GBP 275 is both unexpected and financially damaging. I provided medical evidence on 11 March to your vulnerabilities team (case reference VUL-1123) and was told it would be considered. To date there has been no decision communicated. This is a sensible request: remove the fee in light of documented health reasons or explain in writing, with legal basis, why you will not. I require a written resolution within seven days, otherwise I will have no option but to seek independent advice and escalate to the ombudsman. Please escalate this to a manager and confirm receipt of the medical documentation immediately.

CORRECT TEXT: Account number: 04-993-210. I am writing about the early termination fee of GBP 220 that you insist I must pay. I have contacted you on four occasions (02/03/26, 09/03/26, 16/03/26 and 20/03/26). I spoke with Sahil Patel on 02/03, Nadia Green on 09/03 and Karen in Retentions on 16/03. Each time I was promised escalation but received no resolution.

I have a progressive neurological condition and was admitted to hospital on 05/03/26. My clinician has advised a period of prolonged care and I cannot continue with the contract. I supplied clinical correspondence by email on 10/03/26 but the fee remains. Under your own vulnerable customer policy I should be considered for fee waiver or compassionate release from contract. I am formally requesting immediate unconditional waiver of the early termination charge and written confirmation within seven days.

If you require further medical evidence I will provide it. If you do not respond appropriately I will seek assistance from Citizens Advice and the Ombudsman. Please treat this as a priority due to my health situation.

1. Linguistic Delta:
The error text contains a higher density of explicit, formal, and non-negotiable demands, specifically requesting a 'legal basis' for refusal and framing escalation as the 'only option' available. It also combines multiple strong, immediate calls to action at the very end. In contrast, the correct text, while firm, includes an offer of cooperation ('If you require further medical evidence I will provide it') and appeals to internal policy ('Under your own vulnerable customer policy'), which slightly mitigates the overall tone despite similar escalation threats.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:
The model's attention mechanism appears to be over-indexing on the cumulative presence of highly formal, demanding language (e.g., 'legal basis', 'no option but to seek independent advice') and multiple immediate calls to action, without adequately weighing the presence of cooperative language or appeals to internal policy that would indicate a 'Medium' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:
Augment training data with more examples where strong, formal demands and explicit escalation threats are present, but the inclusion of cooperative language or appeals to internal policy still warrants a 'Medium' urgency label.

Pair #40 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: As a small business that depends on your VOIP line for client calls, I am escalating after exhausting the usual support routes. I have logged three separate tickets (refs 4129 on 02/03, 4137 on 09/03 and 4160 on 18/03) and spoken to advisors named Claire and Marcus, who were polite but unable to provide a lasting solution. The line drops intermittently during peak hours, costing us missed bookings and at least two canceled appointments this month. Your online diagnostics repeatedly report 'no fault found' while the problem persists; this mismatch is unacceptable for an active business account. I am requesting immediate escalation to a senior engineer and a written plan for fault diagnosis within 48 hours, plus an explanation of how you will assess compensation for measurable business losses. If this cannot be resolved promptly at branch level, please forward the file to your complaints manager or the ombudsman for review.
CORRECT TEXT: I contacted customer relations on 3 May about ongoing dropped packets and intermittent DNS failures that affect VPN and remote work. The advisor, Mark, opened ticket REF-7742 and assured me a technical specialist would call back within 48 hours. No callback. I used the web chat on 6 May; that transcript is apparently 'not available' according to the follow-up email. I then received an automated note on 8 May marking the case as closed with no explanation. I am a young professional; my livelihood depends on stable connectivity and I work anti-social hours - this lack of coherent handling is unacceptable. I expect a named complaints manager to review my case, to retrieve and provide the missing chat and call logs, and to schedule a real technician visit within three working days. If you cannot do that, tell me now so I can make alternative arrangements; I will not wait in limbo.

Final Contrastive Error Analysis Report

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

1. Linguistic Delta:

The FAILED text explicitly demands 'immediate escalation' and quantifies current business losses ('missed bookings and at least two canceled appointments this month'), framing the issue as 'unacceptable for an active business account.' In contrast, the CORRECT text, while expressing frustration and personal impact, uses a longer resolution timeframe ('three working days') and describes the impact more generally ('livelihood depends on stable connectivity') rather than specific, current, quantified losses.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-prioritize explicit 'immediate' action demands and quantified, current business losses, even when other contextual cues (like 'intermittently,' 'within 48 hours,' or 'this month') suggest a less critical, ongoing issue rather than an acute, sudden crisis. It struggles to weigh the immediacy of the demand against the actual timeframe for resolution or the nature of the ongoing problem.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where explicit demands for 'immediate escalation' or quantified business losses are present, but the overall context (e.g., intermittent issues, multi-day resolution requests) still indicates a Medium urgency.

Pair #41 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: Dear Sir or Madam, I am writing because I have been charged an extra fee that I do not understand and I need this sorted. I phoned on 2 February, 16 February, 2 March and again on 12 March and spoke each time to different people - first to Helen, then to Tom, then to a lady at the Gloucester branch and most recently to Seth on 12 March. Each time I was told someone would look into the charge and phone me back. No one has called. I do not use apps or complicated websites; I rely on paper bills and a clear explanation. On my bill dated 1 March there is a "service administration fee" of GBP 11.75 which I was not told about when I renewed my contract last November. I am on a fixed pension and this unexpected amount is upsetting. I cannot work out how to remove it online and the staff keep saying it is normal. I want a refund for that charge and a written explanation of why it was applied. Please correct my next bill and send confirmation in the post to Mrs Margaret Ellis, 14 High Street, BN1 1AB. If this is not resolved within seven days I will have to ask for further help from Age Concern to assist me in understanding my options.

CORRECT TEXT: I moved my broadband and mobile services to your network on 05 February 2026 and expected a straightforward billing transition. My first bill, dated 08 March 2026, includes a so-called "network administration fee" of GBP 39.99 and a "setup charge" of GBP 45 which were not disclosed when I signed up online. I raised this once on 16 March 2026 with an agent called Maya who said the charges would be reviewed, but my account still shows the same amounts and I have had no follow-up. Please provide an itemised explanation for these fees and a refund or credit for any charges that were not made clear during the sale. I would like this resolved within seven days; if you need further details I can supply my order number and the confirmation email from 05/02/2026.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text states the 7-day resolution period as a direct request ('I would like this resolved within seven days;'), implying a firm deadline. The Error Text frames the 7-day period as a conditional statement ('If this is not resolved within seven days I will have to ask for further help from Age Concern to assist me in understanding my options.'), which is a less direct demand and links the consequence to seeking advice rather than a direct complaint or action.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be less sensitive to conditional urgency cues, particularly when the stated consequence of missing a deadline is an indirect or preparatory step (e.g., 'understanding options' via a third party) rather than a direct demand for resolution or a more severe, immediate escalation.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where conditional deadlines, even if leading to indirect or preparatory escalation steps, are explicitly labeled as 'Medium' urgency to teach the model to recognize these nuanced threats of escalation.

Final Contrastive Error Analysis Report

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

Pair #42 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: On 2 March and again on 10 March I raised the matter with your sales team after being enrolled into an add-on service I did not request; the account was modified to include premium device insurance and a contract extension without my explicit consent. I have now called four times (notes taken with agents Daniel and Priya) and lodged two formal complaints (refs: C-20260311-A and C-20260317-B) but the charges remain. Under the Consumer Rights Act and the Consumer Contracts Regulations, a contract variation made without clear, informed consent is not binding. I therefore require the unauthorised charges removed, the add-on cancelled, and a full refund of GBP 129.60 within seven calendar days. If you cannot comply, please provide a written justification citing the specific consent record you rely upon and a copy of the recorded call in which I allegedly accepted these changes. If I do not receive a satisfactory response by 1 April 2026 I will refer the matter to Citizens Advice and Ofcom and pursue recovery through the small claims route. Please confirm receipt and outline the immediate remedial steps you will take.

CORRECT TEXT: I run a small postal stationery business and your agent sold me a package on 10 February that was plainly misrepresented. On the phone I was promised a symmetrical 200Mbps leased line capable of supporting our e-commerce checkout and VoIP concurrently. The sale was made by Daniel Harper (call recorded, reference SALE-1102). The install on 15 February delivered ADSL 15Mbps. That speed is unusable for business; since then we have lost custom, several timed courier uploads have failed and I have invoices from clients requesting refunds totalling GBP 2,750. I raised this on 2 March (case 33219) and received a generic troubleshooting email with no substantive remedy. You are in breach of contract and potentially in breach of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 for supplying a service not as described. I require the following within 48 hours: (1) provisioning of the agreed 200Mbps service or an immediate rescission of the contract with full refund of all sums paid; (2) compensation for demonstrable lost revenue of GBP 2,750 and documented costs of mitigation; (3) a written explanation identifying how Daniel Harper was authorised to make the claims he made and assurance of staff retraining. If you do not meet these demands I will commence proceedings through the small claims court and notify Ofcom and Trading Standards. This is my second formal attempt to resolve and I expect substantive action now.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text specifies a much shorter immediate deadline ('within 48 hours') and details significant ongoing business disruption and a higher monetary loss (GBP 2,750) compared to the error text's longer deadline ('within seven calendar days') and lower, personal financial impact (GBP 129.60).

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be heavily weighting the explicit immediacy of the requested action (e.g., '48 hours') and the magnitude of the financial and operational impact, potentially under-prioritizing a clear escalation threat when the immediate deadline is slightly longer or the direct financial impact is lower.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where 'High' urgency is indicated by a clear escalation path and firm deadlines (even if not ultra-short like 24-48 hours), especially when combined with a non-trivial financial impact or significant inconvenience, to balance the model's reliance on extreme immediacy cues.

Pair #43 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: Account: 2468-1357. I am a student on a limited budget and I need clarity about my renewal terms. My contract runs until 30 June 2026. When I checked renewal options on 8 March I was offered a renewal price of GBP 34 per month, while new customers are being offered a promotional price of GBP 19 per month for the same package. I contacted customer services by phone on 9 March (agent: Paul S) and again via chat on 10 March; both times I was told there was no matching offer for my account. I have followed the published complaint route and exhausted the usual channels. This differential in price effectively penalises a long-standing customer trying to stay within a tight student budget. I request either a price match to the current new-customer promotion or a one-off credit reflecting the difference from 1 April to 30 June 2026 (approximately GBP 45), and a written explanation of why loyalty customers are not offered comparable rates. If this cannot be resolved promptly, please escalate to a manager or advise how to proceed to the Ombudsman.

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing again because my account is being charged more than new customer offers despite my loyalty. I raised this on 18/02/2026 with your retention team (case REF 20260218-LP) and was told by Rachael that the account would be reviewed and I would receive a revised bill. That promised follow-up did not arrive. I am a software developer and keep track of market pricing; similar contracts with comparable speeds and inclusive allowances are advertised at GBP 28-GBP 30 per month. My latest bill dated 01/03/2026 shows GBP 42.50. I expect precise justification for the premium and a correction where no contractual basis exists for the surcharge. I request a written breakdown of the charges applied since January 2026, immediate application of any loyalty discount available to long-standing customers and a credit for the difference back to the date I first queried the issue. If you cannot produce an acceptable resolution within seven days I will cancel and transfer my services to a competitor and pursue reimbursement for any overcharged sums. Please escalate this matter internally and provide a named contact who will take ownership of the case.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text contains an explicit, time-bound ultimatum ('within seven days I will cancel and transfer my services') and a direct request for immediate escalation to a named contact. The Error Text, while mentioning escalation, uses a vague temporal adverb ('promptly') and refers to a more procedural, less immediate threat ('advise how to proceed to the Ombudsman').

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is failing to adequately weigh conditional escalation threats that use vague temporal adverbs or refer to formal, multi-step processes (like 'Ombudsman') as sufficient indicators of 'Medium' urgency, especially when compared to explicit, time-bound threats of direct customer action.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where conditional escalation threats with vague temporal adverbs or references to formal complaint bodies (e.g., Ombudsman) are labeled as 'Medium' urgency, especially when combined with a history of failed attempts to resolve the issue.

Pair #44 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: My business telephone line is my lifeline. Over the past three weeks I have been left on hold so often and for such long stretches that it is beginning to affect bookings. On 02/03/2026 I waited 48 minutes to speak to an advisor, on 09/03/2026 it was 1 hour and 12 minutes, and yesterday, 18/03/2026, I was still on hold when the call dropped after 55 minutes. I have followed the usual routes - online chat, your automated callback queue and the standard complaints number - and have now exhausted those channels. I would prefer not to run the business by carrier pigeon, so please transfer this to a manager or advise how I can escalate to the ombudsman; a timely and practical fix would be appreciated, as this is not sustainable for a company with three full-time staff dependent on incoming calls.

CORRECT TEXT: Ten years with you and apparently I've developed an odd hobby: listening to your hold music. I called at 09:10 on 02/03/2026 and was on hold for 47 minutes, then again on 09/03 at 14:05 for 52 minutes; both calls ended before I reached an adviser. I did eventually speak to Tom on 10/03 who said the queue was 'higher than normal' and promised a callback that never came. I'm not in any immediate difficulty but this is an inefficient way to run a help service, so I'd like this escalated to a manager and, if there's no satisfactory response, details on how to contact the ombudsman. A simple change to call-handling or an offered callback slot would be enough to put this right.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly links the service disruption to direct business impact, financial unsustainability, and the livelihoods of staff ('lifeline', 'affect bookings', 'not sustainable for a company with three full-time staff dependent on incoming calls'). In contrast, the correct text explicitly states 'I'm not in any immediate difficulty' and frames the issue as 'inefficient' rather than critical.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-prioritize explicit statements of severe potential business consequences and dependency, interpreting them as higher urgency, even when the immediate urgency is not explicitly stated as high or is implicitly low.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where significant business impact or potential financial loss is described, but the overall urgency is explicitly stated as low or not immediate.

Pair #45 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I phoned your support line on 11 March and waited 42 minutes before the call dropped, then tried again on 18 March and spent 65 minutes on hold only to be disconnected twice. I have a chronic pain condition which makes long waits physically uncomfortable, and this level of delay is not manageable for me. I raised the issue previously (contact reference 33445566) but there has been no progress. Please provide a callback option or priority access for customers with medical needs, and confirm when I can expect to speak to an adviser without an extended wait.

CORRECT TEXT: I have a mobility condition and rely on brief phone appointments. I called on 22 March 2026 and was on hold for 45 minutes before the line dropped, and I tried again on 24 March and waited 50 minutes with no answer. I spoke briefly to a colleague named Samantha who said the issue would be logged, but I have had no callback. Long waits are difficult for me, so please arrange a scheduled call-back within two working days or provide an alternative way to resolve this without extra hold time.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states a time-bound demand for resolution ('within two working days'), which is absent in the error text. The error text's request for resolution is more general and open-ended ('confirm when I can expect to speak').

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to heavily prioritize explicit, short-term deadlines as a primary trigger for 'Medium' urgency, failing to adequately weigh the cumulative impact of severe personal hardship ('not manageable for me'), repeated service failures, and a history of unaddressed issues when a specific deadline is not present.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where 'Medium' urgency is conveyed through a combination of severe personal impact, repeated service failures, and a history of unresolved issues, even without an explicit, short-term deadline for resolution.

Pair #46 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: Account: Unlimited 100Mbps, account x7390. On 01/03/2026 I was charged twice for the monthly plan (GBP 89.00 x2) and also billed GBP 7.99 for handset insurance I cancelled in December. I reported this on 14/03 to Nina who promised correction and a refund, yet the April invoice still shows the duplicate charge and the insurance line. This is my second report; the problem remains. Fix the bill and issue the refund now - I do not have time for further delays.

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing as I do not understand why my bill for March 2026 shows an extra charge of GBP 31.99. I am on the standard plan and expected to pay GBP 35.99 this month; instead the total is GBP 67.98 with a line item for device insurance (GBP 12.99) and a premium channel charge (GBP 19.00) I did not ask for. I do not use the app easily and I am not confident changing settings myself, so this is my first time contacting you about billing. Please remove the two items added in error, refund the GBP 31.99 difference to my account, and send me a plain English explanation of what happened and how you will prevent it occurring again. I would appreciate a phone call to confirm between 10:00 and 12:00 if that is possible.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly states 'This is my second report; the problem remains' and includes a strong, time-sensitive demand ('Fix the bill and issue the refund now - I do not have time for further delays'), indicating a history of unaddressed issues and impatience. In contrast, the correct text explicitly states 'this is my first time contacting you' and uses polite requests, conveying a first-time inquiry without prior escalation.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be over-indexing on explicit cues of repeated contact, unfulfilled promises, and strong, imperative language expressing customer frustration and time sensitivity, interpreting these as definitive indicators of 'High' urgency, even when the underlying issue's objective impact might still align with 'Medium' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples labeled 'Medium' that contain explicit mentions of repeated issues, unfulfilled promises, or strong customer frustration/impatience, to teach the model to weigh these against the actual impact of the problem.

Pair #47 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I run a small catering business and rely on your line for card payments and online orders. On the invoice dated 14/02/2026 (Invoice 2026-041) there are three items marked as "administration fee" totalling GBP 59.97 and an unexplained "connection service charge" of GBP 120. I never consented to these fees when the contract was signed in January 2025, and they do not appear in the contract copy I hold (signed by your sales rep Daniel Clarke). I have contacted support repeatedly: emailed accounts on 18/02, called on 22/02 and spoke to Sophie in billing on 05/03 who promised to investigate and refund anything incorrectly applied. On 15/03 I escalated to Mark, who said the matter would be sent to the accounts manager. Nothing has been refunded, and the latest debit on 20/03 took my account into overdraft, causing my merchant terminal to be temporarily suspended - I lost three confirmed orders that day. Please provide a full breakdown of those charges (invoice references, dates, contract clause authorising them), confirm a refund of GBP 347.50 (the disputed charges plus bank fees incurred), and arrange compensation for demonstrable business losses. I have exhausted the normal channels and now request immediate escalation to a manager. If I do not receive a substantive written response within seven working days I will submit a formal complaint to the Ombudsman and provide evidence of the business impact.

CORRECT TEXT: My name is Margaret Hargreaves and I am writing because I cannot make sense of the bill I received on 3 March 2026. I am not comfortable with computers and rely entirely on paper statements. On that bill there is a charge of GBP 37.50 described as "service admin" and another of GBP 12.99 for "equipment protection" which I never agreed to. I took out a simple phone and broadband package in January 2025 and was told there would only be the monthly subscription and a line rental. There was no clear explanation of these extra amounts when the salesman set up the account over the phone. I phoned your automated line and a recorded message directed me to the online account, which I cannot use. I then rang the number given on my paperwork on 10 March 2026 and was on hold for half an hour before the call was dropped. This is my first time raising the matter formally because I did not know where else to turn. Please explain precisely what these charges are, supply a breakdown in plain English by post, and remove any fees that were not explicitly agreed. I am puzzled and upset to see my limited pension being reduced by charges I do not understand. I need someone to write to me at my home address with a clear explanation and a corrected bill within seven days, otherwise I will have no choice but to seek advice from my local Citizens Advice office.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text contains explicit language detailing immediate business operational impact ('merchant terminal to be temporarily suspended - I lost three confirmed orders'), a clear declaration of 'exhausted normal channels' with a request for 'immediate escalation to a manager', and a formal threat of 'submit a formal complaint to the Ombudsman'. In contrast, the Correct Text describes a personal financial impact ('limited pension being reduced'), states it's the 'first time raising the matter formally', and threatens to 'seek advice from my local Citizens Advice office', which are less severe and less formal escalation cues.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on specific high-urgency phrases related to direct business disruption, explicit statements of failed internal escalation, and formal regulatory threats. It interprets these strong cues as definitive indicators of 'High' urgency, even when the overall context (e.g., the specific financial amount, the timeframe of the threat) might still warrant a 'Medium' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where texts contain explicit mentions of business disruption, exhausted internal channels, and formal external threats (like Ombudsman complaints) but are still labeled as 'Medium' urgency due to the overall context or scale of the issue.

ERROR TEXT: I have been a customer for 12 years and I expect clearer communication. I first reported this matter on 9 March 2026 (reference 987654321) after the scheduled engineer visit was cancelled; I spoke to Samir in the complaints team who said I would receive weekly progress updates but I have had none. This is my second formal request for an update and I would like a summary of current actions, the anticipated completion date and a named contact who will provide weekly status emails. Please treat this as medium-priority - the intermittent dropouts are manageable for now but I need assurance that work is progressing within the next five working days.

CORRECT TEXT: My home package has been subject to intermittent outages since 2 March. I lodged an initial fault report with your team on 9 March (ticket 47-9083) and spoke to Lina in Technical Support, who assured me that an engineer would attend and that I would receive twice-weekly updates. I have received no updates. We are a family of four; my youngest relies on the broadband for remote lessons three afternoons a week and my partner works from home at least two days. The silence from your side is creating real disruption to schoolwork and child care arrangements. I am not asking for promises - I need a clear schedule: the engineer visit date, expected repairs, and an explanation of why the communication commitment was not honoured. Please respond by 30 March with a named contact and the next scheduled action. If I am left waiting beyond that date I will be forced to seek alternative providers and reclaim service charges for days without reliable access.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text establishes urgency through a combination of a clear deadline paired with a direct, negative consequence (threat of seeking alternative providers and reclaiming charges) and an implicit urgency cue by detailing the significant disruption to daily life (schoolwork, childcare). The error text, while explicitly stating 'medium-priority' and a deadline for 'assurance,' mitigates its urgency with 'manageable for now' and lacks a concrete, direct threat of escalation or detailed impact.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model appears to be over-indexing on explicit, but qualified, urgency statements ('medium-priority' combined with 'manageable for now') and under-indexing on implicit urgency cues (detailed impact on daily life) and explicit deadlines that are coupled with clear, negative consequences or threats of escalation.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where urgency is conveyed through explicit deadlines combined with concrete threats of escalation or detailed descriptions of significant daily disruption, even if an explicit urgency level is absent or qualified.

Pair #49 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I have been a customer of yours for over a decade and I am now writing to formally dispute repeated incorrect charges on my account. My contract - Unlimited Fibre Plus - has been continuous since 04/10/2013. On invoices dated 01/11/2025, 01/12/2025 and 01/01/2026 I have been billed an additional GBP 27.50 per month labelled 'service adjustment' and a single charge of GBP 199.00 on 01/12/2025 described as 'equipment replacement'. I did not authorise any equipment purchase and I have documentary proof of payment for my regular monthly fee only (invoice numbers INV-11025, INV-12025, INV-01026). I called billing on 02/12/2025 (agent: David L.) and again on 10/12/2025 and 17/12/2025; each time I was promised a refund and an email with corrected bills. Neither the corrected invoices nor any refund has been issued. Under the Consumer Rights Act 2015 and Ofcom billing guidelines you are obliged to rectify manifest errors without delay and to provide a reasonable explanation for any charge. I therefore require the immediate reversal of the three GBP 27.50 adjustments and the full GBP 199.00 equipment charge, together with a written statement correcting my account history and confirmation that no late fees will be applied while this dispute remains unresolved. If you do not resolve this account within 14 days I will escalate the matter to a senior manager and make a formal complaint to the Telecommunications Ombudsman. Please confirm receipt and supply a manager contact to progress this.

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing as I do not understand why my bill for March 2026 shows an extra charge of GBP 31.99. I am on the standard plan and expected to pay GBP 35.99 this month; instead the total is GBP 67.98 with a line item for device insurance (GBP 12.99) and a premium channel charge (GBP 19.00) I did not ask for. I do not use the app easily and I am not confident changing settings myself, so this is my first time contacting you about billing. Please remove the two items added in error, refund the GBP 31.99 difference to my account, and send me a plain English explanation of what happened and how you will prevent it occurring again. I would appreciate a phone call to confirm between 10:00 and 12:00 if that is possible.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text contains an explicit, time-bound escalation threat ('If you do not resolve this account within 14 days I will escalate the matter to a senior manager and make a formal complaint to the Telecommunications Ombudsman') positioned at the end of a lengthy, detailed complaint, which is a strong indicator of 'Medium' urgency. The Correct Text, while correctly classified as 'Medium', lacks such a formal, time-bound escalation, relying instead on the directness of the problem statement and request for resolution.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model appears to be failing to correctly identify and weigh explicit, time-bound escalation threats when they are embedded within a long, detailed, and formal complaint, potentially due to an over-reliance on overall text length, initial problem framing, or a failure to capture critical information presented towards the end of a verbose input.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where explicit deadlines and escalation threats are present in lengthy, detailed, and formal complaints, ensuring the model learns to identify these as strong indicators of 'Medium' or 'High' urgency regardless of text length or surrounding detail.

Pair #50 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I write to request an immediate, itemised explanation for a charge on invoice INV-20260325 for GBP 12 described only as an "administration fee." My contract with you (contract reference CT-20160301) expired on 01/03/2026 and I took no action that would, to my knowledge, incur such a levy. This is my first time raising the matter with your company. Please provide: 1) the precise contractual clause authorising this fee; 2) the date and name of the staff member who applied it; and 3) a reversal if no valid contractual basis exists. As a customer of over a decade I expect clarity and adherence to agreed terms. I request a written reply within five business days and the refund of the GBP 12 should you be unable to substantiate the charge.

CORRECT TEXT: My bill dated 15 March 2026 includes a line item of GBP 12.99 described as a "connectivity administration fee" that is not referenced in the contract I accepted on 3 November 2025 nor in the summary pages provided at signup. As a technically literate customer I reviewed the documents available in my online account and the only administrative charges I accepted were for paper bills (which I explicitly opted out of). Please send a detailed breakdown of the GBP 12.99 charge, the date it was applied, and the contractual authority for levying it. If this fee was added in error I expect a reversal and an amended statement; if it was included intentionally you should point me to the exact clause where this fee was disclosed at point of sale. I am raising this now for the first time and would appreciate resolution within five business days.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states the customer's proactive investigation and certainty regarding the charge's invalidity (e.g., 'As a technically literate customer I reviewed the documents... and the only administrative charges I accepted were for paper bills (which I explicitly opted out of)'). The error text, while using 'immediate' and a deadline, relies more on a general denial ('took no action that would, to my knowledge, incur such a levy') and the contract's expiration, which introduces a slight ambiguity.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model appears to be under-weighting the implicit urgency conveyed by a customer's demonstrated diligence and certainty in their claim, and potentially over-relying on explicit temporal adverbs like 'immediate' without fully processing the surrounding contextual evidence that either strengthens or weakens the claim's immediate validity.

3. Actionable Fix:

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

Add more training examples where customer certainty derived from proactive investigation and explicit evidence (e.g., 'I checked my records,' 'I reviewed the terms') is a strong indicator of medium urgency, even if explicit temporal adverbs are less prominent or slightly qualified.

Pair #51 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I switched from SignalOne on 12 February 2026 and expressly cancelled any outstanding renewals with my previous provider at that time. On 4 March I was charged an annual fee of GBP 119.99 for the 'SIM Only 24' plan without my consent. Under the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013 and applicable Ofcom billing transparency guidance, suppliers must obtain clear, informed consent prior to applying charges. Consider this my initial formal notice: cancel the unauthorised renewal immediately and refund GBP 119.99 to the original payment method within 14 days, and confirm the cancellation in writing. If you decline or ignore this request I will pursue further remedies including a complaint to the ombudsman and advice regarding my statutory rights.

CORRECT TEXT: I have been a customer with your company for over ten years and this is my first time raising a billing issue. On 2 March 2026 my SIM-only plan was automatically renewed for another 12 months and a charge of GBP 132.00 appeared on my card the same day. I did not receive prior explicit confirmation of renewal nor did I grant consent for an automatic roll-over on that date.

Please provide a full explanation of the contractual basis for the renewal and reverse the charge if you cannot demonstrate clear, affirmative consent in accordance with Consumer Contracts Regulations. I would like the contract cancelled and a refund of the GBP 132.00 within 14 days, or a clear outline of how you intend to comply with the relevant consumer protection requirements. A prompt written acknowledgment of this request would be appreciated.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text contains an explicit, unconditional threat of escalating the issue to an external body (ombudsman) and frames the request as a 'formal notice' with a demand for immediate action. In contrast, the correct text uses more conditional language, offers an alternative resolution path, and lacks any direct threat of external escalation.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on explicit threats of external escalation (e.g., 'complaint to the ombudsman') and formal, demanding language ('formal notice', 'immediately') as definitive indicators of 'Medium' urgency, failing to recognize that such language can still be part of an initial, 'Low' urgency complaint.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more 'Low' urgency examples that include explicit, but initial, threats of escalation to external bodies or formal notices, to teach the model to differentiate these from truly 'Medium' urgency situations requiring immediate intervention.

Pair #52 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: Mr Alan Brooks here. I sent written notice to end my broadband service and your team acknowledged the cancellation on 05 March 2026 (ref 92233). Despite that I was debited GBP 34.99 on 28 March. I rang once on 30 March and was told a refund would be processed; no refund has appeared. I am on a fixed income and this unexpected charge is causing financial difficulty. Please reverse the payment and send written confirmation within five working days. If you cannot resolve this promptly I will escalate the matter.

CORRECT TEXT: You are still billing me after I cancelled on 12 March. I confirmed the cancellation with Lucy in retention and was given a final account reference (CXL-1213). I have a new provider and should not be charged. On 25 March you took another direct debit of GBP 48. Stop any further debits immediately and refund the GBP 48 within 48 hours. If this is not resolved I will reclaim the amount through my bank and report this to the regulator. I do not want another call from frontline staff - escalate to accounts and confirm by email once refunded.

Final Contrastive Error Analysis Report

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text uses highly specific and immediate temporal constraints ('immediately', 'within 48 hours') and concrete, external threats ('reclaim through my bank', 'report to the regulator'), along with an explicit instruction to bypass standard support channels. In contrast, the error text uses a longer, less immediate deadline ('within five working days') and a more generic, internal threat ('escalate the matter').

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is failing to adequately weigh the specificity and immediacy of deadlines and the concreteness of external, actionable threats over more generic internal escalation warnings and longer response times.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where high urgency is signaled by specific, short deadlines and concrete, external consequences, ensuring the model learns to differentiate these from general escalation threats.

Pair #53 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: When I signed with you on 8 February 2026 I was excited to leave my old provider. I remember the sales rep, Ben, arranging next-day delivery of a handset - the whole experience was sold to me as simple and reliable. It was not. The phone arrived on 10 February but would not complete the initial setup: stuck on the manufacturer logo, no SIM recognition. I called support that afternoon and spoke to Aadil, who logged a fault and said a replacement would be sent within three days. Two weeks later I had the same faulty device, and the follow-up chat with technical support on 24 February with Jenny resulted in a factory reset instruction that did not help. I have spent hours on hold, taken multiple screenshots and run through every troubleshooting script offered on your website. The handset is unusable and your troubleshooting has been circular. I have exhausted normal channels and now request to speak to a manager or for the case to be referred to the Ombudsman. I switched to you expecting better; what I have is a broken phone and a lot of patience that has run out.

CORRECT TEXT: I bought a Google Pixel 7 from your online store (order 11223344) on 12 January 2026 because I work from home and rely on it for video calls. On 02 March 2026 the microphone started cutting out: colleagues heard me as if I was underwater, recordings had stutters, and the device rebooted mid-presentation on 09 March. I've done the obvious troubleshooting - updated to the latest security patch on 10/03, factory reset on 12/03, and tested with two different SIMs - no change. The phone is well within warranty. I'm a software engineer and I don't have time for intermittent hardware failures that disrupt my work; I need a replacement or a formal repair under warranty (IMEI 356789012345678). Please confirm the next steps and a realistic turnaround time.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly states the customer has 'exhausted normal channels' and requests to 'speak to a manager or for the case to be referred to the Ombudsman,' indicating a clear intent to escalate beyond standard support. The correct text, while detailing work disruption, maintains a procedural tone, requesting 'next steps and a realistic turnaround time' for a warranty claim without threatening external escalation.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on explicit escalation language (e.g., 'exhausted normal channels,' 'Ombudsman') as a direct indicator of higher urgency, rather than evaluating the inherent criticality of the underlying issue (a faulty phone) in conjunction with the escalation intent. It conflates procedural escalation with the severity of the problem itself.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where customers express frustration and a desire for internal or external escalation, but the core issue remains a standard, non-critical problem, to refine the distinction between customer sentiment/process and true urgency.

Final Contrastive Error Analysis Report

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

ERROR TEXT: My small business line was used for fraudulent calls on 04/03/2026 and an unauthorised charge of GBP 1,240 appeared on the account. I reported this to your fraud desk on 05/03/2026 (reference 84-227) and spoke with Sarah - I was told an investigation would start but the charge remains and my outgoing service was partially suspended on 06/03/2026. My shop depends on that line for orders; normal support channels are closed to me at this point. Please escalate to a manager or provide ombudsman contact details and reverse the fraudulent charges within three working days so I can get back to trading.

CORRECT TEXT: On 15/03/2026 my number was ported away without authorisation and I subsequently discovered several unauthorised transactions totalling GBP 350 on my account. I reported the incident immediately and spoke with the fraud desk on 15/03/2026 and again on 18/03/2026 (agents recorded as Tom R. and Sarah P.). Both times I was told an investigation had been opened but I have received no substantive update, no reversal of the charges and no confirmation that my number has been secured against further unauthorised activity. The unauthorised port removed my access to two-factor authentication for work accounts, which is a material security issue. I therefore request an urgent, documented investigation, immediate reinstatement or suspension of the number to prevent further loss, and a full refund of the fraudulent charges. I have exhausted standard support routes and now require escalation to a senior fraud manager; if I do not receive a written response outlining remedial action within five working days I will lodge a complaint with the ombudsman and consider reporting the breach to Action Fraud.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly states an immediate and ongoing suspension of a core business service ('outgoing service was partially suspended... My shop depends on that line for orders') and requests resolution within a shorter, more immediate timeframe ('within three working days') directly linked to resuming business operations. The correct text describes a security issue and potential business impact, with a slightly longer deadline for a response before external action is threatened.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model appears to be over-indexing on explicit statements of immediate business disruption and short, action-oriented deadlines, interpreting them as indicators of 'High' urgency, even when the overall context (e.g., the nature of the fraud, the lack of physical danger) aligns with 'Medium'. It fails to differentiate between 'critical for business continuity right now' and 'critical for business security/future operations' when the overall threat level is not extreme.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more 'Medium' urgency examples where immediate business operations are impacted or short deadlines are given, but the overall context does not warrant 'High' urgency, to help the model calibrate the severity of such cues.

Pair #55 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: Good morning, I am contacting you because the online assistant failed to resolve my landline dropouts on 18 March 2026. I have a chronic respiratory condition and rely on a stable home phone for medical calls and scheduled nurse visits; intermittent service jeopardises my care. Between 09:10 and 09:35 the chatbot repeatedly suggested 'power cycle your router' despite me explaining the problem affects the PSTN line, not broadband. I cannot manage complex automated menus easily due to limited dexterity, so a human advisor is essential. My account is under Sarah Trent, date of birth 12/11/1958. I would be grateful if you could prioritise this and arrange a call-back to 07400 123456 within 48 hours and escalate to a supervisor. Thank you.

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing as the primary account holder for our family plan (account number ending 4321). Since 14 March I have been trying to sort an issue where my eldest's line keeps getting blocked by your automated assistant which insists there is an unpaid balance when there isn't. I have followed the chatbot's 'solutions' three times (transcript IDs 20260314-1, 20260314-2) and each time it closed the case without fixing service. I then used live chat on 16 March and the agent put me back with the bot. I need this escalated to a manager - I have two children who rely on these lines for school runs and emergencies and this repeated looping is unacceptable. If you cannot resolve this within 72 hours please give me the contact details for your complaints team or ombudsman so I can take it further.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly states a 'chronic respiratory condition' and reliance on the phone for 'medical calls and scheduled nurse visits,' directly linking the service issue to 'jeopardises my care.' In contrast, the correct text mentions 'children who rely on these lines for school runs and emergencies,' which is a less direct and less specific health-related threat.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on explicit mentions of chronic medical conditions and direct jeopardy to medical care, interpreting these as automatic triggers for 'High' urgency, even when the requested resolution timeframe (48 hours) suggests a 'Medium' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where a chronic health condition or medical reliance is mentioned, but the requested resolution time or the immediate threat level places the overall urgency in the 'Medium' category.

ERROR TEXT: I have been with you since university. You knew me as a reliable customer. That is why it stings to find my monthly bill creeping up while new customers are given discounts I was never offered. In January I upgraded to the 150GB plan with the expectation of a loyalty discount being applied; instead I was shifted onto an older tariff that costs more. On 08/03/2026 I checked your comparison page and saw a deal at GBP 25 for 24 months. My bill is GBP 34. Same hardware, same handset. On 10/03/2026 I spoke to Amir Khan who said he would 'look into a loyalty adjustment' and call back within 48 hours. That call never arrived. I called again on 18/03 and was told the system wouldn't automatically apply the discount because my account was set to 'legacy rate' - I have no memory of authorising that. I am a professional with a busy schedule; I track my spending and I do my homework. Your silence and the sluggish remedy feel like a penalty for sticking around. I do not want a script or excuses. I want the GBP 9 difference credited to my account from 01/02/2026 and a guarantee that my monthly fee will match the publicly available offer. If you are unwilling to correct this within four working days, I will move my number and services elsewhere - I have already priced transfer options.

CORRECT TEXT: My business, Harris & Co. Repairs, has depended on your line for telephone bookings for six years. On 11 March I raised a complaint with your retention team (account manager Kevin Patel) about pricing: long-term clients are being charged more than new customers on the same package. Kevin said he would review the account and call back within five working days. There has been no follow-up. Last month we missed two jobs and lost approximately GBP 320 in revenue because callers were presented with a higher tariff message that deterred them from booking. I am not a leisure customer; every call costs me lost work. I am now asking for three things: (1) an immediate adjustment to match the current new-customer rate for our package backdated to 11 March, with the difference credited to our account; (2) a goodwill payment to cover demonstrable lost revenue while this was unresolved; and (3) a named contact who will confirm in writing the adjustment and provide a direct number for escalation. I raised this once already and received an empty promise. My business cannot absorb further delay. Please treat this as urgent and respond with a full resolution within five working days, otherwise I will have to move suppliers and refer the case to the ombudsman because my livelihood is at stake.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states a quantifiable financial loss due to business disruption ('lost approximately GBP 320 in revenue,' 'missed two jobs') and directly links the issue to the customer's 'livelihood' and 'business cannot absorb further delay,' along with an explicit 'Please treat this as urgent' instruction and a threat to involve the ombudsman. The error text, while detailing a financial discrepancy (GBP 9) and a threat to leave, frames the impact more as a personal financial grievance and inconvenience, lacking the direct, quantified business-critical language and explicit urgency commands.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is failing to adequately weigh the cumulative effect of a clear deadline and a threat to leave when the financial impact is presented as a personal discrepancy rather than a direct, quantified business loss or an explicit threat to livelihood. It appears to require more explicit and severe indicators of business impact, direct urgency commands, or regulatory escalation threats to classify as 'Medium' urgency, especially when the financial amount is relatively small.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where personal financial grievances, even with explicit deadlines and threats to leave, are correctly labeled as 'Medium' urgency, especially when the customer emphasizes their professional status and diligence, or when the financial impact, while not business-critical, is clearly causing significant frustration and a firm ultimatum.

Pair #57 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I run a small graphic design studio and rely on your business line (contract reference BUS-987654) for client calls and remote working. On 5 March 2026 I received written notification of a mid-contract price uplift of 12.5% effective 1 April 2026. My contract, signed 1 October 2024, contains no clause allowing unilateral increases of this nature without prior written consent. I have raised this on three separate occasions: I spoke with Ruth on 6 March who advised she would escalate to the business accounts team; I spoke with Tom on 12 March who acknowledged the contract terms and said the notice was "standard"; and I emailed billing on 18 March attaching the signed contract. I am now being billed more for a service that my clients rely on to deliver deadlines. This increase is commercially damaging and, as far as I can see, unlawful under the terms we agreed. I refer you to the Consumer Rights Act 2015 and the general principle that contract variations must be agreed and reasonable. I require written confirmation that the proposed increase will be withdrawn and that my rates will remain as per the original contract. Alternatively, provide clear information, within seven days, on how you will allow me to terminate without penalty if you insist on proceeding. I will consider escalation to the ombudsman and seek legal advice if no satisfactory remedy is provided in the timeframe stated. Please respond with a formal position and a remedial offer within five working days.

CORRECT TEXT: I am contacting you about a mid-contract price increase that has been applied to my Student Unlimited 24 plan without my informed consent. My contract started on 5 September 2024 at a rate of GBP 15.00 per month and was explicitly represented to me as a fixed amount for 24 months when I signed up. On my latest bill dated 1 March 2026 the monthly charge rose to GBP 19.00, an increase of GBP 4 per month which equates to an extra GBP 48 annually - a significant amount on my limited student income.

This is my first formal complaint. I have limited finances: I work 10 hours a week in retail alongside my studies and budget tightly for rent, bills and course costs. A mid-contract uplift was neither communicated to me in a clear, timely manner nor agreed. I require a detailed explanation of the contractual clause that purportedly allows this change, a copy of the notice you sent (date and method), and immediate reinstatement of the original GBP 15 rate or an option to exit the contract without penalty. If you cannot honour the original pricing, please provide a compensatory arrangement that recognises my financial position, such as a reduced rate, account credit for the excess charges since 1 March 2026, or a goodwill gesture sufficient to cover the shortfall for the remainder of the contract.

Please respond with a substantive solution within five working days. I would prefer to resolve this directly, but I will escalate to the Citizens Advice consumer service and Ofcom if necessary.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly details personal financial hardship, stating 'significant amount on my limited student income' and 'I have limited finances: I work 10 hours a week in retail alongside my studies and budget tightly for rent, bills and course costs.' In contrast, the error text describes 'commercially damaging' impact on a business and a history of three failed attempts to resolve the issue, which, while indicating escalating frustration and unresolved problems, is framed less as immediate personal financial distress.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be more sensitive to explicit, detailed descriptions of personal financial vulnerability as a 'Medium' urgency cue than to the cumulative urgency implied by a history of multiple failed attempts at resolution or the commercial impact on a small business, even when combined with legal references and escalation threats.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where a history of multiple failed attempts to resolve an issue, or commercial damage to a small business, are explicitly labeled as 'Medium' urgency, even without direct personal financial hardship.

Pair #58 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: Hi - I'm a student and on a tight budget. My 1 March bill includes a 'service admin' charge of GBP 7.50 that I never agreed to. I raised this on 10 March and spoke to Laila on 12 March who said she'd look into it, but my next statement still shows the same fee. Can you please remove the charge and confirm when my bill has been corrected? I can forward the previous emails if needed.

CORRECT TEXT: Hi - I'm a student on a tight budget and I noticed an unexpected charge on my March bill (dated 15/03/2026): "priority support" GBP 9.99 and a one-off equipment handling fee GBP 4.50. I didn't opt into any extras when I signed up and I review my balance carefully, so this landed me short for rent this month. This is the first time I've raised it with you; could you confirm why these items were added, remove them if they were billed in error and refund the GBP 14.49? Also please tell me how to prevent add?ons appearing on future invoices, since I can't afford surprise costs while I'm studying.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states a severe, immediate financial consequence ('landed me short for rent this month') directly linked to the unexpected charge, which is absent in the error text. While the error text mentions a 'tight budget' and a repeated, unresolved issue, it lacks this direct, high-impact consequence.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be heavily weighted towards explicit, immediate, and critical financial consequences (e.g., 'short for rent') for 'Medium' urgency, potentially under-prioritizing the cumulative urgency implied by a repeated, unresolved billing error, even when combined with a 'tight budget' context.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where 'Medium' urgency is conveyed through the frustration of a repeated, unresolved issue, even without an explicit, immediate critical financial consequence, especially when combined with a 'tight budget' context.

Pair #59 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: My phone and a linked medical pendant rely on 3G and I was advised on 11 March by James in technical support that my service was unaffected. I have since received a notification about a planned 3G switch-off and the device will no longer function when that happens. I raised this with your team on 18 March but was told only that I could buy a new handset; there was no practical assistance offered and no clear deadline given for when the current service will cease. As I use the pendant for a health-related alert, I need an immediate plan: either provide a compatible 4G replacement handset or a device that preserves pendant connectivity, alongside details of any additional fees. Please also explain why the initial advisor gave incorrect reassurance and provide timescales for the remedy so I can maintain my emergency monitoring without risk.

CORRECT TEXT: I recently ported my number to your service on 25 January 2026 and on 15 February the apparent 3G network change degraded the service so severely that the mobile data I purchased is no longer fit for purpose. I raised this previously on 10 February (reference SRN652134) and received no substantive resolution. Under the Consumer Rights Act 2015 and your own stated terms, services supplied must be of satisfactory quality and as described. They are currently neither.

I have attempted troubleshooting with your technical support on 11 and 14 February yet connectivity remains intermittent when using legacy 3G-only devices required by some of my field staff. As a recent transferee from another supplier I reasonably expected continuity; instead we face operational disruption. I therefore request the following remedies within seven days: (1) immediate provision of a compatible network fallback or a suitable device replacement at no additional cost; (2) a pro rata rebate for the period of impaired service; and (3) a clear statement of steps you will take to prevent recurrence. If you fail to resolve the matter promptly I will seek contract termination without penalty and consider escalating this to Ofcom or the ADR scheme.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text explicitly links the issue to personal health and safety ('health-related alert', 'emergency monitoring without risk') and demands an 'immediate plan' for a future event (3G switch-off). In contrast, the Correct Text frames the urgency around service degradation and operational disruption, providing a clear, medium-term deadline ('within seven days') and a conditional escalation threat, without direct mentions of immediate health or safety risks.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-prioritize explicit keywords related to personal health, safety, and the word 'immediate' (e.g., 'immediate plan', 'emergency monitoring') even when the overall context indicates a request for a plan for a future event rather than an ongoing, immediate crisis. It fails to adequately weigh the immediacy of the threat versus the request for a plan for a future event, and under-weights explicit, medium-term deadlines.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where requests for 'immediate plans' for future critical events (like planned service discontinuations affecting health devices) are labeled as 'Medium' urgency, especially when contrasted with texts describing ongoing, immediate health or safety crises.

Pair #60 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: Been with you since 2012 so I don't like having to chase this, but here we are. On 18 March I got an odd text purporting to be from your billing team asking me to confirm my bank details; I didn't reply. Two days later a GBP 200 debit appeared on my account (posted 20 March). I spoke to Mark on 21 March who said he'd raise a fraud investigation (ref 54321) and call back - no callback yet. I want that GBP 200 reversed and my account locked down with two-factor added. Also tell me how an outside SMS managed to trigger a charge against my service. I'm frustrated that I need to follow up again, please treat this as a priority.

CORRECT TEXT: I've called three times over the last two weeks because our family plan was targeted by scam texts that led to several premium-rate charges on 11 and 12 March. I manage the kids' allowances and those charges wiped out our top-up. I spoke to Liam on 13 March who removed two of the charges but said the rest needed investigation; then I called again on 16 March and was told a different ticket owner would call back - they didn't. My daughter keeps getting messages asking to 'verify' her number. I need two things: immediate refunds for the unauthorised premium charges and a block on premium-rate and international-pay services on all lines on my account while you sort this. I'm not asking for sympathy, I'm asking for the account secured and a timeline. Please treat this as urgent - I can't keep chasing while my kids lose their credit and I worry about identity theft.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly states a single, large, confirmed fraudulent debit (GBP 200) that has already occurred and been posted, immediately followed by a demand for account lockdown and a fraud investigation. The correct text, while detailing multiple charges and an ongoing scam, frames the financial impact as 'wiped out our top-up' and a 'worry about identity theft,' lacking the direct, confirmed, large-sum fraudulent transaction and the immediate demand for account lockdown due to a confirmed breach.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on the combination of a specific, large, confirmed fraudulent financial transaction and explicit security breach remediation requests (e.g., 'account locked down', 'fraud investigation') as an automatic trigger for 'High' urgency, failing to consider the overall context that might classify it as 'Medium' (e.g., it's a follow-up, not a first report of an ongoing, escalating crisis).

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where a single, confirmed fraudulent transaction (even if significant) is classified as 'Medium' urgency, especially when it's a follow-up or the immediate threat is contained, to teach the model to distinguish between a severe event and an ongoing escalating crisis.

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

Pair #61 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I have been living with a chronic condition for several years and rely on my landline for telecare calls. Since your last repair promise the line has been unreliable. My initial contact about the fault was in late January, and I have phoned four times since then - conversations with advisors named Noor (01/02, ticket 2218), Daniel (08/02), and two web chats on 15/02 and 01/03 - each time I was told an engineer would arrive within 3-5 working days, then given a new date, which was not honoured. On 2026-03-09 an engineer attended but left without fixing the intermittent dropouts and said a specialist visit would be scheduled; I have had no follow-up. Because of this, my medication delivery service has trouble contacting me, and I missed a vital nurse appointment on 2026-03-14 when calls failed. I have exhausted routine complaint steps and now require a manager-level review. Please escalate to a supervisor and, if you cannot guarantee an effective repair within 72 hours, forward the complaint to the ombudsman for independent review. I need clear action and a reliable phone line urgently.

CORRECT TEXT: I need to explain the timeline because the problem hasn't been fixed despite multiple promises and it's affecting my kids. We moved the family plan to you on 2026-02-01 - Family Share 40 - because of the unlimited weekend calls, and since then our broadband has been dropping every evening just as homework starts. On 2026-02-10 I spoke to a technician named Jamie who said an engineer would attend the exchange within 48 hours; no one came. I called again on 2026-02-16 and spoke to Latisha who issued a new ticket (ref AX-447) and promised a replacement router the week after. The new router never arrived; I chased again on 2026-02-24 and was told the delivery was delayed until 2026-02-28. That date passed and on 2026-03-05 I phoned for the fourth time - the agent, Mark, admitted there'd been a scheduling error but could only offer another appointment for 2026-03-12 which clashed with my son's after-school club. Each missed commitment means my children miss online lessons and I have to juggle work calls around unstable Wi-Fi. I am tired of being given dates that don't happen and would like a firm resolution: either a guaranteed engineer visit within three working days that fits my availability (weekday evenings 18:00-20:00) or a full month credit for the disrupted service. Please confirm the plan you will follow and the precise time of attendance.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly states a direct impact on critical health services ('missed a vital nurse appointment', 'medication delivery service has trouble contacting me') and includes a time-bound threat of external regulatory escalation ('forward the complaint to the ombudsman for independent review' if not resolved within '72 hours'). The correct text, while detailing significant inconvenience and impact on children's education, lacks these specific high-urgency health or external legal/regulatory escalation cues.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on explicit mentions of critical health impacts and specific, time-bound threats of external regulatory escalation (e.g., ombudsman within 72 hours), interpreting these as definitive 'High' urgency triggers, even when the overall context might warrant a 'Medium' classification.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where direct health impacts or explicit, time-bound external escalation threats are present but the overall context still warrants a 'Medium' urgency label.

Pair #62 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: This is the first time I am bringing up mobile coverage problems at our site. I run a small delivery business in the WS5 postcode and my drivers are experiencing frequent call drops and slow data in the Hartsdown Road area; yesterday, 20 March, a delivery driver lost navigation signal three times during a run which caused a late drop and a customer complaint. We rely on mobile data for routing and proof-of-delivery, so even intermittent coverage is disruptive to operations. I would appreciate a coverage check for the site and details of any planned network work. Please let me know whether this is a known issue in the area and the expected timeframe for improvement, and provide a single contact to follow up. I am raising this proactively so we can avoid more missed deliveries.

CORRECT TEXT: I am disabled and dependent on my mobile for essential monitoring and contact with carers. For the past six months my coverage at home has deteriorated to the point where calls drop and SMS messages fail to deliver. I have been patient and methodical - I first reported this in a web chat on 1 February (case reference visible in my account), then spoke with an adviser called Priya on 10 February who logged the issue as intermittent coverage, and later with Reuben on 3 March who said an investigation would follow. After three more attempts through the app and two engineer visits arranged by your team, nothing has changed. On 14 March a scheduled remote health check failed to send data because the signal dropped; my care team could not receive the telemetry for two hours. That delay put me in a vulnerable position and caused real anxiety. I have documented timestamps, call logs and the packet loss logs Reuben requested and uploaded them to the portal. I have been told twice that there is 'no fault found', despite clear evidence of repeated outages between 17:00 and 22:00 on most days. This is not acceptable. I need a lasting technical solution - either a signal booster installed, relocation to a different cell, or a SIM/plan that uses a partner network in my area - and I need your proposed remedy within five working days. I am asking that this be escalated to a senior network manager immediately and that you include the Ombudsman contacts in your response if you cannot prioritise a fix. I cannot continue to rely on inconsistent service where my health and safety are at stake.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly details a long history of unresolved issues despite multiple prior attempts and includes explicit demands for immediate escalation, a tight deadline for resolution, and a threat of involving an external body (Ombudsman). In contrast, the error text presents the issue as a 'first time' report, describes business disruption, and makes polite requests for information and a coverage check, lacking any history of failed resolution or explicit escalation demands.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model is failing to adequately weigh the combination of a documented history of failed resolution attempts and explicit, time-bound demands for escalation and external intervention as strong indicators of 'Medium' urgency. It appears to be over-indexing on phrases like 'first time' and 'proactively' in the error text, leading it to misclassify the urgency despite significant business impact.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples that clearly delineate 'Medium' urgency through a combination of a history of unresolved issues and explicit demands for escalation/deadlines, even when the immediate impact isn't life-threatening.

Pair #63 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: This is my second formal notification about persistent slow speeds. On 15 March I logged a fault (reference 2023-00378) and received no effective remedy. My package is advertised as up to 67 Mbps yet tests on 22 April and 30 April repeatedly show sustained throughput below 6 Mbps during peak hours. As a student living on very limited funds, contracted service levels matter. Under the Consumer Rights Act 2015 and the Ofcom broadband minimum standards you are obliged to provide services as described and to keep me informed of corrective measures. I request (a) a technical report of line tests carried out since 15 March, (b) an explanation of why the service remains below advertised levels, (c) a pro rata rebate for the period of under-delivery, and (d) clear timescales for remediation. If you do not provide these within 14 days, I will escalate to the Communications Ombudsman and seek remedies under the relevant consumer protections.

CORRECT TEXT: I subscribed to your 'Fibre 75' package on 1 March 2026. Your contract and sales literature state 'up to 75Mbps' and a minimum reasonable service; in practice I am receiving consistently substandard throughput. Independent tests conducted on Speedtest.net and SamKnows on 5 April and 12 April show median download speeds of 6-8Mbps and latency spikes above 120ms during working hours. I have retained the logs and timestamps. This performance falls well below what was advertised and appears to be a breach of the implied term to provide services with reasonable care and skill under the Consumer Rights Act 2015. I require a remediation plan within 14 days: either an engineer visit that resolves the fault to deliver sustained speeds consistent with the package, a proportionate rebate for the period of reduced service, or the right to terminate without penalty if you cannot achieve an acceptable outcome. If no satisfactory response is received within 14 days I will escalate to Citizens Advice and the Telecommunications Ombudsman and consider further legal options to enforce my rights.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly frames the situation as a 'breach of the implied term' and presents 'the right to terminate without penalty' as a direct, immediate consequence if a remediation plan is not met. The error text, while referencing consumer rights and threatening Ombudsman escalation, does not explicitly state a contractual breach or the right to terminate the contract as an immediate consequence of the current service failure.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be failing to adequately weigh the cumulative impact of repeated failures and the explicit mention of consumer protection acts when a direct, immediate contractual consequence like 'right to terminate without penalty' is absent. It prioritizes the explicit threat of contract termination over the implicit threat of legal action via an ombudsman, even when a deadline is given.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more 'Medium' urgency examples where the escalation threat is clearly stated (e.g., Ombudsman, legal action) but without the explicit mention of contract termination, to teach the model to recognize the urgency in the combination of persistent issues, legal references, and a clear deadline for external escalation.

Pair #64 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I switched to your network from my previous provider on 01/02/2026 and since then the handling of billing and complaints has been unsatisfactory. The specific issue: I was billed twice for the same monthly charge - a debit of GBP 72.50 on 28/02/2026 and another identical debit on 01/03/2026 - and attempts to get this corrected have produced little progress. I phoned on 05/02/2026, when Tom opened a case but told me he would 'escalate' and provide an update within 7 days; no update arrived. I called again on 12/02/2026 and spoke with Priya who promised a refund and a gesture of goodwill; that promise was reiterated on 05/03/2026 (case REF: BIL-4421) but the refund still has not been issued. I sent an email to the complaints team on 18/03/2026 and received an automated acknowledgement only. I have kept copies of the bank debits, call times and the chat transcripts and they show repeated assurances without action. I am requesting a full immediate correction of the double charge, reimbursement of GBP 72.50 to my bank account, an explanation of why internal commitments have not been met, and at least two months' bill credit for the inconvenience. Please escalate this to a senior complaints handler and provide a timeline for resolution within seven calendar days, otherwise I will consider taking the case to the Telecommunications Ombudsman.

CORRECT TEXT: I switched from another provider on 1 February 2026 and since then the handling of my subsequent concerns has been unsatisfactory. Over the past six weeks I have contacted your team on 3 separate occasions: 5 February (spoke with Priya, ref. 300112), 12 February (Ahmed, ref. 300428) and 20 February (customer services, ref. 301003). Each time I was assured that an engineer would be scheduled to resolve intermittent voice-dropouts and incorrect billing, but no engineer visit has been logged and the latest bill still includes charges that were meant to be removed. I have tried the usual channels and exhausted the standard complaint route; I am therefore requesting escalation to a manager and, if necessary, referral to the independent ombudsman. I would like a named contact, a clear timeline for the corrective actions you will take, and a corrected bill showing any refunds within seven days. I am prepared to provide call recordings and screenshots of the bills if that assists your investigation.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states the exhaustion of standard complaint routes ('exhausted the standard complaint route') and presents the threat of ombudsman referral as a direct, immediate consequence ('if necessary, referral to the independent ombudsman'). In contrast, the error text details a long history of failed attempts but lacks a concise summary of 'exhaustion' and frames the ombudsman threat as a conditional, future consideration ('otherwise I will consider taking the case').

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be overly reliant on explicit summary statements of 'exhaustion of standard routes' and direct, immediate phrasing of external escalation threats, rather than inferring these conditions from a detailed chronological account of unresolved issues and conditional threats.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where the exhaustion of internal complaint channels is implied through a detailed history of failed attempts, even if not explicitly stated, and where threats of external action are phrased conditionally.

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

Pair #65 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I am contacting you about an incorrect sale applied to my family account after a call on 3 March. The agent added an upgrade package and a handset finance agreement to my eldest son's line without my explicit consent. I noticed the additional GBP 28 monthly charge on 8 March and called on 9 March; the advisor removed the handset financing but said the upgrade would be reversed by 11 March. That reversal did not happen. I have now phoned on 9 March, 11 March, 16 March and 22 March - four contacts in total - and each time I have been told the case is with another team. The account reference is FAM-4419.

I am a parent managing multiple lines and need this corrected. Please cancel the upgrade, confirm the monthly charge is reversed retrospectively to 8 March, and remove any associated credit checks or arrears entries on our account immediately. I would also like confirmation that agent training will be reviewed to prevent a recurrence. I expect written confirmation of the correction and refund within 48 hours.

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing because I have been repeatedly sold the wrong package and I expect this to be corrected without further delay. On 27/01/2026 I called your sales line and spoke with Emma Reynolds who told me she was upgrading my existing landline tariff to the 'Home Value Plus' bundle. I explicitly said I only wanted an upgrade to include caller display and a reasonable evening-minute allowance; I did not agree to added broadband, nor to any minimum 24-month commitment. On 29/01 your records show a new contract was activated that includes broadband I never asked for and an 18-month term with an early termination condition. I returned three calls over the next fortnight - 02/02, 09/02 and 18/02 - speaking to Sam, Priya, and then a supervisor called Tom. Each time I explained that the sale was incorrect. Each time I was promised a correction would be made. None of those promises were kept. I have now been billed for the unwanted broadband and am being threatened with a cancellation fee if I end it. I am an older customer and rely on clear, accurate transactions. I am not willing to accept charges arising from your agent's error. Please cancel the unwanted broadband, revert my account to the tariff I previously had, remove any early termination conditions added in error and refund the incorrect charges. I expect a written confirmation and a named manager to contact me within 48 hours. If you do not correct this promptly I will lodge a formal complaint with the Ombudsman and seek reimbursement for any costs incurred.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states a clear, formal threat of external escalation (lodging a complaint with the Ombudsman and seeking reimbursement) if the issue is not resolved promptly. The error text, while conveying frustration and repeated failures, does not include such a direct, formal threat of external action.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be heavily weighted towards explicit, formal threats of external escalation (e.g., 'Ombudsman,' 'legal action,' 'regulatory body') as a primary indicator of 'High' urgency. It seems to undervalue or not sufficiently combine other strong urgency cues like repeated failed attempts, unfulfilled promises, and explicit demands for immediate action within a short timeframe when an external threat is absent.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where 'High' urgency is indicated by a combination of repeated internal failures, explicit demands for immediate action, and short deadlines, even without an explicit threat of external regulatory or legal action.

Pair #66 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: Account holder for our family plan here - I am contacting you again about repeated incorrect data overage charges. Since 1 February I have been billed an extra GBP 15.00 on multiple statements. I have contacted support four times over the last six weeks (4 Feb - Marie, ref 33021; 18 Feb - Carlos, ref 34402; 3 Mar - Sophie, ref 35790; app chat on 10 Mar) and each time was told it would be resolved, but the overages keep appearing. I would like corrected bills for the past two months, a refund of the disputed sums, and an explanation of why this continues despite several contacts. I expect a resolution within 14 days.

CORRECT TEXT: Hello - I'm following up on an incorrect charge that appeared on my account. On 18 March I raised this via chat (chat ref CH-2026-0318-55) and spoke to Harpreet, who said it would be corrected. The portal still shows the GBP 42.99 charge for an extra line I never activated (transaction ID TX-2026-0318-0042). I've attached screenshots in my previous message and can provide more if needed. This is my second request; I'm polite about it but I do expect timely action. Please reverse the charge and confirm the refund date within seven days, otherwise I'll need to escalate further. Kind regards, Alex Reid.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly details a higher frequency and volume of past failed resolution attempts ('four times over the last six weeks', 'multiple statements', 'overages keep appearing') compared to the correct text's more general 'second request'.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on the cumulative history and frequency of past failed interactions as a primary driver of urgency, interpreting a high count of unresolved issues as a stronger signal for 'Medium' urgency, even when other cues like deadlines or explicit escalation threats might suggest otherwise.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where a high number of past failed customer service interactions still corresponds to a 'Low' urgency, especially when the requested resolution timeframe is not immediate or the tone remains non-threatening.

ERROR TEXT: I phoned on 10 March and spoke with Sophie Reynolds in faults team. At that time I explained, again, that the router you installed on 3 March is not accessible for me - I am visually impaired and rely on tactile labelling and a fixed-wired handset. Sophie assured me that an engineer would carry out the specialised adaptation and reconfigure the voice settings by 16 March. That promised visit did not happen. On 18 March I called back and was given reference 984215; I was told another engineer would attend within three working days. Nothing. No call, no text, no appointment. I have now been left with intermittent broadband and no reliable phone for three weeks. My medication delivery depends on being able to call the driver and today I missed a scheduled collection because the line dropped mid-call. This is not a minor inconvenience - it puts my health at risk. I need the adaptation your team committed to; I need a guaranteed appointment within 48 hours and a named engineer who understands the accessibility requirements. If you cannot do that I require clear instructions on how to escalate to a supervisor and a timescale for when this will be resolved. This is my second formal attempt to get action. I cannot keep repeating the same details every time I phone. Please treat this as urgent and act accordingly.

CORRECT TEXT: I switched from another provider six weeks ago and since then the broadband faults promised as fixed have returned. I reported an intermittent drop on 10 February (ref 66011). An engineer was booked for 18 February but did not arrive and I received no notification. I called back on 19 February and was offered a new appointment for 25 February which was then cancelled by your team that morning, with a promise of a callback that did not come. This is my second formal request - I raised the issue once before and was given no lasting remedy. When I called on 26 February I was told an intervention would be carried out remotely and that a visible ticket would be open; I still see repeated drops in the connection and the line statistics show packet loss and high latency during evenings. I am asking you to confirm a guaranteed engineer visit within the next five working days, with the option of an evening appointment, and to provide a credit for the periods of unusable service dating back to 10 February. Please supply a clear plan of action and a specific appointment time rather than an open promise. I expect a reply confirming the visit and the proposed credit amount.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly states a direct, immediate health risk ('puts my health at risk') linked to a critical dependency (medication delivery) and demands a resolution within a very short timeframe ('48 hours'). The correct text describes a persistent service issue and inconvenience, but without an explicit, immediate threat to health or safety, and requests a resolution within a longer timeframe ('five working days').

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be heavily weighted towards explicit mentions of 'health at risk' and very short, urgent timeframes (e.g., '48 hours'), interpreting these as definitive indicators of 'High' urgency, even when other contextual factors might place the overall urgency at 'Medium'.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where explicit health risks or very short resolution demands are present, but the overall context still warrants a 'Medium' urgency label, to teach the model to weigh these signals against other contextual factors.

ERROR TEXT: I have been a customer since 2012 (account number 003-771-224) and am formally requesting cancellation of my broadband and line rental with effect from 30 April 2026. I have attempted to conclude this matter on three prior occasions: a telephone discussion on 2 March 2026 with a retention advisor (ref 2M-450), an email to customerrelations@yourcompany.co.uk on 9 March (no substantive reply), and a chat interaction on 15 March with an agent named Claire (chat ref C-15-03-2026). Each time I received conflicting information about notice periods and outstanding equipment return obligations. I was then billed on 20 March for the next full month despite being told the cancellation would be actioned. Having loyally remained with you for over a decade, this careless handling of a straightforward cancellation request is disappointing. Please confirm in writing the acceptance of my cancellation request, the final billing date, the amount to be refunded pro rata (if any), and clear instructions for returning the router so I am not charged further. I require formal acknowledgement within ten working days and cessation of direct debit collections from the effective date. If you need any further documentation from me, tell me precisely what and by when; otherwise proceed to process the termination as requested.

CORRECT TEXT: This is my first contact regarding cancellation of the family mobile bundle attached to account ending 9421. On 18 March 2026 I attempted to cancel via the online portal; the interface accepted my request but did not issue any confirmation or final date, and the dashboard still shows the service as active. As a parent organising household accounts I need a formal written confirmation of contract termination, the effective end date, and an itemised final bill showing any early-termination charges (if applicable). Please treat this as my formal notice to end the service and send the necessary documentation to the registered email address within 14 days so I can make alternative arrangements.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text explicitly details a history of multiple failed attempts to resolve the issue, conflicting information, and an incorrect billing event, using phrases like "three prior occasions," "conflicting information," and "billed... despite being told the cancellation would be actioned." In contrast, the Correct Text explicitly states "This is my first contact" and describes only a single, less severe, unconfirmed online attempt.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be over-indexing on the narrative of past negative interactions and customer frustration (e.g., repeated attempts, conflicting information, billing errors) as a primary indicator of urgency, even when the requested action (cancellation date, acknowledgement deadline) itself indicates low urgency. It fails to adequately weigh the actual effective date of the request or the acknowledgement timeframe against the historical context of service issues.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where a detailed history of customer frustration and service failures is present, but the requested action or deadline still falls under a 'Low' urgency category.

ERROR TEXT: Hi - I switched over from FastLine on 05/03/2026 and tried to sort my voicemail and call forwarding via your chatbot last night (23/03/2026, around 21:40). The bot kept asking for my postcode, then told me to restart my phone, then looped back to asking for the same postcode. After 20 minutes it offered a transcript that didn't solve anything. I'd expected an easy setup after switching but ended up more confused. Would someone human please pick this up? I'd like call forwarding enabled and a quick explanation of how to use the visual voicemail feature. If you can't sort it within 72 hours, let me know what compensation you offer for the time wasted - I'm not keen on long automated loops when a real person could fix it in a few minutes. My account is SW-55678 and my preferred contact is WhatsApp on 07788 445599.

CORRECT TEXT: Tried your chatbot on 22 March because the kids' tablets kept losing the connection while they were doing schoolwork. The bot kept telling me to 'restart the router' and sent the same vague troubleshooting steps three times like it had a loop. I typed, specifically, that restarting didn't help and that the signal drops every 20-30 minutes throughout the day; the bot replied with 'we'll look into it' and closed the chat. No human. No follow-up. We split one home connection between my partner, two kids doing remote learning and me working part-time. I can cope with an occasional blip, but this pattern is screwing up classes and leaving me juggling devices and calls. I don't want scripted responses; I want a person who will run a line test or escalate the range issue. This is the first time I'm asking for help - please send someone who can actually troubleshoot beyond 'try restarting'.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly details an ongoing, critical operational disruption impacting essential daily activities (remote learning, work) for multiple users, using phrases like 'screwing up classes.' The error text, while expressing frustration and setting a 72-hour deadline, frames the urgency around personal inconvenience and a conditional threat of compensation, rather than an immediate, critical operational impact.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to prioritize explicit descriptions of immediate, critical operational disruption affecting essential daily functions over conditional threats of future action (e.g., compensation) or deadlines related to personal inconvenience, even when a specific timeframe is provided.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where a clear deadline combined with a threat of compensation for significant inconvenience, even if not an immediate critical operational failure, is explicitly labeled as 'Medium' urgency.

Pair #70 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I am the primary account holder for a family plan (four lines, account opened 2016). I am contacting you about what appears to be a loyalty penalty. New customers are currently offered a GBP 20 monthly discount on a comparable package, yet my monthly bill increased by GBP 8 from GBP 62 to GBP 70 on 01/04 despite no change to our usage. This is the first time I have raised the matter; I checked the online offers and spoke briefly to sales via the website on 08/04 but did not lodge a formal complaint. My three children are on the plan and the extra cost is affecting our household budget. I would like a review of the pricing applied to my account, an explanation for the discrepancy, and a request that you match the new-customer rate or apply a pro rata credit from 01/04 until the price is adjusted. Please reply with the steps you will take and the expected timescale for correction.

CORRECT TEXT: My business, Harris & Co. Repairs, has depended on your line for telephone bookings for six years. On 11 March I raised a complaint with your retention team (account manager Kevin Patel) about pricing: long-term clients are being charged more than new customers on the same package. Kevin said he would review the account and call back within five working days. There has been no follow-up. Last month we missed two jobs and lost approximately GBP 320 in revenue because callers were presented with a higher tariff message that deterred them from booking. I am not a leisure customer; every call costs me lost work. I am now asking for three things: (1) an immediate adjustment to match the current new-customer rate for our package backdated to 11 March, with the difference credited to our account; (2) a goodwill payment to cover demonstrable lost revenue while this was unresolved; and (3) a named contact who will confirm in writing the adjustment and provide a direct number for escalation. I raised this once already and received an empty promise. My business cannot absorb further delay. Please treat this as urgent and respond with a full resolution within five working days, otherwise I will have to move suppliers and refer the case to the ombudsman because my livelihood is at stake.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text contains explicit statements of urgency ('treat this as urgent', 'cannot absorb further delay'), quantifiable severe business impact ('lost approximately GBP 320 in revenue', 'my livelihood is at stake'), and clear threats of escalation ('move suppliers', 'refer to the ombudsman') alongside a history of failed resolution attempts. In contrast, the error text lacks these explicit urgency markers, presents a less severe and non-quantified personal impact ('affecting our household budget'), and explicitly states it's the 'first time' raising the matter, which signals less urgency from an escalation perspective.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be heavily reliant on explicit urgency phrases, quantifiable severe financial loss, and clear threats of escalation or a history of failed resolution attempts to classify 'Medium' urgency. It fails to adequately infer 'Medium' urgency from a 'loyalty penalty' and a direct, ongoing financial increase when these are presented without such strong, explicit cues, especially when the text indicates it's a first-time complaint.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where financial penalties or unfair pricing, even without explicit threats or prior failed escalations, are labeled as 'Medium' urgency, particularly when they involve ongoing costs or impact essential household budgets, to teach the model to infer urgency from the nature of the financial impact itself.

ERROR TEXT: To the Customer Services Team,

I am an elderly customer and not confident with new technology, so I rely on being able to reach a person quickly when I need help. On 5 March 2026 I phoned your general helpline to get assistance resetting my home router; after an initial automated menu I was kept on hold for 46 minutes before hanging up because I could not wait any longer. I tried again on 12 March 2026 and this time was on hold for 58 minutes; when I finally spoke to Louise she said she would arrange a priority callback and that someone would ring me back within 48 hours - no one called.

This is my second formal attempt to get this resolved; I raised the issue previously by telephone and nothing has changed. The long waiting times are preventing me from sorting a simple connection problem and are causing unnecessary anxiety. I need either a guaranteed call-back slot at a set time (I am available on weekdays between 10:00 and 12:00) or a local engineer visit arranged within the next five working days. Please respond by phone to the number on my account or, if you prefer email, let me know a precise time when you intend to call.

I expect fair treatment and a practical solution without further delay.

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing to escalate an ongoing issue with excessive call-waiting times. I have been a customer since 2007 and, having exhausted the usual contact channels, now require managerial intervention. Over the past week I attempted to speak to your team on three separate occasions: 15 March (waited 47 minutes), 17 March (62 minutes), and 22 March (85 minutes) before I was forced to abandon the calls due to work commitments. Each time I queued for general enquiries regarding a billing discrepancy on invoice INV-3324 and never reached a live adviser. I have also used the online webchat twice with automated replies that did not resolve the billing question. As a long-standing customer this level of access is unsatisfactory; reasonable telephone access is an expectation of the service. Please arrange for a senior manager to contact me directly within three working days to discuss the outstanding bill and to explain what steps you will take to reduce waiting times. If I do not receive a satisfactory response I will forward this complaint to the Communications Ombudsman. Contact me at the phone number on file between 09:00 and 11:00 on weekdays. Thank you for your prompt attention.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly states a threat of escalating the complaint to an external regulatory body ('Communications Ombudsman') and demands 'managerial intervention' within a tight 3-day deadline. The Error Text, while detailing repeated internal failures and a 'second formal attempt,' lacks any explicit threat of external escalation and requests a resolution within a slightly longer 5-day timeframe, focusing more on personal anxiety and inconvenience.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is failing to adequately weigh the cumulative impact of repeated internal failures and a general demand for 'without further delay' as indicators of 'Medium' urgency, especially when these are not accompanied by an explicit threat of external escalation or a very short, manager-level deadline.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where 'Medium' urgency is conveyed through a history of unresolved internal issues and a clear demand for prompt resolution, even without an explicit threat of external regulatory action.

ERROR TEXT: My student budget is already stretched, so unexpected billing or slow help is a real problem. I changed to your Student SIM 10GB plan on 01 February and was careful to set up direct debit at GBP 9.99. On 03 March you debited GBP 27.49 with no explanation. Since then I've tried to get clarity: I spent an hour with your chatbot on 04 March (it repeatedly suggested restarting the phone, which is pointless for a billing issue), I emailed customer support on 08 March and received an automated reply telling me to use the same chatbot, and on 11 March I spoke briefly to an advisor called Peter who said it would be escalated but I have had no follow-up. I am on a tight income and that extra GBP 17.50 matters. I have attached a screenshot of the card statement and my account page showing the plan set at GBP 9.99. Please explain the extra charge, refund the difference to my bank account, and confirm how you will prevent this happening again. I have been forced to exhaust the usual help routes already - escalate to a manager and, if necessary, I will refer this to the telecommunications ombudsman for a timely resolution.

CORRECT TEXT: I have been trying to get a human being to help me for weeks. I am registered as having chronic respiratory illness and rely on my home line and your broadband to run the oxygen monitoring app and to stay in touch with carers. On 8 February I reported intermittent dropouts; on 15 February I followed up because the problem was worse; on 22 February I used the online chat; and on 3 March I contacted you again after a full day without a usable connection - four contacts in total. Each time the so?called assistant handled my messages. It refuses to understand that I cannot perform the suggested fixes. The bot repeatedly asks me to reboot equipment I cannot lift and to remove batteries that my carer manages. It gives scripted responses that do not match what I type and then closes the session with "issue resolved" when nothing has changed. Yesterday, 12 March, I finally managed to get a text transfer to an agent named Maya who typed a single line then disappeared for 45 minutes and never returned. I have a case number from that interaction: 975312. The automated system will not escalate to a priority care review and it will not book an engineer. This is not about convenience; it is about my safety and the ability of my carers to contact me. I need a competent, human adviser to call me at my landline (not a chat) between 10:00 and 16:00 on a weekday within the next three working days, and I expect a promised appointment to be honoured. If you cannot provide appropriate, accessible support for customers with medical needs then you must tell me how you will arrange alternative assistance immediately. I cannot keep being passed to scripted replies that are irrelevant to my situation. Please act on case 975312 without delay.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly links the service failure to the user's physical safety and medical needs, using phrases like 'chronic respiratory illness,' 'oxygen monitoring app,' and 'my safety,' and includes specific, near-term deadlines ('within the next three working days,' 'immediately'). The Error Text, while detailing financial hardship and repeated failed attempts, lacks this direct, critical health/safety link and the same level of immediate temporal pressure, relying instead on a general 'timely resolution' and a financial impact.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to heavily prioritize explicit mentions of physical safety, health, and critical life-sustaining services, along with specific, near-term deadlines, as primary indicators of 'Medium' urgency. It seems to under-prioritize financial hardship, even when combined with extensive customer service failures and threats of external escalation, if a direct, immediate threat to well-being is not present.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where financial hardship, combined with extensive customer service failures and explicit threats of external escalation (e.g., ombudsman), are clearly labeled as 'Medium' urgency, even without a direct health/safety component.

Final Contrastive Error Analysis Report

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

ERROR TEXT: I am 78 years old, partially deaf and reliant on my landline for medical calls. I have tried every method you recommend and have received nothing but delays and contradictory information. On 2 February 2026 I telephoned your complaints line and spoke to Kevin, who said someone would phone back the same day. No call came. On 9 February I visited a local shop to use their Wi?Fi and sent an email which received an automatic acknowledgement only. On 16 February I was told by two different agents that my case was closed; I did not authorise closure. The failure to provide consistent communication and the repeated mislabelling of my case as resolved is unacceptable given my dependence on the service to contact my GP and the ambulance service. Under the Consumer Rights Act 2015 and OFCOM guidance, I am entitled to clear, timely responses and reasonable adjustments because of my age and hearing impairment. I have exhausted your published complaints process. I now require an immediate escalation to a manager with authority to restore reliable service or provide a suitable alternative line within 48 hours. I also require a full written record of every contact your company has logged under my account from 1 January to today, and confirmation of the remedial steps you will take to prevent similar failures with vulnerable customers. If I do not receive a substantive response and a named manager within seven days I will refer this matter to the Ombudsman and pursue every statutory remedy available to me.
CORRECT TEXT: I am the registered account holder for the family plan (mobile numbers 07745 992104 and 07745 992105). On 20 March 2026 I discovered that the billing contact details associated with my children's SIMs had been altered without authority; a different email and a partial address were added. I have not authorised any change. This constitutes an unauthorised account modification and a potential data handling failure under the Data Protection Act. Your apparent inability to prevent or detect this is a serious compliance concern and places my children at risk of SIM fraud and loss of service for emergency calls. I require immediate reinstatement of the correct contact details, a full audit log of who made the change and when, and written confirmation of the corrective steps you will take to secure the account within 24 hours. If you fail to remedy this promptly I will notify the Information Commissioner's Office and Ofcom and seek redress through the courts and the Ombudsman. Please treat this as an urgent protection-of-children matter.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text concludes with a direct, explicit instruction to treat the matter as 'urgent' and specifies the critical nature ('protection-of-children matter'), reinforcing the high urgency. The error text, while detailing severe vulnerability (elderly, deaf, reliant on landline for medical calls) and demanding 'immediate escalation' within '48 hours', lacks this final, overarching, explicit meta-instruction to classify the entire communication as urgent.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be overly reliant on explicit, high-level urgency markers or meta-instructions (e.g., 'treat as urgent') to classify an issue as 'High' urgency. It seems to under-weight the cumulative impact of multiple strong implicit and explicit cues, such as severe vulnerability, direct risk to emergency services, and tight deadlines (48 hours), when a direct 'treat as urgent' phrase is absent.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where high urgency is conveyed through a combination of severe vulnerability, critical service disruption (e.g., access to emergency services), and tight deadlines (e.g., 48 hours), even without an explicit 'treat as urgent' phrase.

ERROR TEXT: I am 78 and not very good with smartphones or apps, so I rely on being able to speak to a person when something goes wrong. On 21 March 2026 I rang your helpline at about 09:30 because the billing section of the app would not load and I needed to check a direct debit. I was on hold for 42 minutes, then the line cut out just as a recorded message said my call would be answered shortly. I sat there following the prompts, convinced there was someone to help, and then nothing. I had to use my neighbour's phone to phone back and by the time I reached an advisor it was nearly lunchtime and I had been shaken. I have never phoned you before. I understand queues happen, but leaving an elderly customer to listen to music and vanish is unacceptable. I want to know why the queue was so long, why calls are allowed to drop without a callback option, and what you will do so I do not have to go through this again. A callback at a time I can manage, preferably before 11am, would be helpful; please don't put me through the automated loop again. I want a clear explanation and a plan to make phone support accessible for people like me.

Final Contrastive Error Analysis Report

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing to set out, in detail, an ongoing problem with excessively long telephone wait times when contacting support. Over the past three weeks I have called on 2 March (waited 37 minutes), 6 March (45 minutes), 11 March (52 minutes) and 18 March (39 minutes). On 6 March I used webchat which queued for 28 minutes before disconnecting; on 11 March an advisor (name not provided) put me on hold twice and then transferred me without explanation. I have logged complaints online (refs 8G1A, 8G7B) and asked for an estimated callback window but was only given generic advice about retrying at off?peak times. I work in technology and my time is scheduled tightly around meetings; these long holds are disruptive though not critical, and they make it difficult to get straightforward answers to simple queries such as plan details and outage status. I am seeking a practical solution: either a reliable call?back at a prearranged time, or clear information about when staffing levels will improve so I can plan contacts better. Please respond with a concrete proposal rather than general reassurances.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text includes explicit emotional language ('shaken'), highlights the user's vulnerability ('elderly customer'), and contains strong, somewhat time-constrained demands for a resolution ('preferably before 11am', 'plan to make phone support accessible'). In contrast, the correct text explicitly states the issue is 'disruptive though not critical' and maintains a more factual, less emotional tone.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on emotional distress cues, explicit vulnerability statements, and strong, specific demands for resolution (especially when paired with soft time constraints), interpreting these as signals for higher urgency, even when the core problem (customer service experience) is inherently low urgency. It fails to adequately prioritize the actual impact of the problem over the user's expression of frustration.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where strong emotional language, explicit vulnerability, and firm demands are present, but the underlying issue's impact is explicitly or implicitly 'Low' urgency, to teach the model to differentiate between frustration and true criticality.

Pair #75 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I am writing because your automated support system has repeatedly failed to diagnose and resolve a billing error that is affecting my business. I first engaged with the chatbot on 5 March to query an extra GBP 360 on the March invoice; the bot closed the session without creating a ticket. On 9 March I tried again; the bot provided a resolution timeline that contradicted the account notes and directed me to pay by 11 March to avoid service interruption. I paid under that instruction, only for an automatic payment block to be applied the next day because the account had been scheduled for manual review - a detail the bot did not reveal.

On 12 March I finally reached a human agent, Daniel, who confirmed there was an underlying tariff misallocation and opened ticket 112233, promising to correct it and waive any late fees. That ticket was auto-closed by the system on 15 March with no action taken, and an engineer appointment that I arranged for 18 March was cancelled because the system showed a cleared balance. The cancellation meant I missed a critical installation at a client site, resulting in lost revenue of GBP 480 and a need to rearrange staff and transport at short notice.

Over three subsequent calls (15 March, 20 March, 22 March) I have had to explain the same sequence each time. The chatbot provided inconsistent instructions, failed to escalate when prompted, and auto-closed legitimate human-raised tickets. I need a full manual audit of all interactions related to invoice March-360, written confirmation of the corrected bill, reimbursement for the missed installation (GBP 480), and a named point of contact who will manage this case to completion. Please treat this as a priority and provide the requested audit and contact details within five working days so I can plan operations accordingly.

I cannot keep being passed to scripted replies that are irrelevant to my situation. Please act on case 975312 without delay.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text explicitly uses the phrase "Please treat this as a priority" and quantifies a specific financial loss (GBP 480) tied to business disruption ("critical installation", "lost revenue"). The Correct Text, while detailing severe personal health and safety risks, does not use an explicit 'priority' keyword or quantify a direct financial loss, instead focusing on the need for accessible support within a specific timeframe.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on explicit 'priority' keywords and quantified financial/business impact when determining 'High' urgency, potentially failing to differentiate between significant business disruption (Medium) and truly critical, immediate threats (High). It seems to weigh these cues more heavily than the implicit, but equally serious, personal health and safety implications that are also 'Medium' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where significant business disruption, explicit 'priority' requests, and quantified financial losses are correctly labeled as 'Medium' urgency, especially when compared against examples with severe personal health/safety risks also labeled 'Medium'.

ERROR TEXT: Account ending 2371. I have been a customer for over ten years and attempted to cancel my broadband on 4 March 2026; that request was not actioned. I called once before on 20 February 2026 to say I wished to leave. Please process the cancellation and confirm the final chargeable date by return. If you cannot complete this, provide the name and contact details of the person authorised to do so. I expect written confirmation within five working days.

CORRECT TEXT: I switched from another provider on 12 March 2026 and requested cancellation of my old line when I signed up. I have tried to cancel the previous account through your online portal but there is no option and the chat bot keeps looping. Please confirm the cancellation reference and date; I do not want overlapping billing.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text includes explicit language demanding escalation ('provide the name and contact details of the person authorised to do so') and a firm, short-term deadline for resolution ('within five working days'), which are absent in the Correct Text.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on direct escalation threats and explicit short deadlines as indicators of 'Medium' urgency, failing to recognize that these can also occur within 'Low' urgency contexts where the core issue (e.g., account cancellation) is not time-critical or high-impact.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more 'Low' urgency examples that feature frustrated customers using strong language, demanding escalation, or setting short deadlines for non-critical issues.

ERROR TEXT: Samantha Brooks, account holder for Family Plus 100 (Account 77?9983). Your contract states expected speeds up to 100Mbps (typical evening speed 60-80Mbps), yet my household has been consistently receiving 8-12Mbps for the past three weeks. I recorded speed tests on 8 March (9.2Mbps), 12 March (11.1Mbps) and 19 March (8.5Mbps). I reported this on 16 March (ref 55902) and spoke with Ethan, who advised a series of router resets and updated firmware; those actions were completed but have had no effect. With working parents and children doing remote schoolwork, the service level is inadequate for a family plan. This is my second formal request - please arrange a proper line diagnostic and an on?site engineer visit within the next ten working days, or provide a temporary upgrade at no extra cost while you resolve full throughput. I expect written confirmation of the remedial steps and a firm appointment date.

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing because my broadband has been unacceptably slow for several months. I first reported extremely poor speeds on 8 February 2026 via the web chat to Claire (case ref 982345) and was told an engineer appointment would be arranged. That appointment never happened. I chased again on 15 February with Tom in faults who logged another ticket and promised a speed check; on 2 March I spoke to a supervisor, Priya, who said the issue was being prioritised. Nothing has been resolved. As someone who relies on video-based physiotherapy and remote consultations because of my mobility condition, the service level you are providing is far below what I pay for, yet this is not an emergency and I can tolerate delay - but I will not accept repeated reassurances and no action. I have exhausted the usual channels and now require a formal escalation to a manager. If you cannot offer a sensible timetable and a technical plan by the end of next week I will refer this to the Ombudsman for a review of ongoing poor performance and appropriate compensation.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly states 'this is not an emergency and I can tolerate delay,' directly negating potential urgency cues. The Error Text lacks such an explicit statement, allowing implied urgency from the impact on remote work/school and a specific 10-day resolution timeframe to influence the prediction.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-weighting implied urgency from the impact of service disruption (remote work/school) and specific, relatively short timeframes for resolution ('within the next ten working days') when an explicit urgency negator is absent, leading it to misinterpret 'Low' urgency as 'Medium'.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where specific demands and impacts are present, but the overall urgency is explicitly stated as 'Low' or where the lack of immediate crisis is clear despite the inconvenience and requested timeframe.

Pair #78 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I signed a 24?month SIM-only contract on 15 September 2024 at GBP 18.00 per month. On viewing my billing statement on 4 March 2026 I noticed the monthly fee had been increased to GBP 23.00 with no prior notification in the app or by email. As a student on a very tight budget, an unexpected increase of GBP 5 a month makes a difference to whether I can cover essentials this term and I did not agree to any mid-contract rise when I took the plan.

This is the first time I have raised the matter. Please can you supply the exact contractual clause you are relying on to implement this increase, copies of any correspondence you say was sent to me about the change, and a clear calculation showing how the new amount was derived. If the increase cannot be justified under my current terms, I would expect the rate to be reverted to GBP 18.00 and any excess charged since 4 March 2026 to be refunded or credited back to my account. I can wait a short time for a full review but would appreciate acknowledgement of this enquiry within seven working days and a timeline for resolution.

CORRECT TEXT: My business runs on dependable internet. I do not run it on promises. On 5 March 2026 my monthly line rental jumped from GBP 48 to GBP 57 with no prior discussion and no lawful notice. I first rang your billing team on 9 March and spoke to Hannah (ref: BIL-2331), who told me it was an 'industry-wide adjustment' and would appear on my next invoice. I called again on 16 March and spoke with Michael (ref: BIL-2389) who admitted the increase was mid-contract but said there was nothing he could do. I called yet again on 22 March and spoke to Priya, who opened complaint 004721 and promised a manager callback that never happened.

I have been ringing over three separate weeks. Each contact produced a different, vague explanation and no concrete remedy. I am a small cafe owner; our margins are narrow and predictable costs matter. A sudden near-20% rise to a core service in the middle of a fixed term is not a minor clerical glitch. It is a significant commercial decision made without my consent.

I want the increase reversed to the contracted rate immediately and a clear statement explaining why the change was applied. If you cannot rescind the charge, provide a formal justification, the contractual clause relied upon, and compensation for the extra amounts taken since 5 March. If you refuse either step, I will treat that as a request to terminate the agreement without penalty. I have documented every call and will escalate if necessary, but I would prefer this resolved without further delay. Please respond with a firm proposal within five working days.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text explicitly states a direct personal financial hardship impacting 'essentials' ('makes a difference to whether I can cover essentials this term'), which is absent in the Correct Text. While the Correct Text details business impact and prior escalation, it does not frame the issue as directly affecting the customer's ability to cover basic necessities.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be over-indexing on explicit mentions of personal financial hardship related to 'essentials' as a primary indicator of 'Medium' urgency, even when other strong 'Low' urgency cues (first contact, willingness to wait, longer resolution timeline) are present. Conversely, it seems to under-index on cues like documented prior attempts, explicit demands for immediate action, and conditional threats of termination when classifying urgency as 'Low'.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where explicit statements of personal financial hardship are present alongside clear indicators of 'Low' urgency (e.g., 'first time contacting,' 'willing to wait,' 'no immediate crisis') to teach the model to weigh all urgency cues holistically.

Pair #79 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I am writing because my broadband has been consistently slower than the package I pay for and I need assistance that is accessible and straightforward. I subscribe to the 30Mb package but speed checks performed in my home using the router's diagnostics on 5 March, 12 March and 19 March 2026 repeatedly show download speeds in the range 2-5Mb and frequent drops in connection. I have contacted your support on four separate occasions (telephone 5 March - advisor Neil, 9 March - advisor Paula, 14 March - technical team, and 20 March - supervisor Helen). Each time I have been asked to run tests and restart equipment, which I am able to do, but the underlying problem remains and I am not confident performing more advanced troubleshooting. Given my limited familiarity with technology I request an engineer visit at a mutually convenient time, simple written instructions about any changes made, and a clear explanation if the service at my address cannot meet the advertised speed. I would appreciate a timely appointment within the next week and a confirmation call rather than further automated messages.

CORRECT TEXT: I am reporting persistently slow broadband on my student tenancy at 12 Hargreaves Road (account 990-1132). I signed up to the 100Mbps plan. Since 28 February my measured download speeds have averaged 6-8Mbps at peak times (I have attached timestamps and Ookla results for 1, 7 and 14 March: 7.2, 6.1, 8.4 Mbps). I phoned support on 3 March and spoke with Aisha Khan; a technician visit was booked for 10 March but the technician reported the exchange 'within tolerance' and left. I called again on 16 March and was promised escalation; reference 331-20-16. The slow speeds continue and I am losing study time and course access. I have exhausted the standard complaints route and need this escalated to a manager. I expect either an engineer visit with a clear technical resolution within five working days, a pro rata credit for the weeks of shortfall, or a no-penalty termination so I can move to a provider who can meet the advertised speed. Please confirm next steps in writing.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states the negative personal impact of the issue ('losing study time and course access') and presents clear, non-negotiable demands with a threat of churn ('no-penalty termination'). The error text, while detailing repeated failures and a desire for a timely resolution, frames its requests more politely ('I request,' 'I would appreciate') and lacks a direct statement of significant personal detriment or an explicit ultimatum.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be sensitive to explicit statements of severe personal impact, direct demands for escalation, and clear ultimatums with consequences (like churn threats), but it struggles to infer 'Medium' urgency from a history of repeated failed attempts and polite but firm requests for a timely resolution, even when a soft deadline ('within the next week') is provided.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where the urgency is conveyed through a history of failed support interactions and polite but firm requests for timely resolution, even without explicit statements of severe personal impact or direct threats of churn.

ERROR TEXT: I moved into a shared house while studying and thought signing up with your student discount would be straightforward. It has not been. I'm Liam Patel, student, account 99214, and my broadband has been intermittent since 02 February 2026. The story: on 03 February I phoned and an agent called Mark promised an engineer would attend between 8am and 12pm the next Monday; the engineer never arrived. Mark said he would ring back. He did not. On 10 February I phoned again and a different advisor, Claire, booked a new visit for 17 February and said the fault would be fixed then. On 17 February an engineer called me to say the issue was with external cabling and that a third party needed to be scheduled; he left without completing any work and promised a follow-up. No one followed up. I spent two weeks using my phone as a hotspot and spent over GBP 60 of my limited budget topping up data. I have deadlines and an exam on 18 March for which I need stable internet to submit coursework. When I phoned on 05 March to complain I was promised a credit for the period of outage and a guaranteed engineer slot within 48 hours; neither materialised. Each promise has been a promise kept only by your script, not by action. I am paying full student rates for intermittent service and have lost time and money because of your broken commitments. This is not a request; it is a demand for a manager to review the sequence of missed appointments, for an immediate onsite engineer visit before 48 hours, for the agreed credit to be applied to my bill, and for a written apology sent to my university email. If you cannot open a dependable line before my exam I will escalate to the Ombudsman and seek reimbursement for the extra data charges and any resubmission penalties I incur. I do not have the luxury of waiting for another empty promise.

CORRECT TEXT: I have been a customer for over 12 years. The broadband has been unstable since 3 March 2026 and has now dropped to almost no usable service for the third week running. On 4 March I reported the issue and was told an engineer would attend on 6 March; the engineer did not arrive. I called again on 7 March, spoke to Raj who scheduled a replacement router to be sent on 9 March, which did not turn up. I phoned on 11 March and spoke to customer care; a second engineer appointment was booked for 14 March and cancelled at short notice with no alternative offered. Each interaction ends with a different promise and a different timescale but no durable fix. I work from home and the ongoing loss of reliable service has caused missed meetings and lost income; I have already made three separate calls and sent two emails over the past three weeks. I am asking for a definitive resolution today: a confirmed engineer visit within 24 hours or a temporary mobile hotspot provision until the permanent fault is resolved, plus confirmation of compensation for the days without service. I have been loyal for a decade and this sequence of missed commitments is disappointing, but I am focused on getting the connection restored promptly.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly frames the demand for resolution with highly immediate temporal markers like 'today' and 'within 24 hours'. In contrast, the Error Text uses 'before 48 hours' for an immediate visit and places the most critical, but slightly longer-term, deadline ('before my exam on 18 March') within an escalation threat at the very end of the text, making the immediate demand less stringent and more diffused.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to prioritize explicit, extremely short-term (e.g., <24 hours) temporal markers for resolution requests, especially when presented as a direct, singular demand. It seems to under-weight critical deadlines that are slightly beyond 24 hours (e.g., 48 hours or a specific date a week or two out), even when these are coupled with strong escalation threats and a clear 'demand' rather than 'request' framing.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where high urgency is conveyed through critical deadlines that are slightly beyond 24 hours (e.g., 'within 48 hours', 'by end of week') or through explicit escalation threats tied to specific future dates, ensuring the model recognizes these as equally indicative of high urgency.

Pair #81 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: As the proprietor of a small retail business I must record a formal complaint about persistent poor mobile coverage at my premises in Walthamstow, which has been ongoing since December 2025. I have raised the matter on four separate occasions (10/01/2026, 24/01/2026, 07/02/2026 and 28/02/2026) and spoke with Samir and Laura in customer services, who logged faults reference F-987654 and F-991022. The service description in my contract sets out an expectation of reasonable network availability and the failure to provide usable signal is affecting my ability to accept orders and confirm deliveries. Under the contract and the Consumer Rights Act, I require one of the following remedies within 30 days: a demonstrable improvement in coverage at the premises, a proportionate rebate for loss of service, or the right to terminate the contract without penalty. Please provide a technical assessment specific to my address (Unit 3, 42 High Street) and confirm what remedial action you will take and within what timeframe. If you are unable to resolve the problem, advise the procedure for terminating the agreement and any entitlement to compensation under your service guarantee.

CORRECT TEXT: I have been a customer for over ten years and I am formally complaining about persistent mobile signal failure at my home address, reported on 12 January, 23 February and again on 14 March. Each time I have followed your published complaints process and spoken with customer services, including a call on 14/03 with a colleague named Mark who recorded the fault reference 2026-0314-UK. The problem remains: calls drop and data is unusable indoors. As a long-standing customer I am aware of my rights under the general terms and Ofcom guidance regarding service availability and reasonable remedial action. I have exhausted standard channels and now request escalation to a manager for a substantive remedy, including either a technical solution (signal booster or mast review) or a contractual adjustment for the periods of poor service. If this cannot be resolved within 20 working days I will consider referring the matter to the Ombudsman for Communications. Please confirm receipt and the name of the manager handling my case.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text contains a direct, unqualified demand for remedies within a specific timeframe ('I require one of the following remedies within 30 days') and an explicit, direct statement about seeking contract termination procedures if unresolved. In contrast, the Correct Text softens its threat of external escalation with 'I will consider referring the matter to the Ombudsman' and frames its immediate action as a 'request escalation' rather than a direct demand.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be over-sensitive to direct, unqualified demands and explicit threats of contract termination, interpreting them as higher urgency cues even when the overall context (e.g., multiple prior reports over several months, no immediate critical impact) suggests a 'Low' urgency. It fails to adequately weigh softening language ('consider') or the distinction between a direct demand for termination and a request for escalation.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where direct demands, specific deadlines, and explicit mentions of contract termination are present but the overall context still indicates 'Low' urgency, particularly when the issue has been ongoing for an extended period without immediate critical impact.

Pair #82 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I have contacted you four times about the auto-renewal that charged my card on 20/03/2026 despite me cancelling in the app weeks earlier. I am a tech person - I removed the saved card on 02/03, disabled auto-renew in Settings on 05/03 and revoked the app token from my phone on 08/03. Each time I was told differently: Priya said it would be fixed and gave ticket INC-3427 on 10/03; James on 14/03 insisted the payment was authorised by me; Helena on 18/03 promised a refund and that it would not happen again. None of that happened. The charge went through on 20/03 and shows as "subscription renewal" on my bank statement. I have screenshots of the app showing auto-renew off at 05:03 on 05/03 and of the card being removed at 14:12 on 02/03. This is not acceptable. I do not consent to renewals I explicitly disabled. I want an immediate full refund, confirmation that my account is closed to renewals, and written assurance that you have fixed whatever in your billing system allowed a removed card to be charged. If this cannot be resolved within five business days escalate to a manager. I am tired of repeating the same facts to different people and being given contradictory answers - stop wasting my time.

CORRECT TEXT: My name is Margaret Ellison and I am 76 years old. I do not use apps; I do not sign up for anything online without help. Yet on 12 February 2026 my landline and broadband were automatically renewed for another 24 months and I only discovered this when a paperless invoice appeared at the end of last week. I did not authorise a renewal. I have the confirmation letter from when I first took the contract in 2019 and there was no clear point at which I agreed to roll-over. I rang customer services on 15 March and spoke with Sophie in billing, who told me to try the online account settings - which I cannot navigate - and later with Daniel in Retentions on 18 March who said the auto-renewal was standard practice and could not be reversed without a fee. I asked repeatedly for a manager. I was promised a call-back on 20 March by a manager called Mr Patel; no call came. I have followed every direction your staff have given and now find myself being charged for an extra year I never consented to, and for a service I may wish to leave. I am asking now, formally, for a full reversal of the renewal and a refund of any up-front charges taken for the extra period, plus written confirmation that my account will not be auto-renewed in future. If this cannot be resolved internally I will have no choice but to contact the Telecommunications Ombudsman. I am tired of being passed from person to person and treated as if I do not understand. Please escalate this to a manager who will read the notes I have left and actually act on them.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The failed prediction text includes an explicit, time-bound internal escalation demand ('If this cannot be resolved within five business days escalate to a manager') and a request for 'immediate' action. The correct prediction text, while containing an external escalation threat (Telecommunications Ombudsman), lacks a specific, short-term internal deadline for resolution or an explicit demand for 'immediate' action.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-prioritize explicit, short-term internal deadlines and the word 'immediate' as strong indicators of 'Medium' urgency, potentially overlooking the broader context of repeated interactions and the nature of the request (a refund for a cancelled service) which might otherwise classify it as 'Low' urgency despite the customer's frustration.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where customers express frustration, demand 'immediate' action, and set short-term internal deadlines for resolution, but where the overall context still warrants a 'Low' urgency label.

Pair #83 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I am raising a formal complaint in relation to persistent poor voice and data coverage at my property (service address: 18 Highfield Road), which began on or about 10 March. I have been a customer of your network for over a decade and this is the first time I have had to put concerns in writing. Under the Consumer Rights Act and the terms of my contract, I am entitled to the service I pay for. Repeated dropouts and inability to make emergency calls are not acceptable. Please provide evidence of the network performance in my postcode, the dates and results of any mast tests, and the proposed remedial works timetable. If you cannot restore acceptable service within seven days I will require a pro-rata refund for the period of reduced service and will consider referral to the Communications Ombudsman for a binding resolution. I expect a written response within 72 hours setting out specific remedies and timescales.

CORRECT TEXT: I am a young professional working from home and I am reporting persistent poor mobile coverage at my address, postcode E2 8AA, which has affected my ability to meet professional obligations. Over the last six weeks (first noted on 2 February 2026, and continuing) signal drops to 3G and frequent call drops have occurred inside my flat. I have tested two different handsets and an external signal booster; the problem persists. Under the contract and the Ofcom General Conditions, you are required to provide a service that is fit for purpose. Please investigate and provide a technical report and an action plan within seven calendar days, including a timetable for remediation and a proposal for pro rata credit for the period of impaired service. If you cannot restore acceptable coverage, confirm the procedure to exit my contract without penalty. I expect a named contact and formal confirmation of the above timescale.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly mentions a critical safety concern ('inability to make emergency calls'), a direct threat of external regulatory escalation ('referral to the Communications Ombudsman for a binding resolution'), and a very short response deadline ('within 72 hours'). These specific, high-impact phrases are either absent or presented with less severity in the correct text, which instead focuses on professional impact and commercial escalation (contract exit).

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model over-indexes on specific keywords and phrases associated with immediate safety risks, external regulatory threats, and extremely tight response deadlines, interpreting them as definitive 'High' urgency signals, even when embedded within a broader context of an ongoing, non-immediate 'Medium' urgency complaint.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples of 'Medium' urgency complaints that contain specific high-urgency keywords or phrases (e.g., 'emergency calls,' 'Ombudsman,' '72-hour response') to teach the model to contextualize these cues within the overall narrative of an ongoing issue.

Pair #84 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I have exhausted every standard route and now request escalation to a senior manager and the Communications Ombudsman if this cannot be resolved immediately. I am a student on a strict budget and your 3G network shutdown has rendered my mobile internet dongle useless. I opened complaints on 05/02/2026 (agent Nadia, case 5521), 12/02/2026 (Tom, who said he would send a SIM), and 02/03/2026 (email to support). Each time I was given conflicting information and no workable remedy. My contract is for mobile data and you assured coverage at point of sale in September 2025. There was no individual notice to customers with older devices and no reasonable notice to allow me to obtain an affordable replacement. The result: I have missed part-time shifts and could not submit assignments on time because I had no internet. My out-of-pocket cost to replace equipment immediately is more than I can afford. I request immediate options: either (1) provide me with a compatible device or data SIM at no charge within five working days; or (2) a full refund of the unused portion of my contract with no early-termination penalty. If you maintain that your position is lawful, set out the contractual clause you rely on and a copy of the notice you claim was sent to me. I will not accept generic responses. If this is not resolved within seven days I will lodge a formal complaint with Ofcom and the Independent Communications Adjudicator, and pursue any statutory remedies available to me.

CORRECT TEXT: I recently ported my number to your service on 25 January 2026 and on 15 February the apparent 3G network change degraded the service so severely that the mobile data I purchased is no longer fit for purpose. I raised this previously on 10 February (reference SRN652134) and received no substantive resolution. Under the Consumer Rights Act 2015 and your own stated terms, services supplied must be of satisfactory quality and as described. They are currently neither.

I have attempted troubleshooting with your technical support on 11 and 14 February yet connectivity remains intermittent when using legacy 3G-only devices required by some of my field staff. As a recent transferee from another supplier I reasonably expected continuity; instead we face operational disruption. I therefore request the following remedies within seven days: (1) immediate provision of a compatible network fallback or a suitable device replacement at no additional cost; (2) a pro rata rebate for the period of impaired service; and (3) a clear statement of steps you will take to prevent recurrence. If you fail to resolve the matter promptly I will seek contract termination without penalty and consider escalating this to Ofcom or the ADR scheme.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text contains a higher frequency of explicit, high-urgency temporal adverbs like "immediately" (used three times) and details severe, direct personal consequences (missing shifts, unable to submit assignments, unaffordable replacement costs). In contrast, the Correct Text uses "immediate provision" once within a list of requests and describes the impact as "operational disruption" for "field staff," which is less personally acute.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on the cumulative presence of strong temporal urgency markers and highly specific, severe personal impact statements, interpreting their combined weight as indicative of 'High' urgency, even when the overall context (e.g., a 5-7 day resolution window) suggests 'Medium'. It struggles to differentiate between a strong demand for immediate options versus a demand for immediate resolution of the entire issue.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where texts contain multiple strong temporal urgency adverbs and severe personal consequences but still fall into the 'Medium' urgency category due to a specified resolution timeframe (e.g., 5-7 days) or a less absolute escalation threat.

Pair #85 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: This starts with a small, ordinary morning and ends with me in tears at 8.30am because your phone system would not let me fix a direct debit. On Monday 16 March I tried to change the family plan payment to cover the new line for my daughter. I dialled at 7.10am while the kids made porridge. Phone in hand, spoon in other, I waited. After 40 minutes I was told the right department was closed and my call would be queued for a call back. No call. I called again at 8.00pm that evening and was cut off after 25 minutes. I have now exhausted the normal channels - web chat, the app, three calls - and still have no confirmation that our direct debit has been updated. My partner needs confirmation before school trips this week; I cannot keep juggling calls between school runs. I want this escalated to a manager immediately and I want a written confirmation that the direct debit change has been processed; if you cannot resolve this promptly I will take the matter to the ombudsman. I have complaint refs 2026-0316-A and 2026-0316-B if that helps you find the record.

CORRECT TEXT: I'm writing because long waits to speak to anyone are no longer acceptable. I have chronic fatigue and need to manage my energy; on 2 March I phoned at 09:40 and was on hold for 47 minutes before a rep disconnected. On 9 March I tried again and waited 35 minutes; I was finally put through to Sarah who said she'd arrange a call-back the same day - she didn't. On 16 March I spent 52 minutes on hold and was told by Tom that someone in complaints would ring me; again, no call. I'm exhausted by the process and feel dismissed each time I try to resolve what should be a simple matter. Because standard contact methods have been ineffective I am asking for this to be escalated to a manager and, if necessary, referred to the Ombudsman. I need a manager-level review of my account and an explanation of why promises of call-backs and responses have not been met. I can cope with a few days' wait, but not repeated broken commitments.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text includes a specific, near-term external deadline ('before school trips this week') and an explicit demand for 'immediately' escalation, coupled with a conditional threat for 'prompt' resolution. In contrast, the Correct Text explicitly mitigates its own escalation demands by stating a tolerance for delay ('I can cope with a few days' wait').

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism over-prioritizes explicit temporal deadlines, direct demands for 'immediate' action, and conditional threats of external action ('ombudsman' if not resolved 'promptly') when a clear mitigating statement of delay tolerance is absent. It fails to infer 'Low' urgency from the overall context of frustration when these strong 'Medium' urgency cues are present without an explicit counter-signal.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where explicit demands for 'immediate' action or threats of external escalation are present, but the overall context (e.g., lack of critical impact, or an implicit tolerance for a short delay) still warrants a 'Low' urgency label.

ERROR TEXT: Account number 22-007-811. This is my first formal contact regarding an unauthorised renewal charge but I wish to set the record straight immediately. On 05/03/2026 my SIM Only 20 plan was renewed and GBP 45 was taken from my debit card without my explicit consent to an automatic rollover. Under the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013 and relevant guidance on automatic renewals, consent must be clear and unambiguous. I have been a customer since 2008 and no notification advising a change to an auto-renewal mechanism was received. I require a full refund of GBP 45 within 14 days and confirmation that any future renewals will only occur with my express agreement. Please provide a written explanation of the contractual basis you are using to justify this charge and a copy of any purported consent you rely upon. If you fail to respond satisfactorily I will consider escalating this to the Communications Ombudsman and seeking further remedies available under consumer protection law.

CORRECT TEXT: My family plan auto-renewed on 1 March 2026 and we were charged GBP 119.88 without any prior notice. I manage four lines, one is my 15-year-old's, and I did not authorise a renewal. There was no email, no text, and no clear opt-in given in the 30 days leading up to the renewal date. I have checked my account settings and there is no renewal toggle I could have missed. I am writing to formally request immediate cancellation of the renewed contract term, reversal of the GBP 119.88 charge, and written confirmation that no further payments will be taken. I am a parent and manage household expenses tightly; an unexpected charge of this size affects the children's school trips and weekly budget. Please respond within seven days with a full refund and an explanation of how your renewal process failed to obtain express consent. If you are unable to comply I will require details of your complaints escalation procedure and will consider collections safeguards as necessary.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states the immediate personal financial hardship and its impact on daily life ('affects the children's school trips and weekly budget'), coupled with a shorter response deadline (seven days). The error text, while containing legal threats and a demand for a refund, lacks this direct statement of personal financial impact and specifies a longer response deadline (14 days).

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is failing to adequately weigh the urgency conveyed through formal legalistic threats and regulatory citations when these are not accompanied by explicit statements of immediate personal financial hardship or a very short response deadline.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where 'Medium' urgency is indicated by strong legal or regulatory threats and clear demands for action, even if the personal financial impact is not explicitly detailed or the deadline is slightly longer than a few days.

Pair #87 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I have exhausted your standard support channels and need this escalated to a manager or, if necessary, the ombudsman. On 4 March I reported that my number had been ported away without my authorisation. I opened a case on 11 March, then followed up on 15 March and 20 March via phone and chat, speaking to agents Zoe and Mark; each time I was assured it would be resolved but the number remains inactive and unauthorised charges appeared on 10 March and 12 March. I filed a police report on 18 March (reference PR123456) and provided the details to your team.

At this point routine support has not restored service or provided a satisfactory explanation. I am requesting a named manager to review the account and contact me directly within 48 hours with a plan to restore the number, clear the incorrect charges, and outline steps you will take to prevent a recurrence. If I do not receive that response I will escalate the matter to the ombudsman for independent review.

CORRECT TEXT: I've called three times over the last two weeks because our family plan was targeted by scam texts that led to several premium-rate charges on 11 and 12 March. I manage the kids' allowances and those charges wiped out our top-up. I spoke to Liam on 13 March who removed two of the charges but said the rest needed investigation; then I called again on 16 March and was told a different ticket owner would call back - they didn't. My daughter keeps getting messages asking to 'verify' her number. I need two things: immediate refunds for the unauthorised premium charges and a block on premium-rate and international-pay services on all lines on my account while you sort this. I'm not asking for sympathy, I'm asking for the account secured and a timeline. Please treat this as urgent - I can't keep chasing while my kids lose their credit and I worry about identity theft.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The FAILED text explicitly mentions filing a police report and contains a direct, time-bound ultimatum for management response, followed by a clear threat of escalating to a formal regulatory body (ombudsman). The CORRECT text, while expressing frustration and personal impact, lacks these specific external, formal escalation cues.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to disproportionately weigh explicit mentions of formal external actions (like police reports) and direct, conditional threats of regulatory escalation (ombudsman) as definitive indicators of 'High' urgency, even when the immediate, unmitigated harm might align with 'Medium'. It struggles to contextualize these strong signals within the broader narrative of ongoing, but not immediately catastrophic, issues.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where formal external actions (e.g., police reports) or threats of regulatory escalation (e.g., ombudsman) are present, but the overall context of the issue's immediate impact and resolution timeline still warrants a 'Medium' urgency label.

Pair #88 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I have been a customer for just over twelve years and I am setting out the sequence of events because it illustrates why the current billing is both unexpected and unacceptable. In late January 2026 I decided to cancel my home broadband and mobile line after moving to a new address where another provider could give faster service. On 01/02/2026 I called retention and was given a cancellation reference (cancel-010226) and told the return box for equipment would be sent within three working days. The kit was collected by courier and a receipt was emailed to me on 08/02/2026.

Despite that, I was billed on 28/02/2026 for a further month's broadband fee of GBP 45 and then received a final demand for GBP 90 on 14/03/2026. Over the past six weeks I have chased this matter on four separate occasions: call with Daniel on 03/02, email to billing on 12/02, follow-up with Priya in complaints on 25/02 and a voicemail left on 10/03. Each interaction ended with assurances that the charges would be reversed; none were. I have kept the cancellation reference and the courier receipt and can forward them. After more than a decade of business together I am surprised to be dealing with repeated billing errors and the time spent chasing them.

I am asking for an immediate reversal of the incorrect charges, written confirmation that my account is closed, and an explanation of why the billing system continued to bill following confirmed cancellation. I am willing to discuss this by phone but prefer written confirmation of the outcome. If this is not resolved promptly I will have to consider further steps.
CORRECT TEXT: I cancelled our family plan (Account A-99321) on 05 March 2026 and received a cancellation confirmation email with reference CNL-05MAR-99321, but you still debited GBP 112.34 on 12 March and attempted the same debit on 12 April. Over the last three weeks I've called four times - 15 March (Samir), 20 March (Laura), 27 March (Supervisor Jenkins) and I used webchat on 02 April - and each time I was guaranteed a refund and written confirmation that the account was closed. None of those promises have been fulfilled. I am a single parent and these repeated charges caused an overdraft that disrupted school and childcare payments; that's not acceptable. I need an immediate refund of the unauthorised amounts, the direct debit cancelled right now, and a written confirmation that the account has been fully closed with zero further liability. If I do not receive the refund and closure confirmation within 24 hours I will open a formal dispute with my bank and escalate the complaint to the Ombudsman.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly states a specific, time-bound threat of external escalation ('within 24 hours I will open a formal dispute with my bank and escalate the complaint to the Ombudsman') and details severe personal financial hardship impacting essential services ('caused an overdraft that disrupted school and childcare payments'). The Error Text, however, uses a vague threat ('consider further steps') and describes the impact as general inconvenience and surprise rather than critical hardship.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is failing to adequately weigh the specificity, time-bound nature, and severity of escalation threats and personal financial hardship. It appears to recognize the presence of a threat or impact but struggles to distinguish between generic inconvenience/vague threats and critical, time-sensitive, high-consequence situations.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples that clearly differentiate between vague, low-specificity threats/inconveniences (medium urgency) and highly specific, time-bound threats of external escalation or explicit statements of critical personal financial hardship (high urgency).

Pair #89 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: Since switching to your service on 1 February 2026 I have repeatedly been charged fees that were not disclosed during the sale. On my first bill dated 28 February there is an unexpected 'activation fee' of GBP 29.99 and a 'network admin charge' of GBP 12.50; neither was mentioned in the online checkout or by the sales representative. I have contacted customer services on 3 occasions (5 March, 11 March and 19 March 2026) and asked for itemised justification; each time I was promised a full breakdown and then received no adequate response. Under the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013 you are obliged to provide clear information about such charges at the point of contract. I therefore request a full refund of the undisclosed charges, a corrected final bill, and a written explanation of how these charges were allowed to appear. If I do not receive a substantive reply and refund within 14 days I will consider making a formal complaint to the appropriate regulator and seeking redress through the relevant consumer channels.

CORRECT TEXT: This is my first formal complaint but I expect a precise and prompt remedy. I have been charged a so-called "activation fee" of GBP 29.99 on my bill dated 02 March 2026, plus a "router handling" charge of GBP 14.50 that was not disclosed at signup on 25 February 2026. The signup page did not present these amounts clearly; I clicked to accept on the assumption the only recurring cost was the advertised monthly price. Under the Consumer Contracts Regulations and the Consumer Rights Act 2015 you must provide transparent pricing before the contract is concluded. Your behaviour appears to be an unfair trading practice: an additional contractual term introduced after purchase without explicit consent. I request an itemised breakdown of all charges applied to account number 07-xx-xx, a full refund of the undisclosed fees within seven calendar days, and confirmation that no similar hidden charges will be applied in future invoices. If you refuse, explain under which contractual provision you justify these charges and cite the precise clause on my agreement page where these fees were disclosed. I will not accept evasive responses; I expect documentary evidence and a timeline for refund.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text establishes a shorter, more immediate deadline for resolution ('within seven calendar days' vs. 'within 14 days') and employs more assertive, non-negotiable language regarding the expected response and consequences ('I will not accept evasive responses; I expect documentary evidence and a timeline for refund' and demanding specific legal justification), whereas the Error Text uses a softer, conditional threat ('I will consider making a formal complaint').

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is failing to adequately weigh the cumulative urgency implied by a documented history of repeated, unresolved contact attempts when the final ultimatum is phrased conditionally or with a comparatively longer deadline. It appears to prioritize the directness and brevity of the stated deadline and the firmness of the immediate consequences over the historical context of the issue's persistence.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where a history of multiple, unresolved customer service interactions, even when paired with a slightly longer deadline or conditional escalation language, is explicitly labeled as 'Medium' urgency.

Pair #90 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I am writing to report an instance of fraudulent activity linked to my account and to request formal escalation. On 10 March I received a call purporting to be from your security team and was persuaded to disclose a one?time passcode; within 24 hours my account was used to transfer GBP 320 to an unknown payee. I have already spoken to your fraud team on 11 March (case ref 76219) and again on 15 March when I was told the matter would be investigated. Both advisors - Hannah in fraud and Raj in customer services - acknowledged the unauthorised transaction but no refund or firm outcome has been provided and I have been advised that ordinary channels are exhausted. As an elderly customer who is not confident with online banking or complex passwords, this has left me without a reliable line and without the disputed funds. Please escalate this matter to a manager immediately and confirm whether you will refer the complaint to the Financial Ombudsman; I expect a written response within seven working days setting out your proposed restitution and the steps you will take to prevent further misuse of my account.

CORRECT TEXT: On 15/03/2026 my number was ported away without authorisation and I subsequently discovered several unauthorised transactions totalling GBP 350 on my account. I reported the incident immediately and spoke with the fraud desk on 15/03/2026 and again on 18/03/2026 (agents recorded as Tom R. and Sarah P.). Both times I was told an investigation had been opened but I have received no substantive update, no reversal of the charges and no confirmation that my number has been secured against further unauthorised activity. The unauthorised port removed my access to two-factor authentication for work accounts, which is a material security issue. I therefore request an urgent, documented investigation, immediate reinstatement or suspension of the number to prevent further loss, and a full refund of the fraudulent charges. I have exhausted standard support routes and now require escalation to a senior fraud manager; if I do not receive a written response outlining remedial action within five working days I will lodge a complaint with the ombudsman and consider reporting the breach to Action Fraud.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly states a current deprivation of an essential service ('without a reliable line') and links it to a vulnerable customer profile ('As an elderly customer... this has left me without a reliable line'), immediately followed by a direct call to 'escalate this matter to a manager immediately.' The correct text, while detailing a 'material security issue' and requesting 'immediate reinstatement... to prevent further loss,' does not combine these with an explicit statement of current, critical service deprivation or a specific vulnerable customer profile in the same direct sequence.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-prioritize the co-occurrence of direct 'immediately' escalation requests with explicit statements of current critical service deprivation and personal vulnerability, interpreting this combination as indicative of 'High' urgency, even when the true label is 'Medium'. It might be failing to differentiate between a critical inconvenience/deprivation and an active, rapidly escalating threat that typically defines 'High' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where direct 'immediately' requests for escalation, combined with statements of current service deprivation and personal vulnerability, are explicitly labeled as 'Medium' urgency.

Pair #91 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I am 72 and not very good with smartphones, but I can tell when the service is failing. For the past three months, calls drop and 4G disappears in my bungalow on Foxglove Close, BN3 8RT. I have called support on 4 occasions (12 Feb, 3 Mar, 17 Mar, 31 Mar) and spoke with advisors called Raj and Leah who advised network checks and a new SIM. Neither suggestion has helped. My landline is my lifeline; although mobile is not strictly essential, poor coverage means I cannot reliably ring family or the surgery when I need to.

Please arrange a site check or provide a credible plan to improve signal at my address. If a signal booster or alternative solution is available, confirm eligibility and lead time. I appreciate there may be technical constraints, but repeated standard troubleshooting has not fixed this and I would like a clear next step within 10 working days.

CORRECT TEXT: I have been a customer for over a decade and recently my mobile signal at home has become unreliable, with frequent call drops and very slow data since early January. I understand coverage can vary, but this is affecting simple tasks like mobile banking and arranging deliveries. This is my first time reporting it; could you investigate mast performance in the SO21 postcode and advise any planned improvements or temporary solutions such as an indoor booster? I would expect an estimated timeline given my long-standing account.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text explicitly details multiple prior failed attempts to resolve the issue ('called support on 4 occasions', 'repeated standard troubleshooting has not fixed this') and sets a specific deadline ('within 10 working days'), while the Correct Text explicitly states it is the 'first time reporting it' and requests a general 'estimated timeline'.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on explicit cues of process escalation (prior failed attempts, specific deadlines) as indicators of higher urgency, failing to adequately weigh the overall context where the core impact might still be considered 'Low' (e.g., 'mobile is not strictly essential' in the error text).

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where customers express frustration over repeated failed troubleshooting or set specific deadlines, but the underlying issue's impact remains 'Low', to teach the model to distinguish between process escalation and critical urgency.

Pair #92 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I have called your helpline three times in the last month - on 2 March, 9 March and most recently on 16 March - to report the same problem: my phone simply loses signal in my sitting room. Apparently my postcode (RG6 5BX) is not of interest to the network, because every evening my calls drop and texts take hours to arrive. The last agent, Phil, suggested I move to a different room; helpful, but not exactly a long-term fix for someone who prefers to stay seated. I can manage voicemail and my landline, but relying on being able to use the mobile for appointments and shopping is sensible. I was told twice that an engineer visit would be scheduled; no date has been given. I suppose I could take up residence by the back door if that helps your coverage statistics, but realistically I need a practical solution: either improve the indoor signal or offer a temporary alternative while you investigate. I would like confirmation of the next steps and a clear timeframe.

CORRECT TEXT: I am disabled and dependent on my mobile for essential monitoring and contact with carers. For the past six months my coverage at home has deteriorated to the point where calls drop and SMS messages fail to deliver. I have been patient and methodical - I first reported this in a web chat on 1 February (case reference visible in my account), then spoke with an adviser called Priya on 10 February who logged the issue as intermittent coverage, and later with Reuben on 3 March who said an investigation would follow. After three more attempts through the app and two engineer visits arranged by your team, nothing has changed. On 14 March a scheduled remote health check failed to send data because the signal dropped; my care team could not receive the telemetry for two hours. That delay put me in a vulnerable position and caused real anxiety. I have documented timestamps, call logs and the packet loss logs Reuben requested and uploaded them to the portal. I have been told twice that there is 'no fault found', despite clear evidence of repeated outages between 17:00 and 22:00 on most days. This is not acceptable. I need a lasting technical solution - either a signal booster installed, relocation to a different cell, or a SIM/plan that uses a partner network in my area - and I need your proposed remedy within five working days. I am asking that this be escalated to a senior network manager immediately and that you include the Ombudsman contacts in your response if you cannot prioritise a fix. I cannot continue to rely on inconsistent service where my health and safety are at stake.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly links the service failure to the user's health, safety, and vulnerability ('disabled and dependent on my mobile for essential monitoring and contact with carers', 'put me in a vulnerable position and caused real anxiety', 'health and safety are at stake') and includes specific demands for immediate escalation and a short deadline ('within five working days', 'escalated to a senior network manager immediately', 'Ombudsman contacts'). The Error Text, while detailing repeated issues and frustration, frames the impact in terms of general reliability ('appointments and shopping') rather than critical personal risk, and its demands for action are less immediate and forceful.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be heavily weighted towards explicit keywords and phrases indicating direct health/safety risks, specific high-impact incidents, and forceful, time-bound demands for escalation or resolution. It struggles to infer 'Medium' urgency from an accumulation of repeated service failures and unfulfilled promises when these are not explicitly tied to critical personal impact or immediate, high-stakes demands.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where repeated service failures and unfulfilled promises, even without explicit health/safety risks, are labeled as 'Medium' urgency, particularly when combined with clear demands for a practical solution and a timeframe.

Pair #93 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I have been a customer since 2014 and I have a progressive mobility condition that makes budgeting and routine extremely important. On my most recent bill, dated 01 March 2026, I was charged GBP 6 a month more than the rate I was given when I joined. I have checked your website and new customers are being offered a lower price for the same package. I phoned your general enquiries line this morning to ask why long-term customers are being charged more; your automated menu would not transfer me to accounts and the online tariff page is unclear. I need a full explanation of why my price has increased, why there was no individual notice explaining this change, and an immediate review to match the advertised new-customer rate back to March 1st. I rely on a fixed income and occasional home care; small, unexplained increases matter. This feels like a penalty for staying loyal. I am asking you to correct this, refund the difference from 01/03/2026 and confirm in writing what my ongoing monthly charge will be. If you need to contact me, call my landline - I prefer not to use online chat because of my condition. This is my first formal contact about the matter but I will escalate if I do not receive a clear, reasonable response within 14 days.

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing again because I cannot accept being charged more simply because I have been a customer for longer than new sign-ups. This is my fourth contact about the same issue: I first raised it on 12 March with Zoe on web chat, followed by a call on 19 March with Mark (reference 78-412-3), a follow-up email on 26 March that was acknowledged by Rita, and another chat on 31 March where I was told someone would escalate this. Nothing has changed.

My account (ending 4521) has been with you for three years. I pay for the 100/20 fibre plan. New customers are being offered GBP 10 off per month on exactly the same plan; my last bill was GBP 46.50 and there is no loyalty reward, only the regular increases you roll out. I have checked the welcome offers, the online terms and your published tariffs. I am not asking for anything unreasonable: either match the current new-customer offer or provide a clear, documented justification for why long-standing customers are effectively penalised.

I am tech-savvy and I have screenshotted the promotional pages (saved 13 April at 14:02). I will not be fobbed off with vague phrases about "reviewing offers" again. If you need time to investigate, say so and give a date when I will receive a definitive response. I expect a written resolution within 10 working days. If you cannot match the offer, give me a contract exit with no termination charge. I would prefer to stay, but only if treated fairly.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text contains a direct request for an 'immediate review' and an explicit, albeit future, threat of 'escalation' presented as the 'first formal contact.' In contrast, the Correct Text, while detailing multiple prior contacts and a deadline, frames its ultimate consequence (contract exit) as a conditional offer, explicitly stating a preference to 'stay' and thus softening the urgency of the threat.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on explicit keywords indicating speed ('immediate') and conflict ('escalate') as primary urgency signals, failing to adequately weigh contextual cues that mitigate urgency, such as the 'first formal contact' status or the conditional, negotiable nature of the customer's ultimate demand.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where direct requests for 'immediate' action or threats of 'escalation' are present but are explicitly mitigated by phrases indicating a 'first formal contact' or a conditional, non-critical stage of the complaint.

Pair #94 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: Hi - I'm Tom Li, and my mobile data has been intermittently dropping for the past two weeks. I raised a ticket through the app on 08/03/2026 (ticket #987654) after seeing download speeds fall to 0.2 Mbps while on 4G in central Manchester - after running multiple speedtests and swapping SIMs between two phones the problem looks network-side. I have performed all standard checks (airplane toggle, APN settings, local signal map, and a factory network reset) and supplied diagnostic logs via your diagnostics tool on 09/03/2026. To date there has been no substantive update in the portal and the ticket remains listed as "under investigation". I work as a consultant and rely on stable mobile data for client calls; this uncertainty is beginning to impact billable hours. Please provide a technical status update, the expected resolution timeline, and whether this will be prioritised. I would like a response within 48 hours with either a fix or a scheduled engineering action.

CORRECT TEXT: My company, Reeves Catering Ltd, has been without a reliable broadband connection since the fibre upgrade began on 5 May. Payments for orders are taking longer to process when the POS terminal loses its connection and I've had to turn away two larger events as a result. I have spoken to customer services on 10 May (advisor: Sophie), 14 May (advisor: Jason) and raised the online escalation form on 16 May; each time I have been told someone will get back with a progress update but I have not received any substantive information other than automated status changes. I am now at the point where continued silence is affecting my livelihood. Please escalate this matter to a manager and provide a clear timetable for a fix or the ombudsman contact details if you cannot commit to timescales within five working days.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text uses more explicit and severe language to describe the business impact and financial loss ('turn away two larger events', 'affecting my livelihood') and explicitly requests escalation to a manager, even mentioning an external regulatory body (ombudsman). In contrast, the error text's impact statement ('beginning to impact billable hours') is less concrete, and its time-bound request ('response within 48 hours') lacks the explicit escalation to a higher authority or external threat present in the correct text.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be more sensitive to highly explicit and severe statements of financial loss and direct requests for managerial escalation or threats of external action (e.g., ombudsman), potentially under-weighting more nuanced or less overtly aggressive statements of business impact and time-bound requests for resolution.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where financial impact is stated as 'beginning to affect' or is less overtly severe, and where time-bound requests (e.g., 'within 48 hours') are present without explicit escalation keywords, ensuring these are consistently labeled as 'Medium' urgency.

Pair #95 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I have been with you for more than ten years. Today I am writing because of what I can only describe as a cascade of failures by your automated front line. At 14:07 on 23 March I started a chat session via the app, session ID 7c9a21b2 - the transcript shows the chatbot asking me to verify my postcode, then ignoring the verification and suggesting a full equipment reset. I provided a screenshot of the error message (voucher shows 10 days remaining, app display shows 0), and the bot responded with the same troubleshooting checklist three times in succession. At 14:23 I asked to speak to a human. The bot replied that an agent would be with me shortly, then closed the window and emailed me a canned 'we thought we solved your issue' note at 14:30. I called support at 15:05 and the agent, Marcus, confirmed he could see the transcript but could not access the diagnostic logs the bot referenced. He said he would escalate to Tier 2; the reference number he gave is 48291. This is my first formal complaint about the matter. I am not seeking immediate compensation - the fault is minor - but I am extremely frustrated by the lack of coherent handover between automated systems and human staff. The bot will not surface the correct information to agents, agents cannot access the logs the bot cites, and I am left repeating myself. Please investigate the session continuity problem, supply the Tier 2 update that Marcus promised, and outline the steps you will take to ensure that automated triage actually hands cases to humans where appropriate. I expect a technical response detailing session ID 7c9a21b2 and the diagnostic outcome, otherwise I will escalate through your formal complaints procedure.

CORRECT TEXT: I have been a customer of your network for over a decade and I am contacting you because the automated chat assistant has repeatedly failed to address what should be a straightforward enquiry. I first tried the chatbot on 02 March 2026 to request clarification about recurring voicemail charges, received an unhelpful scripted response asking me to restart my device, and was then directed to an FAQ that did not cover the charge. I tried again on 09 March and 16 March; on each occasion the bot cycled through the same sequence and terminated the session with an invitation to call instead. On 23 March I finally managed to reach a human agent, Sophia, who noted the issue and said a specialist would follow up within five working days - I have not received that follow-up.

To be precise: the problem is not the charge itself but the support path. The conversational agent repeatedly requests irrelevant information, fails to acknowledge previous session IDs (chat IDs CH-02032026 and CH-09032026), and gives instructions that are not applicable to my device. This has led to multiple repetitions of basic account data and wasted time. I am requesting that this matter be escalated to a human advisor in the billing team, that the bot transcripts for the above chat IDs be reviewed for training improvement, and that I receive a clear timeline for when a specialist will contact me. I would also welcome a short explanation of what measures you will take to prevent similar loops for long-standing customers. I am of course willing to provide further details if required, but I would prefer a single, substantive response rather than another automated exchange.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text concludes with an explicit, conditional threat of personal escalation ('otherwise I will escalate through your formal complaints procedure'), whereas the correct text requests internal escalation to a human advisor but does not contain a similar personal threat of further action by the customer.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on explicit, conditional threats of escalation as a primary signal for higher urgency, potentially overriding other contextual cues like the customer's explicit statement that 'the fault is minor' and 'I am not seeking immediate compensation'.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where customers explicitly state a low-urgency issue but include a conditional threat of personal escalation, ensuring these are correctly labeled as 'Low' urgency.

ERROR TEXT: Dear Customer Services,

I am contacting you as the account holder for Family Plan ID 77-438-900. I manage this mobile plan for my family (4 lines) and have been a customer for several years. On 03/03/2026 I queried my monthly bill with your adviser Hannah R. (call reference CRN-232903) who advised she would escalate because the plan price applied to my account, GBP 38.99 per month, appears to be significantly higher than a promotional rate currently marketed to new customers (GBP 26.99 per month) for the same 'Together 50' product.

This is my second attempt to obtain a satisfactory explanation. I raised the matter informally by telephone and was told it would be reviewed; no adjustment or further correspondence has been received. I am requesting a formal review of my account charges, a retrospective credit for any difference since 01/01/2026, and an assurance that my plan will be aligned with equivalent new-customer tariffs or an alternative loyalty offer. Please respond with your decision and calculations within 14 days. If you require further documentation, advise promptly so I can provide it. I expect a clear, professional resolution without further delay.

Yours sincerely,
Daniela Browne
CORRECT TEXT: I am writing again because my account is being charged more than new customer offers despite my loyalty. I raised this on 18/02/2026 with your retention team (case REF 20260218-LP) and was told by Rachael that the account would be reviewed and I would receive a revised bill. That promised follow-up did not arrive. I am a software developer and keep track of market pricing; similar contracts with comparable speeds and inclusive allowances are advertised at GBP 28-GBP 30 per month. My latest bill dated 01/03/2026 shows GBP 42.50. I expect precise justification for the premium and a correction where no contractual basis exists for the surcharge. I request a written breakdown of the charges applied since January 2026, immediate application of any loyalty discount available to long-standing customers and a credit for the difference back to the date I first queried the issue. If you cannot produce an acceptable resolution within seven days I will cancel and transfer my services to a competitor and pursue reimbursement for any overcharged sums. Please escalate this matter internally and provide a named contact who will take ownership of the case.

1. Linguistic Delta:
The correct text includes an explicit, time-bound threat of customer churn and pursuit of reimbursement ('If you cannot produce an acceptable resolution within seven days I will cancel and transfer my services to a competitor and pursue reimbursement...') and a direct request for internal escalation. The error text, while expressing dissatisfaction and setting a 14-day deadline, lacks this specific, actionable consequence and direct escalation request.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:
The model's attention mechanism appears to be heavily weighted towards explicit, short-term threats of negative customer action (e.g., churn, legal action) and direct escalation requests as primary indicators of 'Medium' urgency. It fails to adequately interpret repeated attempts, significant financial discrepancy, and a general expectation of 'without further delay' as sufficient for 'Medium' urgency when these explicit triggers are absent.

3. Actionable Fix:
Augment the training data with more 'Medium' urgency examples that feature explicit, time-bound threats of customer churn or legal action, and direct requests for internal escalation, to reinforce these as strong urgency signals.

ERROR TEXT: I have exhausted your standard complaint channels and require escalation.

Account name: Sarah Malik. Mobile number: 07412 958034. I am a student on a limited income. On 18 February 2026 I phoned your support line and spoke with James Carter (call ref 18FEB-2203). He confirmed that my tariff would not increase until the end of my 12?month fixed period but that the system showed a price rise effective 1 March. I raised this again with Customer Resolutions on 26 February (CR-9981) and received no substantive reply.

This appears to be a breach of the fixed-term pricing terms set out in clause 4.2 of my contract dated 02/03/2025. Your unilateral application of a higher rate before the term ends is not permitted without my explicit consent. I am therefore formally requesting: (a) immediate correction of my billing to reflect the contracted price from 01/03/2026; (b) refund of any overpayments; and (c) a written confirmation that my tariff will remain at the contracted rate for the remainder of the fixed term.

If you do not provide a satisfactory resolution within 14 calendar days of this message I will escalate to the independent adjudicator and pursue the matter through the Communications Ombudsman. I am attaching copies of the contract page, the two call references and the March invoice that shows the higher charge. Please transfer this matter to a senior manager for urgent review and confirm receipt and intended timetable for action by return.

CORRECT TEXT: I am registered disabled and I am writing because I have been demonstrably penalised for staying with you. My contract renewal in January 2026 increased my monthly line rental to GBP 46.50 even though new customers on the same plan were offered GBP 35. I phoned on 02/03/2026 and spoke with Rachel in Retentions (call reference LP-48192). Rachel admitted I was paying more than current promotions but declined to apply the new rate, saying the change was 'outside policy'. I then emailed customer support on 05/03/2026 and was told to ring back. I have made three separate attempts to resolve this through the normal consumer route and each time I have been passed from one script to another. I am on a fixed income and this disparity is not trivial to me. You are aware of the guidance under the Consumer Rights Act and Ofcom's expectations about fair pricing; I expect an immediate price match to the current advertised rate from the date my renewal took effect, an explanation of why loyal customers are charged more, and compensation for the overpayment dating back to January. I have kept all call recordings and email threads. I will accept a response from a manager within 14 days. Failing a satisfactory outcome I will refer the matter to the Ombudsman.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text contains explicit directives for immediate internal action and review, such as 'require escalation', 'urgent review', and 'by return', which are absent in the Correct Text. While both texts mention a 14-day resolution window, the Error Text's immediate action requests seem to have overridden this longer-term indicator for the model.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on phrases demanding immediate internal processing or review, failing to adequately weigh these against explicit, longer-term resolution deadlines (e.g., 'within 14 days') which are stronger indicators of 'Low' urgency in a formal complaint context.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where formal complaints explicitly request 'urgent review' or 'escalation' but also clearly state a multi-day (e.g., 7-14 day) response window, ensuring these are labeled as 'Low' urgency.

ERROR TEXT: I have been a customer since 2019, and the progression to this point feels like a book I didn't sign up to read. Freshers' term, 2019: I signed up because the student deal was reasonable and your staff promised loyalty would be recognised. Fast forward to 2026. Tuition fees have gone up; rent eats most of my grant; yet my monthly bill has grown while the adverts outside campus show new customers getting better deals. I first raised this with customer services on 02/03 (case 361-02-03) and spoke to Tom on 06/03 who said someone from retention would call. They did not. I have called back three times since - names I remember are Rhianna and Marcus - and each time I am put through hoops: re-verification, 'currently reviewing your account', suggestions to switch to a bundle I cannot afford, and automated offers that require me to transfer existing contract terms to a new plan. I have proof of better deals for new customers: the price gap is almost a fiver a month, which matters when I'm budgeting for food and books. I am not asking for charity. I am asking for fair treatment: either apply the best available student rate to my plan from next billing cycle, or give me a clear, penalty-free way to leave. Tell me which it will be and do it by 30 March, otherwise I will take this further with Citizens Advice and my university's student union.

CORRECT TEXT: My business, Harris & Co. Repairs, has depended on your line for telephone bookings for six years. On 11 March I raised a complaint with your retention team (account manager Kevin Patel) about pricing: long-term clients are being charged more than new customers on the same package. Kevin said he would review the account and call back within five working days. There has been no follow-up. Last month we missed two jobs and lost approximately GBP 320 in revenue because callers were presented with a higher tariff message that deterred them from booking. I am not a leisure customer; every call costs me lost work. I am now asking for three things: (1) an immediate adjustment to match the current new-customer rate for our package backdated to 11 March, with the difference credited to our account; (2) a goodwill payment to cover demonstrable lost revenue while this was unresolved; and (3) a named contact who will confirm in writing the adjustment and provide a direct number for escalation. I raised this once already and received an empty promise. My business cannot absorb further delay. Please treat this as urgent and respond with a full resolution within five working days, otherwise I will have to move suppliers and refer the case to the ombudsman because my livelihood is at stake.

Final Contrastive Error Analysis Report

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states quantifiable financial losses ('lost approximately GBP 320 in revenue') and directly links the issue to the customer's 'livelihood' and inability to 'absorb further delay,' reinforced by an explicit 'Please treat this as urgent' request. The error text, while detailing personal financial strain ('price gap is almost a fiver a month, which matters when I'm budgeting for food and books') and a deadline, frames the impact as personal budgeting difficulties and threatens escalation to advisory bodies, lacking the same direct, critical threat to immediate survival or operations.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to prioritize explicit, high-impact financial consequences (quantifiable revenue loss, direct threat to business operations/livelihood) and direct urgency markers over implicit personal financial strain and escalation to non-regulatory/non-business-critical entities. It fails to adequately weigh the cumulative impact of repeated failed attempts and the personal significance of a smaller financial burden when it directly impacts basic needs.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where personal financial strain, even if not explicitly quantified as a large sum, is presented with a clear, immediate, and critical impact on the individual's ability to meet basic needs or continue their current situation, and where escalation to advisory bodies still warrants a 'Medium' urgency.

ERROR TEXT: I switched from BrightWave on 2026-01-15 and took out your Home Broadband Plus package (account 87-3419-PL). My first bill, dated 2026-02-25 (invoice 20260234), includes a "new customer setup fee" of GBP 39.99 and a line rental surcharge of GBP 6.50 that were never disclosed when I signed up over the phone on 2026-01-12 with advisor Hannah. When I queried this on 2026-03-02 I was told by 'Tom' in billing that the setup fee was a one-off admin charge and would be refunded; that refund has not appeared. I have now called the complaints line three times (03/03 with Mia, 10/03 with Raj, 18/03 with Sasha), raised web chat case IDs CW-3321 and CW-3478, and been given inconsistent explanations about tariffs and microcharges. I have exhausted the usual channels and need a clear audit of every line item applied since activation, a full refund of the GBP 46.49 extra charged, and a written assurance that no further undisclosed fees will be billed. Please escalate this matter to a manager and, if you cannot resolve it promptly, I will pursue referral to the Ombudsman. I expect a response within five working days with confirmation and a timetable for refunding the amount.

CORRECT TEXT: My name is Margaret Hargreaves and I am writing because I cannot make sense of the bill I received on 3 March 2026. I am not comfortable with computers and rely entirely on paper statements. On that bill there is a charge of GBP 37.50 described as "service admin" and another of GBP 12.99 for "equipment protection" which I never agreed to. I took out a simple phone and broadband package in January 2025 and was told there would only be the monthly subscription and a line rental. There was no clear explanation of these extra amounts when the salesman set up the account over the phone. I phoned your automated line and a recorded message directed me to the online account, which I cannot use. I then rang the number given on my paperwork on 10 March 2026 and was on hold for half an hour before the call was dropped. This is my first time raising the matter formally because I did not know where else to turn. Please explain precisely what these charges are, supply a breakdown in plain English by post, and remove any fees that were not explicitly agreed. I am puzzled and upset to see my limited pension being reduced by charges I do not understand. I need someone to write to me at my home address with a clear explanation and a corrected bill within seven days, otherwise I will have no choice but to seek advice from my local Citizens Advice office.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly articulates the customer's personal vulnerability (e.g., 'not comfortable with computers', 'limited pension') and emotional distress ('puzzled and upset'), framing the external escalation as a last resort due to helplessness ('no choice'). The Error Text, despite containing strong formal escalation cues (e.g., 'exhausted the usual channels', 'escalate to a manager', 'Ombudsman threat'), presents them in a more procedural and less emotionally charged manner, lacking direct statements of personal impact or vulnerability.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be more sensitive to explicit expressions of personal vulnerability, emotional distress, and the framing of external escalation as a 'no choice' scenario, rather than formal, process-oriented statements of prior attempts, internal escalation requests, and procedural threats of external action, even when those threats are significant (Ombudsman) and accompanied by a firm deadline.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where formal escalation cues (e.g., 'exhausted channels', 'escalate to manager', 'Ombudsman threat', specific deadlines) are present without explicit emotional language, but still represent a 'Medium' urgency.

Pair #100 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I have called about the mid-contract price increase four times over the last three weeks: on 02 March 2026 (case no. 834210), 09 March 2026 (advisor Saira Khan), 16 March 2026 (advisor Tom Herbert) and again on 22 March 2026. Each advisor confirmed they had logged my complaint but so far the increase that took effect on 10 March 2026-from GBP 28.99 to GBP 33.99 per month-has not been reversed. My contract, signed electronically on 01 October 2025, contains no clause permitting unilateral increases outside agreed review windows unless I am given explicit notice and the option to terminate without penalty. I require an immediate reinstatement of the original tariff or a formal notice explaining the legal basis for this adjustment, together with confirmation that you will waive any exit fees should I choose to leave as a result. I am able to escalate this to the relevant regulator if necessary, but I would prefer a prompt commercial resolution within five business days.

CORRECT TEXT: Dear Sir or Madam,

I am notifying you of my objection to the contract alteration communicated by your letter dated 2 March 2026. My subscriber details: Ultra Fibre 200, 24?month contract commenced 1 September 2024, account reference 54-9921. The notification states my monthly fee will increase from GBP 35.00 to GBP 45.00 effective 1 April 2026. This change was not foreseen at the time of signature and is not justified under the terms set out in clause 4 of my agreement, which refers only to CPI-linked adjustments. I therefore require either (a) a reversion to the original tariff of GBP 35.00 with written confirmation, or (b) a no?penalty termination option should you proceed with an unjustified uplift.

Please respond with a contractual explanation and documentary evidence for the price rise within seven calendar days. If I do not receive a satisfactory reply I will consider exercising my statutory remedies under the Consumer Rights Act. I am raising this issue now as my first formal contact regarding the matter and expect a prompt, proportionate resolution.

Yours faithfully,
Alex Thompson

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text explicitly details a history of multiple prior, unresolved contacts ('four times over the last three weeks') and includes a demand for 'immediate reinstatement,' which, despite being followed by a five-business-day resolution preference, seems to have overridden the explicit deadline. In contrast, the Correct Text explicitly states it is the 'first formal contact' regarding the matter, which inherently signals a lower level of accumulated frustration.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on indicators of past frustration and strong initial demands (e.g., 'four times over the last three weeks,' 'immediate reinstatement,' 'able to escalate... if necessary') and under-index on explicit, medium-term deadlines and stated preferences for commercial resolution within that timeframe (e.g., 'prefer a prompt commercial resolution within five business days'). It fails to correctly weigh the explicit deadline as the primary urgency determinant when a history of prior attempts is present.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where a history of prior unresolved attempts and strong initial demands are explicitly followed by a clear, medium-term deadline for commercial resolution, ensuring the label remains 'Medium' to teach the model to prioritize the explicit deadline over accumulated frustration.

ERROR TEXT: I raised this once on 9 April with Ben on the retention team and was told nothing could be done. That answer sat badly with me so I'm writing again. I'm on the same package I signed up to three years ago yet new customers are being offered better deals for identical speeds and allowances. I have proof of the current offers on your website and screenshots of my last bill. I don't care for excuses about 'system rules'. Match the advertised price for new customers, apply the difference as a credit from 1 May, and explain why loyalty is being charged a premium. If you can't, tell me plainly so I can move providers.
CORRECT TEXT: Hi - I've been with you for 12 years and I'm on a fixed income because of a mobility impairment. My renewal offer arrived on 8 March 2026 quoting GBP 40 per month, yet I can see new-customer deals advertised at around GBP 28 per month. I don't want to move providers, but this discrepancy feels like a loyalty penalty and is difficult on my budget. Could you review my account and either match the best available new-customer rate or explain any legitimate reasons for the higher quote? I can provide proof of benefits if that helps when assessing concessions for long-standing customers in my situation.

1. Linguistic Delta:
The Error Text concludes with a direct, conditional ultimatum to 'move providers' if the request is not met, implying a potential churn risk. In contrast, the Correct Text explicitly states 'I don't want to move providers,' mitigating any perceived threat of immediate customer loss.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:
The model's attention mechanism overweights explicit, conditional statements of customer churn (e.g., 'so I can move providers') as a strong indicator of 'Medium' urgency, failing to contextualize it within the broader 'Low' urgency of the request (e.g., no immediate financial crisis, no short deadline).

3. Actionable Fix:
Augment training data with more examples where customers use conditional threats of moving providers as a negotiation tactic, but the overall context and tone still indicate low urgency.

Pair #102 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I am writing again because your withdrawal of 3G services on 12 March 2026 has left my phone unreliable and you have not provided a lawful or contractual remedy. I have reported this problem three times so far: first to Helen in Customer Care on 14 March (case 342198), then to Raj via webchat on 18 March, and most recently to the retention team on 22 March when I insisted on escalation. Each time I was promised a technical review and a specific timescale; none of those timescales were met and I received no substantive update.

My contract makes no provision for being moved to inferior service without compensation or an option to exit. My handset relies on 3G fallback for secure hardware token connectivity, which failed repeatedly between 12-15 March, causing me to miss two client calls and to be locked out of work applications. That is a predictable consequence of withdrawing a network layer without adequate migration support. I am a paying customer who planned around the service you sold me. Your unilateral change to service capability amounts to a variation of contract.

I am requesting the following within seven days: a formal written explanation of the technical reason for service loss; a clear statement of my contractual options (including immediate exit without penalty); and compensation equivalent to the proportion of my monthly bill for the period in which the service has been degraded. If you cannot supply these, please escalate this to your legal or regulatory complaints team and provide a named contact. If I do not receive a satisfactory response by 1 April 2026 I will refer this matter to Ofcom and pursue remedies under the Consumer Rights Act 2015. I do not want further automated responses; provide a named individual and a timetable.
CORRECT TEXT: I recently ported my number to your service on 25 January 2026 and on 15 February the apparent 3G network

change degraded the service so severely that the mobile data I purchased is no longer fit for purpose. I raised this previously on 10 February (reference SRN652134) and received no substantive resolution. Under the Consumer Rights Act 2015 and your own stated terms, services supplied must be of satisfactory quality and as described. They are currently neither.

I have attempted troubleshooting with your technical support on 11 and 14 February yet connectivity remains intermittent when using legacy 3G-only devices required by some of my field staff. As a recent transferee from another supplier I reasonably expected continuity; instead we face operational disruption. I therefore request the following remedies within seven days: (1) immediate provision of a compatible network fallback or a suitable device replacement at no additional cost; (2) a pro rata rebate for the period of impaired service; and (3) a clear statement of steps you will take to prevent recurrence. If you fail to resolve the matter promptly I will seek contract termination without penalty and consider escalating this to Ofcom or the ADR scheme.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text contains a more definitive and multi-pronged threat of legal/regulatory action ('I will refer this matter to Ofcom and pursue remedies under the Consumer Rights Act 2015') with a specific deadline ('by 1 April 2026'), explicitly states a higher number of failed prior attempts ('reported this problem three times... insisted on escalation'), and details severe personal professional impact ('miss two client calls and to be locked out of work applications'). In contrast, the correct text's threat is less definitive ('consider escalating this to Ofcom or the ADR scheme'), mentions fewer prior attempts, and describes a more general 'operational disruption'.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-prioritize the certainty and specificity of external escalation threats, the cumulative count of failed prior interactions, and the directness of personal professional impact, leading it to misclassify 'Medium' urgency as 'High' when these elements are strongly present.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples of 'Medium' urgency that include explicit threats of legal/regulatory action with specific deadlines, multiple failed prior attempts, and clear statements of significant personal or professional disruption, ensuring these are correctly labeled as 'Medium'.

Pair #103 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I moved over from my previous provider because I wanted a straightforward unlimited data plan, and since 05/03/2026 I have been chasing the fact your system lists me on a different tariff. I have called three times - 07/03, 14/03 and this morning 22/03 - and spoke with Mark and then Leah, who both promised corrections would be made. The problem remains: my account shows a 200GB cap and a premium channel bundle I did not order, and I have received a bill for an extra GBP 28.50 this month. I'm not looking for a lecture; I just want the plan I signed up for applied to my account, the incorrect charges refunded, and email confirmation that the cap and unwanted extras have been removed. Please action this and confirm by return so I can stop checking my account every day.

CORRECT TEXT: I moved my account from another provider on 5 March 2026 and spoke to a sales adviser called Sam on 8 March. Sam sold me what he described as a full home fibre package including my existing landline, but the paperwork I received on 9 March is for a mobile-only plan. My broadband and landline were cancelled on 12 March and we have been without internet and phone since 13 March. My partner works from home and we need the connection restored as soon as possible. This is the first time I am raising the issue; please correct the account to the package I was sold and confirm when an engineer will complete the correct installation and reinstate the cancelled services. I would also like a clear note of any compensation for the downtime and for any reasonable costs I incur while this is resolved. This is disappointing given I only switched last month, but I am seeking a practical fix now.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states the loss of critical services (broadband and landline) and the direct, immediate impact on an essential activity ('partner works from home and we need the connection restored as soon as possible'). The error text, while detailing a prolonged history of administrative failures, repeated contacts, and financial discrepancies, lacks this direct articulation of a critical service outage or an immediate, essential operational impact.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's urgency detection mechanism appears to prioritize the type and immediacy of impact (e.g., loss of essential services, direct impact on work) over the cumulative effect of repeated administrative failures and prolonged hassle, even when these lead to significant user frustration and financial burden.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where the urgency is high due to a prolonged history of unresolved administrative issues, repeated broken promises, and ongoing financial discrepancies, even in the absence of a complete service outage, to teach the model to recognize cumulative frustration and administrative burden as high urgency.

Pair #104 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I am writing after exhausting your frontline teams and automated routes. Over the last three billing cycles I have been charged a series of previously undisclosed items: a so-called 'service administration' fee of GBP 7.50 on 28 January 2026 and 28 February 2026, a 'router activation' charge of GBP 45 on 14 January despite my plan including a free router, and an unexplained 'account maintenance' entry of GBP 3.99 on 1 March. I reviewed the tariff information available at sign-up and on your website: none of these items is mentioned in the documentation I received. I have spoken at length to support agents Leah (18 February) and Kareem (3 March) and to the retention team on 10 March - each of them promised an itemised bill and an investigation. Nothing has been provided and my online bill remains opaque. I work in digital product and I am not willing to accept vague descriptions. Provide an itemised chargeback for each billing period, the exact contractual clause permitting each fee, and a full refund for charges you cannot substantiate. I have already tried standard channels and require escalation to a manager; if that fails I will submit a formal complaint to the ombudsman. Please confirm the manager's name and an expected timetable for a substantive reply within five working days.

CORRECT TEXT: My name is Margaret Hargreaves and I am writing because I cannot make sense of the bill I received on 3 March 2026. I am not comfortable with computers and rely entirely on paper statements. On that bill there is a charge of GBP 37.50 described as "service admin" and another of GBP 12.99 for "equipment protection" which I never agreed to. I need someone to write to me at my home address with a clear explanation and a corrected bill within seven days, otherwise I will have no choice but to seek advice from my local Citizens Advice office.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly details the customer's personal vulnerability (e.g., 'not comfortable with computers', 'rely entirely on paper statements', 'limited pension being reduced') and inability to use standard digital channels, framing the issue as a significant personal hardship. In contrast, the error text presents an assertive, digitally literate customer ('I work in digital product') who has exhausted channels, but without the same emphasis on personal distress or inability.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model appears to be under-indexing on the combination of expressed customer vulnerability and practical barriers to resolution, even when coupled with a clear escalation threat. It seems to prioritize direct, assertive language or specific keywords for 'Medium' urgency, potentially misinterpreting customer assertiveness (as seen in the error text) as a sign of lower urgency, rather than recognizing the cumulative impact of distress and failed attempts.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where customer vulnerability, distress, or explicit inability to navigate standard channels are combined with a clear, conditional escalation threat, ensuring these are consistently labeled as

'Medium' urgency.

ERROR TEXT: I am writing again because my broadband speed problem remains unresolved despite prior contact on 08/03/2026 (case reference 452789) with advisor Tom Lewis. I have a chronic illness which makes remote consultations and medication management dependent on reliable video calls, so a stable connection is important. Since my initial report I have kept a detailed log: 02/03/2026 21:00 - wired test 3.2 Mbps, 03/03/2026 14:30 - wireless test 4.5 Mbps, 05/03/2026 02:00 - brief spike to 60 Mbps then immediate return to 2-5 Mbps, 09/03/2026 19:45 - consistent 3.8 Mbps during evening hours. I have followed the troubleshooting steps suggested in the first call: full factory reset of the router on 09/03/2026, replacement of ethernet cables, isolation test with a single device and re-siting the router away from interfering equipment. None of these measures produced a lasting improvement. Tom advised that a line test would be scheduled but I have had no confirmation of an engineer appointment or test results. Given the intermittent nature and clear pattern of evening degradation, I am asking for a timed, on-site line test by a qualified engineer and a clear written explanation of the root cause once identified. If the problem is not resolved promptly I would like to discuss a temporary credit to reflect the period of reduced service and reasonable options for escalation. Please provide available appointment slots and the next steps in writing.

CORRECT TEXT: My student budget does not stretch to paying for a service that doesn't work. I signed up on 04/02/2026 for the 67Mbps student package because that was what was advertised and what I was promised on the phone by Sophie in Sales on 04/02. Since installation on 09/02 the line has been unusable for anything that resembles studying: recorded speeds between 2 and 5Mbps at 20:00 and regularly dropping below 1Mbps at peak times. I have kept a log: speedtests on 15/02 (2.3Mbps), 27/02 (1.1Mbps) and 05/03 (4.2Mbps). I called Customer Services on 07/03 and spoke with Raj who ran a remote test and said an engineer would be dispatched - that engineer appointment never happened and the ticket was closed without explanation on 10/03 (ref: TCK-5941). I have since escalated via the webchat twice, on 12/03 and 18/03, and each time was given a different diagnosis and no clear timescale. I'm a student paying rent and bills on a fixed budget; this constant buffering and dropped uploads is more than irritating, it's preventing me from submitting coursework reliably. I have exhausted the normal channels. I want this escalated to a manager immediately and, failing a satisfactory technical fix and a pro rata refund, I will be taking this complaint to the Ombudsman. Please call me with a clear action plan and reliable appointment times - not vague promises. My account number is 411-87-23 and my availability for an engineer visit is weekday afternoons. I am prepared to wait a few days for the right solution, but I will not accept being strung along any longer.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states a willingness to wait ('I am prepared to wait a few days for the right solution'), which directly counteracts other strong urgency cues. The error text, while containing strong personal impact ('chronic illness which makes remote consultations and medication management dependent on reliable video calls') and a request for 'prompt' resolution, lacks any explicit phrase indicating a willingness to wait, leading the model to over-index on the urgency cues.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is failing to adequately weigh explicit statements of patience or willingness to wait as strong de-escalators of urgency, especially when juxtaposed with significant personal impact or general calls for prompt resolution. It appears to over-prioritize the presence of personal impact and general escalation language when a clear counter-signal of lower urgency is absent.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where strong personal impact or escalation threats are present, but the overall urgency is explicitly mitigated by a statement indicating patience or a willingness to wait for a solution.

ERROR TEXT: I am the primary account holder for the family plan (account number 98-765432) and I am following up on an unresolved billing matter. On 1 March I contacted the billing team by email and spoke with Claire on 3 March; I was told the disputed items would be investigated and I would receive an itemised bill within seven days. That did not happen. Over the billing cycle for January to March there are several unexpected entries labelled "service adjustment" totalling GBP 72.45 (dates: 12 Jan GBP 20.00, 5 Feb GBP 22.45, 20 Mar GBP 30.00). I require a full, line-by-line breakdown of these charges, an explanation of why they were applied to my family plan rather than individual add-ons, and a refund of any amounts incorrectly billed. As a parent arranging multiple dependent lines, I need clarity because we budget monthly and these fees are significant. Please respond with the requested documentation and a proposed remedy within 10 working days; if I do not receive a satisfactory response I will escalate the complaint to the Ombudsman and seek reimbursement plus reasonable compensation for the administrative time this has cost me.

CORRECT TEXT: My name is Margaret Hargreaves and I am writing because I cannot make sense of the bill I received on 3 March 2026. I am not comfortable with computers and rely entirely on paper statements. On that bill there is a charge of GBP 37.50 described as "service admin" and another of GBP 12.99 for "equipment protection" which I never agreed to. I need someone to write to me at my home address with a clear explanation and a corrected bill within seven days, otherwise I will have no choice but to seek advice from my local Citizens Advice office.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly details multiple, frustrating, and unsuccessful attempts to contact customer service (e.g., 'on hold for half an hour before the call was dropped,' 'cannot use' online account), and highlights the customer's vulnerability ('not comfortable with computers,' 'limited pension'). The error text, while mentioning previous contact and an unresolved issue, describes these interactions more factually without conveying the same level of active struggle or systemic service failure.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be under-weighting or failing to synthesize the urgency implied by a clear escalation threat and a specific deadline when it is not accompanied by a strong narrative of prior customer service failures or explicit statements of customer vulnerability/frustration. It seems to require a more vivid description of the customer's struggle and the company's failure to provide support channels.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where the urgency is primarily conveyed through explicit escalation threats and deadlines, even when the narrative of prior customer service failures is less detailed or emotionally charged, and where financial impact is significant but not tied to explicit vulnerability.

ERROR TEXT: I switched to your service on 02 February 2026 because the sales rep in store assured me coverage would be identical to my previous provider. That has not been the case. Since switching I've contacted support on 5 separate occasions: 08/02 (call with Tom, ref 90214), 19/02 (chat with Elaine, advised a SIM swap), 03/03 (call with Mohammed, engineer appointment promised), and 10/03 (escalation to technical team, ref 91477). Each time I was told the issue would be resolved within 7 days. It has not. At home - 34 Highbury Road, Horsham - voice calls drop completely indoors and data reverts to 3G only, often failing to load emails. At the small branch I opened last month the signal fluctuates so much staff cannot take card payments reliably; customers leave annoyed. I have logged detailed notes and kept screenshots of signal bars and timestamped failed call logs. On 12 March I even moved the router to a window and followed the troubleshooting script; performance improved slightly for an hour and then fell away. I expected better after leaving my previous provider of 12 years. This is the fourth week of repeated promises and no lasting fix. I want a full explanation of why coverage at my postcode is below the advertised levels, the specific steps you will take to address it (including timescales), and reasonable compensation for the times your service has been unusable for business purposes. If you need access to the premises for tests, I am available weekday mornings but insist on prior notice. Please escalate this to your network team and provide a named contact. I do not want another generic reply.

CORRECT TEXT: I run a small photography business and poor indoor signal in my studio has become a persistent problem. I first reported dropped calls and patchy data inside 28 High Street on 10 January; the agent, Tom, logged a complaint and said an engineer would check local coverage. Nothing happened. I chased on 24 January and then again on 7 February; each time I was given a different explanation - congestion, a temporary mast fault, then a suggestion I switch to 4G only - and told someone would escalate to network engineering. There have been at least four contacts in total. On 18 February I had a call with Jas from technical support who booked a site survey for 3 March; nobody turned up and the survey was marked completed in the notes. The consequence is that I cannot reliably take booking calls from clients when I am in the studio; I have missed two tentative bookings because calls dropped, which is irksome and worrying. This is not catastrophic - payments and accounting are unaffected - but it is damaging to my reputation and causes unnecessary stress. I have tried everything short of changing premises. I require a proper local radio survey, a clear explanation of why appointments are being marked as completed when no engineer attends, and a timeline for any remedial action (signal booster or mast work). I will wait for a substantive reply, but I expect you to stop treating this as minor noise and give me one accountable contact to resolve it.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly includes a phrase that directly mitigates perceived urgency ('This is not catastrophic'), which is entirely absent in the Error Text. The Error Text, in contrast, contains stronger, unmitigated statements of direct business impact (e.g., 'staff cannot take card payments reliably; customers leave annoyed') and explicit demands for compensation and escalation.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on the presence of direct business impact, financial demands, and explicit escalation requests. It fails to correctly infer 'Low' urgency from the overall context when an explicit de-escalation statement is absent, even if the described impact does not represent an immediate, critical threat.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more 'Low' urgency examples that describe significant business impact and frustration, but without an explicit de-escalation phrase, to teach the model to rely more on the overall severity and immediacy of the threat rather than just the presence of negative consequences or escalation demands.

ERROR TEXT: I switched to your 'Unlimited Plus' plan last year and have been paying GBP 32.00 per month. The bill dated 01/03/2026 shows the monthly charge has jumped to GBP 36.00 without any agreement from me. I have called three times already (02/03 with Nina, 10/03 with Luke and 20/03 with a billing advisor whose name I didn't catch) and received inconsistent explanations: one agent said the increase was due to 'contract changes', another suggested it was a price-rise notification buried in an email I supposedly received. I did not authorise a mid-contract increase and I am not receiving any additional services to justify the extra GBP 4 per month. I'm tech-savvy and have reviewed my account settings and communications - there is no clear consent. Please either reinstate the original GBP 32.00 rate or allow me to terminate without penalty. I would prefer this resolved quickly and fairly; if you need confirmation of the previous price or copies of the bills, I can supply them.

CORRECT TEXT: My name is Owen Patel, account holder. On 4 March you informed me that my monthly service fee would increase by GBP 3.50 from 1 April - mid-way through a 24-month contract that began on 1 June last year. I have spoken to customer services three times since then (live chat on 5 March with Nina; phone call on 8 March with call handler Mark; email response from general support on 10 March). None of those contacts provided a contract clause that allows this unilateral increase, despite my request to be shown one. I am technically competent and have reviewed the documents you sent; they do not contain clear wording giving you the right to raise the price during the committed term. I am asking for a written, clause-by-clause justification for the increase or for the price to be reverted to the original amount for the remainder of the contract. I have no interest in being transferred between teams. If you cannot produce the contractual basis for this increase within seven working days, escalate this to a manager and confirm in writing that you will either roll back the increase or offer an acceptable alternative. If this matter is not resolved satisfactorily I will refer it to the Energy and Utilities Ombudsman. I expect a substantive reply that addresses the contract terms and my specific demands, not a standard scripted response.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text includes a direct, albeit polite, expression of desired promptness ('I would prefer this resolved quickly and fairly') in its concluding statement, following a history of multiple failed attempts. The correct text, while also detailing repeated failed attempts, frames its escalation cues as conditional, future-oriented threats ('If you cannot produce... within seven working days...', 'If this matter is not resolved satisfactorily I will refer it...'), which the model correctly interpreted as 'Low' urgency.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model appears to be over-sensitive to direct, present-tense expressions of desired promptness, even when phrased as a preference, especially when preceded by a detailed history of failed attempts and inconsistent information. It fails to adequately distinguish between a general preference for speed and a concrete, time-bound demand or immediate threat.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where customers express a preference for quick resolution after multiple failed attempts, but without explicit deadlines or severe consequences, are consistently labeled as 'Low' urgency.

ERROR TEXT: When I needed to check whether my student discount had been applied, the experience of trying to speak to your team turned into a small saga. I called at 9.20am on 1 March 2026 because I was heading to a lecture at 11.00; I was put on hold, waited 28 minutes and then had to leave to avoid missing class. I tried again at 7.45pm that same day from the library and waited 35 minutes before the line dropped out. I made two further attempts on 6 March and 11 March and each time the queue was roughly half an hour or longer, which is awkward around teaching and part?time work.

I am a student with limited funds and the discount would affect my monthly spend, so I'd be grateful if someone could check my account history for the applied discounts and confirm in writing whether the student rate is active. A call-back at an agreed time would also be helpful, as I don't want to keep missing lectures to get this sorted. I don't need an immediate fix, but I would like a clear answer within a couple of weeks.

CORRECT TEXT: I'm writing because long waits to speak to anyone are no longer acceptable. I have chronic fatigue and need to manage my energy; on 2 March I phoned at 09:40 and was on hold for 47 minutes before a rep disconnected. On 9 March I tried again and waited 35 minutes; I was finally put through to Sarah who said she'd arrange a call-back the same day - she didn't. On 16 March I spent 52 minutes on hold and was told by Tom that someone in complaints would ring me; again, no call. I'm exhausted by the process and feel dismissed each time I try to resolve what should be a simple matter. Because standard contact methods have been ineffective I am asking for this to be escalated to a manager and, if necessary, referred to the Ombudsman. I need a manager-level review of my account and an explanation of why promises of call-backs and responses have not been met. I can cope with a few days' wait, but not repeated broken commitments.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text features a direct and unconditional statement of low urgency ('I can cope with a few days' wait'), which effectively overrides other potential cues of higher urgency like escalation language. In contrast, the Error Text's low urgency statement ('I don't need an immediate fix, but I would like a clear answer within a couple of weeks') is less definitive due to the 'but' clause and is overshadowed by detailed descriptions of repeated personal inconvenience and financial impact.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-prioritize detailed descriptions of repeated personal inconvenience

(e.g., missing classes, affecting work) and financial impact, interpreting these as 'Medium' urgency, especially when the explicit low urgency statement is phrased with a slight concession or condition ('but I would like...'), rather than a direct affirmation of patience.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where detailed descriptions of repeated personal inconvenience and financial impact are explicitly followed by a clear, low urgency timeframe, ensuring the model learns to prioritize the stated timeframe over the severity of past inconvenience.

ERROR TEXT: When I signed up I thought cancelling would be straightforward. It isn't. Over the last three weeks I've chased this five times: live chat on 04/03/2026 that timed out after a transfer, a phone call on 09/03/2026 where an agent promised a confirmation email that never arrived, another chat on 15/03/2026 where I was told a supervisor would call within 48 hours, and two further messages over the weekend. Each time I get told 'it's arranged' and then silence.

I'm tech-savvy and have screenshots of chat transcripts, the reference IDs, and the scheduled callback times that never happened. I want the service cancelled, confirmation emailed to me, and any further direct debit stopped from next month. If you need the account details they are under the name Samir Khan, account ending 3421. This runaround is tedious and unacceptable - please fix it properly this time.

CORRECT TEXT: I phoned to cancel my landline because I don't want two of the same services and I'm fed up with the confusion. The story is this: on 2 February I rang and spoke to Karen in cancellations who said she would arrange it and send a confirmation. Nothing arrived. On 8 February I rang back; a man called Paul told me it was on hold because of a technical note and that it would definitely be done by 10 February. It wasn't. On 17 February my neighbour, who did me a favour and tried the online account for me, found the line still active and charging me. I called again on 20 February and spoke to a different advisor, who opened a complaint and gave reference 78-9083. That reference hasn't been updated. I am old and weak with these digital hoops. I have followed every instruction, waited the promised three working days twice, and still the subscription is active. I am asking now for a manager's intervention and, if necessary, I will take this to the Ombudsman because I have exhausted your normal channels. I do not want estrangement or argument. I want the cancellation completed, a final bill showing only what I owe, and a written confirmation sent to my home address. I am upset that a simple, reasonable request has become a month-long series of false promises.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly states an intent to escalate the issue to an external, formal body (the Ombudsman) if internal channels fail, framing the problem within a structured, albeit prolonged, complaint process. The Error Text, while conveying significant frustration and repeated attempts, does not mention any specific external escalation path, thereby implying a more immediate expectation for internal resolution.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model appears to over-index on the intensity of frustration and the number of failed internal attempts in the Error Text, interpreting this as a demand for immediate internal intervention (Medium urgency). It fails to recognize that the explicit mention of a formal, external escalation path in the Correct Text often signals a user prepared for a structured, non-immediate process, which aligns with 'Low' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where explicit threats of formal, external escalation (e.g., Ombudsman, legal action) are consistently labeled 'Low' urgency, as they often indicate a user prepared for a structured, non-immediate process.

Pair #111 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I only switched to your network on 2 February and already something has gone badly wrong. On 8 March I realised I could not access my email or banking app because texts and calls were not coming through. My phone was dead on the network. Then I received a message saying a SIM change had been authorised. I had not requested this. My landlord called to say he had received strange calls from my number to premium rate numbers overnight and my bank alerted me to unauthorised transactions.

I reported this to your team on 9 March and spoke to Leah; she opened a ticket (reference FRA-9042) and assured me the SIM would be blocked and an investigation started. Nothing changed. I have since had to borrow a phone to receive work-related calls and to prove my identity to the bank. I feel violated and utterly exposed. I am losing income while I try to sort this out and I am anxious about identity theft.

I need immediate action: block this SIM and issue a new one, provide a written report of all activity on my account since 6 March, refund any fraudulent charges, and escalate this to your Fraud Team with a clear timeline for investigation. I have a police report being filed today and will supply the reference number when available. Please acknowledge receipt and tell me the name and direct contact of the person managing my case within 24 hours.
CORRECT TEXT: I've been a customer since 2006 and never written like this before, but something happened on 9 March that has shaken me. That morning my phone stopped receiving texts. By late afternoon I discovered a new voicemail telling me my number had been transferred - a transfer I did not request. I phoned immediately and my line went dead during the call. I watched a chunk of my mobile credit disappear on premium rate calls that I did not make. I am careful with my accounts; I keep PINs, I do not share details. Yet someone managed to reroute my number and charge me. I have images of the sudden spike in activity and timestamps showing the outage between 14:10 and 15:05 on 9/03. I'll be blunt: I feel betrayed. After more than a decade with you I expected better protections. Please explain how this could happen, undo the unauthorised transactions and confirm what you will do to prevent this occurring again. I need a substantive response within three working days.

1. Linguistic Delta:
The error text explicitly uses the phrase 'I need immediate action', specifies a very short deadline ('within 24 hours'), and mentions the involvement of external authorities ('police report being filed today'). It also lists a broader range of specific, urgent operational demands (e.g., 'block this SIM and issue a new one', 'escalate this to your Fraud Team'). In contrast, the correct text uses a less demanding tone, requests a 'substantive response within three working days', and focuses more on explanation and prevention rather than a multi-faceted, immediate operational intervention.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:
The model's attention mechanism over-indexes on explicit, high-intensity urgency markers such as 'immediate action', extremely short deadlines, and the mention of external legal action, leading it to classify a 'Medium' urgency case as 'High' when these strong linguistic cues are present. It struggles to contextualize these strong demands within the overall 'Medium' urgency framework, potentially over-prioritizing the intensity of the request over the inherent urgency level of the underlying issue as defined by the true label.

3. Actionable Fix:
Augment the training data with more examples where serious incidents containing explicit demands for 'immediate action', very short deadlines, or mentions of police involvement are correctly labeled as 'Medium' urgency, to teach the model to weigh these cues against the overall context.

Pair #112 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: Hi - this is my first time raising this but I need some help. I am registered disabled and have recently found my circumstances mean I can no longer reliably use the phone package I signed up to. I entered a 24-month contract on 1 January 2026, but due to a change in my health I have been advised by my GP to limit travel and reduce appointments outside the home. That makes the contract unsuitable and I need to cancel.

I can provide an NHS letter or GP note if required. Before I go through the formal cancellation route I would like to know whether you will waive the early termination charge of GBP 245 in these circumstances and, if not, what documentation you require. I'm hoping for a practical solution that recognises my situation. Please advise the next steps and how to submit medical evidence. This is the first time I have raised this matter with you, so if there is an internal concessions team please put me in touch with them.

CORRECT TEXT: Hi - I'm contacting you because an early termination charge has appeared on my account that I wasn't expecting and I need it removed straight away. I signed a 24?month SIM-only deal on 15 July 2023 and when I tried to port my number out on 10 March 2026 the portal showed a final bill with an early termination fee of GBP 320. I checked the sign-up page and the automated chat log and there was nothing obvious about that level of charge when I set up the plan. This is the first time I have raised the matter with you; I am a paying customer trying to move to another provider for work reasons and I cannot afford an unbudgeted GBP 320. Please confirm an immediate waiver or a corrected final bill and tell me what you need from me to resolve this today.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly uses strong temporal urgency markers ('straight away', 'today') and direct, immediate calls to action ('confirm an immediate waiver', 'resolve this today'). In contrast, the error text, despite detailing urgent underlying circumstances (health issues), frames the request as a preliminary inquiry for information and a potential waiver, using more polite, process-oriented language without explicit demands for immediate resolution of the request itself.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be heavily weighted towards explicit temporal adverbs and direct, immediate calls to action, failing to infer high urgency when the underlying reason for the request is critical (e.g., health-related disability) but the request itself is phrased as a polite inquiry or a first step in a process.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where the underlying circumstances are highly urgent (e.g., health crises, disability) but the customer's initial request is framed as a polite inquiry or a request for information, requiring the model to infer high urgency from the contextual details rather than explicit temporal markers or demanding language.

ERROR TEXT: SIM fraud: unauthorised transfer of my number on 14/03/26. I have called four times (14/03, 15/03, 18/03 and 22/03) and spoken with Rashid and Sophie; nothing fixed. I have a medical condition and rely on my phone for appointments and alerts. Block the compromised SIM, restore my original number to a secure SIM and refund any charges incurred. Send confirmation in writing today and provide the investigation reference. This needs prompt action.
CORRECT TEXT: On 15/03/2026 my number was ported away without authorisation and I subsequently discovered several unauthorised transactions totalling GBP 350 on my account. I reported the incident immediately and spoke with the fraud desk on 15/03/2026 and again on 18/03/2026 (agents recorded as Tom R. and Sarah P.). Both times I was told an investigation had been opened but I have received no substantive update, no reversal of the charges and no confirmation that my number has been secured against further unauthorised activity. The unauthorised port removed my access to two-factor authentication for work accounts, which is a material security issue. I therefore request an urgent, documented investigation, immediate reinstatement or suspension of the number to prevent further loss, and a full refund of the fraudulent charges. I have exhausted standard support routes and now require escalation to a senior fraud manager; if I do not receive a written response outlining remedial action within five working days I will lodge a complaint with the ombudsman and consider reporting the breach to Action Fraud.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The FAILED PREDICTION text includes a direct, immediate, and critical personal impact ('medical condition and rely on my phone for appointments and alerts') combined with unmitigated demands for immediate action ('today', 'prompt action'). In contrast, the CORRECT PREDICTION text, despite strong language and a security threat, explicitly provides a 'five working days' timeframe for resolution before external escalation, which serves as a strong cue for 'Medium' urgency.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism over-indexes on explicit statements of immediate personal harm (especially health-related) and direct, unmitigated demands for 'today' or 'prompt' action, failing to recognize that a specific, short-term deadline for escalation (e.g., 'within five working days') can downgrade the overall urgency from 'High' to 'Medium', even in the presence of significant issues.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where critical personal impacts or urgent demands are present, but the overall urgency is explicitly mitigated to 'Medium' by a clear, short-term deadline for resolution before external action.

ERROR TEXT: I am a student on a tight budget and this situation is becoming intolerable. I took out your SIM-only student plan on 4 January 2026 so I could afford travel and phone credit for interviews. On 22 February my calls began dropping and texts arrived hours late. I first reported it via web chat on 23 February and then spoke to Tom in Retentions on 26 February; he promised an engineer callback within 48 hours and a billing adjustment. Nothing happened. On 4 March I rang again and Priya opened ticket 587412 but said the engineer team were backlogged and would email me the week after. No email arrived. I tried the chat again on 10 March and was given a canned response and a further promise of escalation. That promise went nowhere too. I cannot keep missing calls from potential employers because your network is unreliable. I have used every normal channel-chat, phone, Twitter-and I have received nothing but empty assurances. I am asking now for a named manager to review my account and for a clear timeline for repair and fair compensation for the time I have been left without a working service. If I do not receive a direct manager contact within 72 hours I will have no choice but to refer this matter to the Ombudsman. This is not negotiable. I need this fixed and I need reassurance that I will not suffer further financial loss while you sort out what your frontline staff have repeatedly told me they would do and did not.

CORRECT TEXT: I run a small florist and the intermittent broadband fault that started on 2 March has now cost me customers and sales. I called first on 3 March and spoke to Sarah who logged fault 586291; she told me an engineer would investigate within 48 hours. On 9 March I called back because the problem persisted - Matthew updated the ticket and said the exchange was clear but placed a higher priority; he asked me to email diagnostics (I did at 09:10) and promised a call that afternoon. No call came. On 16 March I rang again (ticket now escalated to 586291/02) and was told by Priya that an on-site appointment was booked for 18 March. The engineer arrived late and left after 20 minutes saying it must be the line and another team would scope it. On 23 March I contacted customer care for the fourth time and Joe advised that I would receive daily updates until resolved. That was four days ago; there have been no updates. Orders fail intermittently during peak hours with web payments timing out; my till and card reader depend on steady connectivity. I have lost two large corporate contracts this month because confirmation emails and delivery slots couldn't be processed while your service kept dropping. This is not minor inconvenience - it is direct lost income. I need a clear timeline, a committed engineer visit with a guaranteed window, and reimbursement for the days of service failure. I will escalate further if I have to, but I want you to act now and stop making promises you do not keep.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states and quantifies current, incurred financial losses ('cost me customers and sales', 'lost two large corporate contracts', 'direct lost income'), whereas the error text describes potential future financial loss ('cannot keep missing calls from potential employers', 'suffer further financial loss') and loss of opportunity.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to heavily prioritize explicit, current, and quantifiable financial impact as a 'Medium' urgency cue, potentially under-weighting the urgency conveyed by significant potential financial loss, loss of critical opportunities, or strong threats of external escalation when the financial impact is not yet fully realized.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where the urgency is 'Medium' due to significant potential financial loss, loss of critical opportunities, or severe personal impact, even if the financial damage is not yet fully incurred or precisely quantified.

Pair #115 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I am a full-time student on a tight budget and I am writing after exhausting your standard channels without resolution.

Over the last three months my bills have included successive undisclosed charges described as 'equipment handling' (GBP 8.99 per month) and a retrospective 'paper invoice fee' (GBP 6.00). I have logged complaints via your web chat on 02/02/2026 (reference CH-2202-03), emailed customer services on 09/02/2026 (ref EM-0902) and called on 14/02/2026 (ref PH-1402-8). Each time I have been told the fees are 'standard' but I never consented to or was informed of them at contract formation. Under the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013 and the Consumer Rights Act 2015 you are obliged to provide clear pre-contract information about additional sums payable. I formally request repayment of GBP 44.96 (three months of the two fees), a written undertaking that no further undisclosed fees will be applied, and an explanation of how these charges were added to my account. If I do not receive satisfactory resolution within seven working days, I will escalate to the Communications Ombudsman and refer the matter to Ofcom for breach of complaint-handling obligations.

CORRECT TEXT: This is my first formal complaint but I expect a precise and prompt remedy. I have been charged a so-called "activation fee" of GBP 29.99 on my bill dated 02 March 2026, plus a "router handling" charge of GBP 14.50 that was not disclosed at signup on 25 February 2026. The signup page did not present these amounts clearly; I clicked to accept on the assumption the only recurring cost was the advertised monthly price. Under the Consumer Contracts Regulations and the Consumer Rights Act 2015 you must provide transparent pricing before the contract is concluded. Your behaviour appears to be an unfair trading practice: an additional contractual term introduced after purchase without explicit consent. I request an itemised breakdown of all charges applied to account number 07-xx-xx, a full refund of the undisclosed fees within seven calendar days, and confirmation that no similar hidden charges will be applied in future invoices. If you refuse, explain under which contractual provision you justify these charges and cite the precise clause on my agreement page where these fees were disclosed. I will not accept evasive responses; I expect documentary evidence and a timeline for refund.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly demands a 'full refund... within seven calendar days' and uses assertive language like 'expect a precise and prompt remedy' and 'will not accept evasive responses'. The error text, while mentioning a 7-day window, ties it to an escalation threat ('If I do not receive satisfactory resolution within seven working days, I will escalate...') rather than a direct, time-bound demand for the primary requested action (repayment).

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model appears to prioritize explicit, time-bound demands for immediate action from the recipient over timeframes associated with conditional escalation threats, especially when the latter is framed after a history of past, unresolved issues.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where the urgency is conveyed by a history of failed attempts, culminating in a final, time-bound ultimatum for resolution that precedes an explicit escalation threat.

Pair #116 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I am a recent transfer to your network (number port completed 05 February 2026) and the handset supplied with my PAYM package has been defective from the first day. The device is listed as Pixel A52 (IMEI 356789012345678). Since taking possession on 6 February the phone has suffered sudden shutdowns, random reboots, and charging failures-the battery drops from 70% to 10% in under an hour and the device will not maintain a connection during calls.

I have reported the problem via your online form on 10 February, spoken to support on 18 February (case opened by Mark, ticket 92831) and again on 03 March with Zara who confirmed diagnostics were requested. Despite these contacts I have been left without a reliable handset for weeks. As a consumer who moved from another provider in good faith, I expect a functioning product or an immediate remedy. Under the Consumer Rights Act I am entitled to a repair or replacement within a reasonable time; if that cannot be provided I require a full refund for the handset portion of my plan and compensation for the inconvenience caused.

Please confirm within 14 days whether you will replace the unit, repair it at your expense with a loan device supplied in the interim, or refund the handset cost. I will accept only a clear, written outcome and a timescale for completion; further delay is not acceptable.

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing because the handset supplied as part of my contract (Model: Galaxy A14, supplied 02/02/2026) has developed a recurring fault: the screen freezes and the call function drops intermittently. I am not confident with technical matters and rely on a phone for medical appointments and contacting family; this intermittent failure began on 03/03/2026 and has persisted. I raised this once before with your adviser Paul on 14/03/2026 (call reference 2278345) and was told a technician would ring back; no one has contacted me and the problem remains. Under the Consumer Rights Act 2015 I understand goods must be of satisfactory quality and fit for purpose; given the handset is within the expected period of use I request a replacement or a repair within seven days, or a refund if neither is practicable. Please confirm by telephone (I prefer a landline call) or by post. I would appreciate a clear timetable rather than further verbal assurances. Yours sincerely, Agnes Ward

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text uses highly descriptive, catastrophic language for the technical fault (e.g., 'sudden shutdowns,' 'battery drops from 70% to 10% in under an hour') and employs strong, demanding, and legalistic phrasing ('I am entitled,' 'I require a full refund and compensation,' 'immediate remedy,' 'further delay is not acceptable'). In contrast, the Correct Text describes the fault as 'intermittent' and uses softer, more polite language ('I understand,' 'I request,' 'I would appreciate') despite also citing consumer rights and setting a deadline.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-prioritizing the combination of extreme fault descriptions and assertive, legalistic demands, particularly the explicit mention of 'compensation' and the firm refusal of 'further delay,' as definitive indicators of 'High' urgency, failing to recognize that such language can still fall within a 'Medium' urgency context for a product defect complaint.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where customers use strong, demanding, and legalistic language, including explicit requests for compensation or statements like 'further delay is not acceptable,' in the context of a product defect that is still classified as 'Medium' urgency.

Pair #117 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: My family plan charge has jumped from GBP 48 to GBP 56 on the bill dated 01 April without prior written notice. The contract was signed on 15 June 2024 and I am mid?term. This is not acceptable. Either reverse the increase immediately and reinstate the original monthly price, or supply a contractual justification in writing within 21 days. I am raising this for the first time; I expect a clear correction rather than excuses.

CORRECT TEXT: I am a student and on a tight budget. On 14 May 2026 I received notice that my monthly plan rate will increase from GBP 18.00 to GBP 24.50 from 1 July. I have reviewed my contract and the terms cited in your email do not appear to permit an increase of this magnitude mid-term without my consent.

I have raised this with customer services via webchat on 20 May and by email to billing@yourprovider.co.uk on 25 May; both avenues have been exhausted without a satisfactory explanation. Under the Consumer Rights Act 2015 and the rules around unilateral contract changes, I am requesting a formal review by a manager. If you cannot justify this variation in accordance with the contract terms, I require either the rate to be reverted to GBP 18.00 or a contract termination without penalty. If this cannot be resolved, please confirm how I can refer the matter to the Communications Ombudsman.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text includes a direct, imperative demand for 'immediate' action ('reverse the increase immediately'), even though it also offers an alternative with a 21-day deadline. In contrast, the correct text frames its requests conditionally ('If you cannot justify...') and outlines procedural next steps (formal review, ombudsman referral) rather than immediate, non-negotiable demands.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be over-indexing on strong temporal adverbs like 'immediately' and imperative verbs within a demand, failing to adequately weigh the mitigating context of alternative, longer deadlines or the 'first time raising' status that typically indicates lower urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where direct, immediate demands are present but the overall context (e.g., offering alternative longer deadlines, or indicating it's the first point of contact) still signifies low urgency.

Pair #118 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: Right - here's the situation in plain terms. My work phone (iPhone 13 Pro, IMEI 356789012345678) started dropping calls and failing to register SIM/network after the 04/03 update. I raised a ticket on 05/03 and spoke to Tom who suggested a factory reset; I did it and the problem persisted. I chatted again on 11/03 with Lucy and was told to send the device in for repair (RMA #HW-3302). I shipped it 14/03 with the prepaid label you provided. Tracking shows you received it on 17/03 but my online case was closed on 20/03 with no status and no return courier. I have since tried the live chat, email and phone; each time I'm given a different story - sometimes it needs a software fix, sometimes it's physical damage (it isn't). I rely on this handset for two-factor codes and client calls; every missed call costs me money and damages my reputation. I've exhausted regular channels and now want a manager to authorise either an immediate replacement device of equivalent spec or a full refund so I can buy a working phone today. If you cannot resolve this within 48 hours, escalate to the Ombudsman - I will do so myself.

CORRECT TEXT: Hi - I'm ringing the alarm bell again because my son's handset (Samsung A32, IMEI 356789012345678) has been useless for two days and your support haven't fixed it. I reported this on 15 March to Aisha on your support line (case REF 884312) and was told a replacement would be posted within 48 hours. It never arrived. Today, 29 March, the phone won't charge and keeps rebooting when my daughter tries to use it to video-call school/medics. This is a family plan with four lines on "Family Plus" and I rely on those phones for school pick-ups, after-school arrangements and to contact my elderly mother. Having no working handset on one of the lines is putting our childcare arrangements at immediate risk. I've been juggling work and kids all morning trying to sort this, which is not acceptable. Please arrange an immediate same-day replacement or temporary loan handset and confirm collection of the faulty device - I can't be left unable to reach school or emergency contacts. If you need anything from me the fastest way is SMS to my main line (07700 900123).

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly states an immediate, ongoing, and critical personal safety/responsibility risk ('putting our childcare arrangements at immediate risk', 'unable to reach school or emergency contacts'). The Error Text, while containing a time-bound ultimatum for external escalation ('If you cannot resolve this within 48 hours, escalate to the Ombudsman - I will do so myself') and financial/reputational impact, does not frame the current situation as an immediate, unfolding crisis in the same direct, critical way.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to prioritize direct, present-tense statements of immediate critical personal impact (e.g., safety, childcare) over explicit, time-bound ultimatums for external escalation, even when those ultimatums clearly indicate a high level of urgency and a breakdown of standard resolution channels.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where high urgency is conveyed through explicit, time-bound ultimatums and threats of external escalation, even if the immediate personal safety risk is not explicitly mentioned.

Pair #119 | True: HIGH -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: On 12 March 2026 I discovered that my mobile number had been effectively transferred and several unauthorised charges appeared on my account totalling 320.00. I am a student living on a constrained budget; the loss is material and I need this corrected and refunded immediately.

I raised the problem with your fraud team on 13 March and received complaint reference 54321. I spoke with Nina who acknowledged the unauthorised activity and advised me to await confirmation of an investigation. That was the only contact. I have had no progress update, no evidence of account freezing, and crucially no refund. Meanwhile my bank alerted me to suspicious withdrawals linked to transactions that coincided with the SIM change.

I require the following without delay: a freeze on any further changes to my account, immediate reversal of the 320.00 in unauthorised charges, delivery of the full call and access logs related to my number for 11-13 March, and confirmation that you will liaise with Action Fraud and my bank. If you cannot provide confirmation and a refund within 24 hours I will report the matter to Action Fraud and escalate to Ofcom and my university's legal advice service. Please treat this as high priority and contact me by phone on the number registered to the account.
CORRECT TEXT: I am the account holder for the family plan (account ending 4321). On 12 March 2026 my eldest child's mobile number was ported away without my authorisation and three premium-rate items totalling GBP 246.50 have been billed on the statement dated 13 March. I have neither given permission for a port nor shared the account security phrase. This is the first contact I am making in relation to this fraud.

You must immediately suspend all activity on the affected number, block any further port requests, reverse the disputed charges and provide written confirmation of each action taken by close of business today. I also require copies of the porting logs and the recordings of any authentication calls made on 12 March. If you cannot effect an immediate freeze, escalate this to your fraud team and assign a named contact who will speak to me within two hours.

My son uses that number to contact me about school, medical appointments and childcare arrangements. The unauthorised port is a direct safety risk and has already caused financial loss. If this is not resolved urgently I will report the matter to the police and the Information Commissioner's Office and pursue all regulatory remedies available.

1. Linguistic Delta:
The Correct Text explicitly introduces a 'direct safety risk' involving a child and demands action with extremely tight, same-day deadlines ('close of business today', 'within two hours'). In contrast, the Error Text, while detailing significant financial loss and ongoing fraud, primarily frames the urgency around financial impact and a slightly longer 24-hour deadline, without an explicit personal safety threat.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:
The model's attention mechanism appears to be over-indexing on explicit non-financial safety risks (e.g., child safety) and ultra-short, same-day deadlines as primary indicators for 'High' urgency. It failed to adequately weigh the combination of ongoing financial risk (bank alerts), explicit 'high priority' requests, and a 24-hour deadline in the error text as sufficient for a 'High' urgency classification.

3. Actionable Fix:
Add more training examples where ongoing financial fraud, explicit 'high priority' requests, and 24-hour deadlines are consistently labeled as 'High' urgency, even in the absence of explicit personal safety threats or same-day deadlines.

Pair #120 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: So your coverage map shows full bars across Tillingham. Charming. Since the start of March I cannot make a call from inside my bungalow unless I stand on the step and hold the phone with the window open. I do not understand these phones and I do not need more jargon. I have no garden grande speeches to give to engineers. I have a small home, a small village and a promise on your leaflet that does not match reality. I am nearly seventy-two, my son helps with the internet, and I feel foolish ringing you repeatedly. I am not ringing repeatedly because I enjoy it. I am ringing because I cannot speak to my doctor reliably. Please send someone who will test signal inside the house and explain what you will do to fix it. If the answer is 'coverage is fine' then tell me what equipment you will supply or how you will move my account to a service that actually works where I live. I am asking this now because I am tired of pretending everything is fine.
CORRECT TEXT: I am disabled and dependent on my mobile for essential monitoring and contact with carers. For the past six months my coverage at home has deteriorated to the point where calls drop and SMS messages fail to deliver. I have been patient and methodical - I first reported this in a web chat on 1 February (case reference visible in my account), then spoke with an adviser called Priya on 10 February who logged the issue as intermittent coverage, and later with Reuben on 3 March who said an investigation would follow. After three more attempts through the app and two engineer visits arranged by your team, nothing has changed. On 14 March a scheduled remote health check failed to send data because the signal dropped; my care team could not receive the telemetry for two hours. That delay put me in a vulnerable position and caused real anxiety. I have documented timestamps, call logs and the packet loss logs Reuben requested and uploaded them to the portal. I have been told twice that there is 'no fault found', despite clear evidence of repeated outages between 17:00 and 22:00 on most days. This is not acceptable. I need a lasting technical solution - either a signal booster installed, relocation to a different cell, or a SIM/plan that uses a partner network in my area - and I need your proposed remedy within five working days. I am asking that this be escalated to a senior network manager immediately and that you include the Ombudsman contacts in your response if you cannot prioritise a fix. I cannot continue to rely on inconsistent service where my health and safety are at stake.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly details a recent, specific incident where the service failure directly jeopardized the user's health monitoring and safety, using phrases like 'put me in a vulnerable position' and 'my health and safety are at stake,' alongside time-bound demands and escalation threats. The error text, while mentioning an inability to contact a doctor reliably, frames it as a general ongoing inconvenience and lacks a specific, high-impact event or explicit statements of immediate health/safety risk or time-bound escalation.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be overly reliant on explicit, recent, and high-impact events directly linking service failure to immediate health/safety jeopardy, and on time-bound demands or explicit escalation language, failing to adequately weigh cumulative frustration and the potential for future harm from generalized health-related communication issues.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where health-related issues are stated as ongoing inconveniences or potential risks without a specific, recent, high-impact event, but still warrant a 'Medium' urgency, to teach the model to infer urgency from cumulative frustration and potential future harm.

Pair #121 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: Hi - this is getting ridiculous and I need it sorted properly.

I'm a student and on a tight budget. I tried to cancel my broadband online on 5 March because I'm moving out on 1 April. The online cancellation confirmation never arrived. I called on 10 March and spoke to Becky who said the cancellation was processed. I called again on 17 March after seeing a charge on my bank account and spoke to Jay who told me there was an internal error and they would refund me. Today I still see the direct debit scheduled and no refund. I can survive being without internet for a few weeks, but I cannot handle being billed for a service I asked to end three times.

I need a simple outcome: confirm the service is cancelled from 1 April, confirm any payments taken in error will be returned and send a clear cancellation reference so I have proof for my landlord. I am tired of repeating the same information to different people. Please fix this properly.
CORRECT TEXT: Hi - I run a small design studio and I rang to cancel my line on 05 March because we're moving premises. I spoke with Tom and was given case reference 789456; I was told the cancellation would be completed within 48 hours and I'd get a confirmation email. Nothing has happened. The service is still active and I'm being charged. I rely on this for day-to-day admin, but this is just frustrating and avoidable. Please action the cancellation to be effective from 01 April and send written confirmation. If someone needs extra info, call me on the account number linked to this email; I don't want another runaround.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly states financial vulnerability ('on a tight budget') and a strong negative impact ('cannot handle being billed'), which are absent in the correct text. The correct text, conversely, explicitly downplays the impact by labeling the situation as 'just frustrating and avoidable' despite mentioning reliance on the service.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on direct declarations of financial hardship and strong negative emotional/impact statements ('cannot handle') as indicators of higher urgency, failing to weigh these against other contextual cues that might indicate a lower overall urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where explicit statements of financial hardship or strong negative emotional impact are present, but the overall context or an explicit downplaying phrase still indicates low urgency.

Pair #122 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: So you've introduced a new 'service processing fee' on my March invoice. How thoughtful. After 12 years with you - yes, twelve - I get to discover a surprise charge by glancing at my online bill on 15 March 2026. I spoke to your agent Tom on 17 March; he admitted it was 'a recent update' and promised to escalate. The case reference he gave me was 7839502. Two days later Nisha in billing told me the fee was 'standard for all legacy accounts' and closed the chat. That is a clever way of telling loyal customers things after the fact. I have exhausted the usual routes: phone queue, web chat, and a terse automated email reply. Please pass this to a manager who understands that hidden fees are not a sustainable business model. If you cannot remove the charge and provide a clear explanation by 31 March 2026 I will file a formal complaint with the ombudsman. I do not relish doing that, but I will if there is no satisfactory answer.

CORRECT TEXT: Oh good, another surprise charge. The bill dated 15 March 2026 includes a "service administration" line for GBP 6.49 which, surprise, was never mentioned when I signed up. I called on 18/03 and spoke to Sophie who promised an itemised breakdown and a refund if it was an error - nothing arrived. I'd love to be convinced this is legitimate, but since you apparently enjoy adding hidden extras to monthly statements, could you either explain this clearly with timestamps and consent evidence or credit my account? I expect an actual resolution rather than being fobbed off.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text contains a clear, time-bound ultimatum ('by 31 March 2026 I will file a formal complaint with the ombudsman'), explicitly stating a deadline and a specific external escalation threat. The Correct Text, while expressing dissatisfaction and requesting resolution, lacks any explicit deadline or threat of formal external action.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on the combination of a specific deadline and a formal external escalation threat (e.g., ombudsman) as an immediate indicator of 'Medium' urgency, failing to contextualize it within the broader 'Low' urgency complaint process where such threats are often a standard next step.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples labeled 'Low' urgency that include explicit deadlines and threats of formal external action (e.g., ombudsman, regulatory bodies) to help the model understand that these can still fall within the 'Low' urgency band if the immediate impact or crisis is not present.

ERROR TEXT: I am contacting you again about an unnotified mid-contract price increase applied to my account. My 24-month contract began on 12 October 2024 with a monthly charge of GBP 28.00; on 1 March 2026 the monthly fee increased to GBP 35.00 without prior written notice advising of the increase or offering the contractual right to exit. I have raised this matter on 2 March (agent Tom, ref 112233), 8 March (Julie, ref 114455), 15 March (Mark, ref 115566) and most recently on 22 March with the retention team; none of these contacts produced a satisfactory resolution. Under the Consumer Rights framework and Ofcom guidance, a unilateral mid-contract increase requires clear notification and an option to terminate without penalty. I therefore request written confirmation that the charge will be reverted to GBP 28.00, that any overcharges since 1 March will be refunded, and that you will confirm in writing that I may end the contract without exit fees should you insist on the higher price. Please respond with contractually binding confirmation within five working days.

CORRECT TEXT: I am contacting you about a mid-contract price increase that has been applied to my Student Unlimited 24 plan without my informed consent. My contract started on 5 September 2024 at a rate of GBP 15.00 per month and was explicitly represented to me as a fixed amount for 24 months when I signed up. On my latest bill dated 1 March 2026 the monthly charge rose to GBP 19.00, an increase of GBP 4 per month which equates to an extra GBP 48 annually - a significant amount on my limited student income.

This is my first formal complaint. I have limited finances: I work 10 hours a week in retail alongside my studies and budget tightly for rent, bills and course costs. A mid-contract uplift was neither communicated to me in a clear, timely manner nor agreed. I require a detailed explanation of the contractual clause that purportedly allows this change, a copy of the notice you sent (date and method), and immediate reinstatement of the original GBP 15 rate or an option to exit the contract without penalty. If you cannot honour the original pricing, please provide a compensatory arrangement that recognises my financial position, such as a reduced rate, account credit for the excess charges since 1 March 2026, or a goodwill gesture sufficient to cover the shortfall for the remainder of the contract.

Please respond with a substantive solution within five working days. I would prefer to resolve this directly, but I will escalate to the Citizens Advice consumer service and Ofcom if necessary.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly states the user's intent to escalate to external regulatory bodies ('I will escalate to the Citizens Advice consumer service and Ofcom if necessary'). The Error Text, while detailing multiple failed internal contact attempts and referencing 'Ofcom guidance', lacks this direct, active threat of external escalation.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to under-prioritize the cumulative weight of a detailed history of repeated, unresolved internal contact attempts as a strong indicator of escalating urgency. It seems to require an explicit, active statement of intent to escalate externally, rather than inferring it from a pattern of internal failures or passive references to regulatory frameworks.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where a history of multiple, unresolved internal contacts is the primary indicator of 'Medium' urgency, even without an explicit threat of external escalation, and where references to regulatory bodies imply, rather than explicitly state, the intent to escalate.

Pair #124 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: Hello,

I've been with you for over a decade (account in the name of Mark Ellis) and I'm disappointed with the situation on my line. On 23/03/2026 I reported very slow broadband and was told an engineer would attend between 24-26 March. No engineer arrived, I received no call, and the automated message shows the job as closed without resolution. I can manage for now but the intermittent service is making working from home awkward and I need this fixed within the next few days.

I'm not looking for compensation right now - just someone to actually turn up and sort it. Please rebook the visit and confirm the appointment window by phone today. If you can't do that, advise an immediate temporary fix or a priority slot for a long-term customer.

CORRECT TEXT: I switched from another provider six weeks ago and since then the broadband faults promised as fixed have returned. I reported an intermittent drop on 10 February (ref 66011). An engineer was booked for 18 February but did not arrive and I received no notification. I called back on 19 February and was offered a new appointment for 25 February which was then cancelled by your team that morning, with a promise of a callback that did not come. This is my second formal request - I raised the issue once before and was given no lasting remedy. When I called on 26 February I was told an intervention would be carried out remotely and that a visible ticket would be open; I still see repeated drops in the connection and the line statistics show packet loss and high latency during evenings. I am asking you to confirm a guaranteed engineer visit within the next five working days, with the option of an evening appointment, and to provide a credit for the periods of unusable service dating back to 10 February. Please supply a clear plan of action and a specific appointment time rather than an open promise. I expect a reply confirming the visit and the proposed credit amount.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The FAILED text contains conflicting urgency cues, explicitly stating 'I can manage for now' (de-escalator) but then requesting immediate action ('confirm... by phone today', 'immediate temporary fix'). In contrast, the CORRECT text consistently frames its primary request for resolution within a 'five working days' timeframe, without such immediate action demands for booking/contact.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be over-prioritizing immediate action requests related to contact or booking ('today', 'immediate') over the explicit de-escalator ('I can manage for now') and the broader timeframe for the actual resolution ('within the next few days').

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where customers explicitly state they can 'manage for now' but request immediate booking or contact for a resolution that is still a few days away, ensuring these are consistently labeled as Medium urgency.

Pair #125 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: Account number 88765421. I switched from my previous provider on 15 February 2026. My first bill (dated 01 March 2026) shows a charge of GBP 48.99 when my plan was advertised as GBP 28.99. That is a GBP 20 discrepancy. No discounts, no usage beyond allowance. This is my first time raising the issue. Please correct the bill, apply the proper rate, and confirm the corrected amount by email with a revised invoice.

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing as I do not understand why my bill for March 2026 shows an extra charge of GBP 31.99. I am on the standard plan and expected to pay GBP 35.99 this month; instead the total is GBP 67.98 with a line item for device insurance (GBP 12.99) and a premium channel charge (GBP 19.00) I did not ask for. I do not use the app easily and I am not confident changing settings myself, so this is my first time contacting you about billing. Please remove the two items added in error, refund the GBP 31.99 difference to my account, and send me a plain English explanation of what happened and how you will prevent it occurring again. I would appreciate a phone call to confirm between 10:00 and 12:00 if that is possible.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text includes a specific, time-bound request for direct human contact ('I would appreciate a phone call to confirm between 10:00 and 12:00'), which is absent in the error text that only requests email confirmation.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism failed to recognize that a specific, time-bound request for direct human interaction (a phone call) significantly elevates the urgency from 'Low' to 'Medium', treating it similarly to a less urgent request for email confirmation.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where specific, time-bound requests for direct human contact (e.g., 'call me by X time,' 'I need to speak to someone today') are consistently labeled as 'Medium' urgency.

ERROR TEXT: I run a small catering business and noticed my annual plan renewed on 20 March without any prior reminder; my card was charged GBP 299. I hadn't been expecting an automatic renewal this month and didn't give consent for an early charge. I'm raising this now to request a refund of the renewal fee and confirmation that the service will be cancelled unless I explicitly re-subscribe. I rely on predictable cashflow, so a prompt reversal within a few working days would be helpful while I decide whether to re-sign.

CORRECT TEXT: Hi - I'm Tom and I'm getting fed up repeating myself. On 9 April my family plan auto-renewed for another month and I never authorised that. I called on 10 April, then again on 16 April and once more on 25 April; each time I've had to explain that I don't want automatic renewals for add-ons and I explicitly asked the agent Lucy on 16 April to remove the auto-pay toggle from our account. It wasn't. Today I log into the app and there it is, another charge pending. I manage this plan for three kids and I keep careful track of spending, so these surprise renewals throw off our budgeting. I'm annoyed, honest. I don't need a lecture about terms and conditions; I need you to stop billing me without permission and to refund any recently taken amounts for services I never approved. Please sort this out properly and tell me what you've changed so I don't have to call again next month. Account: Thomas Reed. Previous call refs: 99321, 99378, 99415.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly links a financial need ('rely on predictable cashflow') to a desired prompt action ('prompt reversal within a few working days'), whereas the correct text describes financial disruption ('throw off our budgeting') and a history of unresolved issues without specifying an immediate, time-bound need for resolution.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on explicit temporal requests for financial resolution, particularly when tied to a business context, failing to adequately weigh mitigating language such as 'would be helpful' or 'while I decide whether to re-sign' that indicates lower urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where explicit requests for 'prompt' action within a 'few working days' are present but the overall context (e.g., 'helpful,' 'while I decide') still indicates low urgency, especially in business-related financial requests.

Pair #127 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: Funny how 'replacement handset dispatched' on 02/03 turned into three weeks of niceties and nothing helpful. I am registered as disabled and depend on the phone for daily health check-ins. I called on 05/03 and spoke to Sharon who said an urgent replacement would be sent. Then I waited. I have called again on 12/03 and 18/03; each time different promises, same outcome. The replacement (model GX42) arrived with a broken power button. The handset fails while I am on medication reminders. I appreciate that mistakes happen. I do not appreciate being passed around until something becomes an emergency. Arrange a proper replacement couriered to my door on a guaranteed next-business-day basis and make sure the device is inspected before dispatch. If you cannot do that, say so plainly and let me take an alternative. I am tired of being soothed with 'we're looking into it'.

CORRECT TEXT: I moved over from another network on 01/03/2026 expecting at least the same level of service. Instead I received a handset that refuses to hold a charge for more than a couple of hours, switches itself off mid-call and refuses to connect to 4G consistently. Lovely start. Battery drain began on day two; speaker began crackling on 04/03/2026. I have no intention at this stage of paying for repairs given the phone is effectively unusable. This is my first contact about the matter. I would appreciate either an immediate replacement device or clear instructions on how to return this handset for a full refund - not a runaround about diagnostics I have already completed. I will wait three working days for a substantive reply before exploring other options, including returning to my previous provider who, to my recollection, did not sell me a handset that dies at 20 percent battery.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The FAILED PREDICTION text explicitly links the phone's functionality to the user's health and medication reminders, and mentions the potential for the situation to 'become an emergency,' alongside a history of multiple failed attempts to resolve the issue over several weeks. In contrast, the CORRECT PREDICTION text explicitly states it is the 'first contact' about the issue and sets a non-immediate deadline of 'three working days' for a response, without any direct health or safety implications.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be overly sensitive to explicit mentions of health dependency, medication, and the word 'emergency' (even when framed as a preventative measure), especially when combined with a history of unresolved issues, leading it to misinterpret a preventative, escalated 'Medium' urgency as an immediate 'High' urgency. It fails to adequately weigh the current state (preventative action, not active emergency) against the potential risk and the user's explicit request for 'next-business-day' which is not 'immediate'.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where health-related dependencies or the potential for an emergency are mentioned, but the user is explicitly seeking preventative action or has set a non-immediate deadline, to reinforce 'Medium' urgency in such contexts.

ERROR TEXT: I've lost count of calls - I first rang on 05/04 and then again on 12/04, 20/04 and most recently 02/05 - and still you keep sneaking charges onto my StreamMax 50 bill that were never disclosed when I signed up. The line item 'Network Admin' for GBP 12.50 and a mysterious 'service activation' of GBP 35 turned up on April's invoice; neither was mentioned in your online checkout, the T&Cs, or on the confirmation email I received on 01/04. I've spoken to Sam in billing (02/05), who put me on hold for 25 minutes and promised a call back that never arrived, and to Liam on chat who said the items were valid because "system default settings apply" - which is not an explanation. I'm tech-literate, I've read the tariff page front to back, and this feels like deliberate obfuscation. Please provide an itemised breakdown, reverse the GBP 47.50 of unexpected fees by Friday 08/05, and confirm in writing that you will stop adding these hidden charges to future bills. If you can't sort this quickly I will cancel and take this further, but I'd rather not have to do that.

CORRECT TEXT: Hi - I'm a student on a tight budget and I noticed an unexpected charge on my March bill (dated 15/03/2026): "priority support" GBP 9.99 and a one-off equipment handling fee GBP 4.50. I didn't opt into any extras when I signed up and I review my balance carefully, so this landed me short for rent this month. This is the first time I've raised it with you; could you confirm why these items were added, remove them if they were billed in error and refund the GBP 14.49? Also please tell me how to prevent add?ons appearing on future invoices, since I can't afford surprise costs while I'm studying.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states an immediate, critical personal financial consequence ('landed me short for rent this month'), directly linking the issue to an unavoidable hardship. The error text, while detailing a history of frustration, poor service, an explicit deadline for resolution, and a conditional threat of escalation, lacks a similar direct statement of immediate, critical personal impact.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to prioritize explicit, immediate, and unavoidable personal consequences (e.g., 'short for rent') as a primary indicator of 'Medium' urgency. It seems to under-weight or fail to aggregate the cumulative effect of repeated attempts, specific deadlines for resolution, and conditional threats of escalation when these are not accompanied by a clear, immediate personal hardship.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where 'Medium' urgency is conveyed through a history of unresolved issues, explicit deadlines for resolution, and conditional threats of escalation, even without an immediate, critical personal impact statement.

I have no record of authorising these extra sums. This is my first contact about the matter and I would like a clear, written explanation and correction.

Please check the billing for account ending 7788, reverse any unauthorised charges, and confirm the corrected balance and the date I can expect a refund. If the Direct Debit was processed incorrectly, confirm whether the overpayment will be automatically returned to my bank within the next billing cycle. I am disappointed to have to chase this on my first month with you but I trust you will resolve it quickly and advise me by email what has been done. Thank you for attending to this promptly.
CORRECT TEXT: Hello - I'm following up on an incorrect charge that appeared on my account. On 18 March I raised this via chat (chat ref CH-2026-0318-55) and spoke to Harpreet, who said it would be corrected. The portal still shows the GBP 42.99 charge for an extra line I never activated (transaction ID TX-2026-0318-0042). I've attached screenshots in my previous message and can provide more if needed. This is my second request; I'm polite about it but I do expect timely action. Please reverse the charge and confirm the refund date within seven days, otherwise I'll need to escalate further. Kind regards, Alex Reid.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text describes a significant, new financial discrepancy (double charge, unauthorized charge) reported for the first time, with the customer expressing disappointment and a desire for quick resolution. In contrast, the correct text details an ongoing, unresolved issue (second request) that includes an explicit, but conditional, threat of future escalation.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model over-indexes on the immediate financial magnitude and novelty of a complaint, interpreting a large, new, unauthorized charge combined with expressions of disappointment and a request for quick resolution as 'Medium' urgency, even when it's the 'first contact' and lacks an explicit, immediate escalation threat.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples of 'Low' urgency where customers report significant, new financial discrepancies (e.g., double charges, unauthorized charges) for the first time, expressing disappointment but not explicit threats of immediate escalation.

ERROR TEXT: I am a full-time student living at 44 Granary Lane, Manchester M1. My account number ends 6789. Since 10 March I have been receiving broadband download speeds of around 4-6 Mbps at peak study hours, despite subscribing to the 50 Mbps package. I rely on stable connectivity for remote seminars and coursework and am on a tight budget, so paying for a higher tier that I cannot use is not feasible. This is the first time I have raised the matter; I would appreciate a technical review, an explanation of why throughput is so limited at the cabinet and neighbourhood level, and clear timescales for remediation. If there is a temporary fault or a throttling policy in place, please confirm it in writing and advise what compensatory credit will be applied to my next bill. I am available for an engineer visit after 17:00 on weekdays and can be contacted on my mobile between lectures.
CORRECT TEXT: I am reporting persistently slow broadband on my student tenancy at 12 Hargreaves Road (account 990-1132). I signed up to the 100Mbps plan. Since 28 February my measured download speeds have averaged 6-8Mbps at peak times (I have attached timestamps and Ookla results for 1, 7 and 14 March: 7.2, 6.1, 8.4 Mbps). I phoned support on 3 March and spoke with Aisha Khan; a technician visit was booked for 10 March but the technician reported the exchange 'within tolerance' and left. I called again on 16 March and was promised escalation; reference 331-20-16. The slow speeds continue and I am losing study time and course access. I have exhausted the standard complaints route and need this escalated to a manager. I expect either an engineer visit with a clear technical resolution within five working days, a pro rata credit for the weeks of shortfall, or a no-penalty termination so I can move to a provider who can meet the advertised speed. Please confirm next steps in writing.

Final Contrastive Error Analysis Report

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly details a history of multiple failed attempts to resolve the issue through standard channels and concludes with assertive, time-bound demands including a threat of contract termination. The error text, conversely, states it is the 'first time' raising the matter and makes polite requests without specific deadlines or explicit threats of escalation.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be heavily weighted towards explicit cues of prior failed resolution attempts and assertive, consequence-laden demands (e.g., 'exhausted the standard complaints route', 'need this escalated', 'expect... within five working days', 'no-penalty termination') to classify 'Medium' urgency. It fails to adequately weigh the significant impact on the user (losing study time, tight budget) when these explicit escalation indicators are absent or contradicted by a 'first time' raising statement.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where the severity of the problem's impact on the user, even if it's the first time reporting, is sufficient to warrant a 'Medium' urgency, and where polite requests for resolution are still classified as 'Medium' due to the underlying issue's criticality.

Pair #131 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I run a small B&B in Northwich and my mobile signal is the lifeline that takes bookings and emergency calls. On 2 March the signal in the house dropped to virtually nothing during a four-hour window and we lost three bookings while guests waited on hold. I called customer support the same day and spoke with Aisha; she said an engineer would look at local masts. On 4 March I called again - Gordon took my details and promised 'priority' but nothing changed. I have called two more times since then (10 March and 16 March) and each time I am told the issue is 'being monitored'.

This is a weekly pattern now: afternoons are fine, mornings are patchy, and weekends - when I most need the lines - are unreliable. Yesterday, a guest could not reach an out-of-hours doctor because my phone dropped call after call. I keep notes, I keep apologising to customers. My livelihood is being affected and I cannot keep passing on the failures to people who book to stay with us. I need a clear plan: what is happening with the local mast, who is assigned to this, and when will coverage be reliably restored. I cannot accept another vague update. Please get back to me within three working days with a timeline and a remedy for the lost bookings and calls.
CORRECT TEXT: I have been with your company since 2007. For ten years I recommended you to friends because the signal at my home used to be reliable. That trust has been eroded over the last two months. It began around 4 February when calls started dropping in the middle of conversations. My partner and I logged the first call on 2 March, then again on 9 March and 16 March. I have spoken to four different advisors - Tom, Leah, an engineer called Mark and an escalation agent named Priya - and I have the notes from each call. An engineer attended on 18 March and fitted a temporary booster. It helped for three days and then the drops returned, along with persistent 3G-only data speeds despite your network allegedly being 4G in this area. On 21 March I missed an emergency call from my elderly neighbour because the line cut out and their number showed as unknown. The pattern is the same: short periods of service followed by long gaps. I do not want vague promises. I want a fixed, local solution. Either provide a durable repair that restores consistent coverage at my address (18 Chapel Lane) or waive any early exit fees and permit me to leave without penalty so I can secure reliable service. I have called five times in the last three weeks. This continuing disruption has become intolerable and I need a definitive outcome within seven days.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text uses the highly recent temporal marker 'Yesterday' in conjunction with a critical health-related failure ('guest could not reach an out-of-hours doctor') and explicitly frames the service as a 'lifeline for emergency calls' at the outset. The correct text, while also mentioning a missed emergency call, dates it with a specific past date ('On 21 March') and does not establish the 'lifeline' context as prominently.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on the recency ('Yesterday') and explicit framing ('lifeline for emergency calls') of a potential health/safety impact, causing it to elevate urgency to 'High' even when the requested resolution timeframe (three working days) and the overall chronic nature of the problem suggest 'Medium'. It fails to adequately contextualize the recent critical event within the broader pattern of ongoing, but not immediately life-threatening, disruption.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where recent (e.g., 'yesterday') but non-ongoing critical events are present, but the overall context and requested resolution time still indicate a 'Medium' urgency, to help the model differentiate between past critical incidents and active emergencies.

Pair #132 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I tried to phone to sort a simple address move and spent an hour on hold across three attempts today, which is unacceptable given I work full-time and booked the call into a lunch break. First call at 09:12 - held 27 minutes then it cut out. Second at 11:03 - held 34 minutes, finally reached an automated message saying all agents busy and the call ended. Third at 12:46 - opted for callback, waited 42 minutes with the line playing hold music, callback never arrived. I was never connected to a human or given a ticket number. I am reasonably technical and value my time; if you offer a callback function it should work reliably or be removed. Please explain why your queue was so long today, provide the missing callback or an alternative way to complete the address transfer within 48 hours, and confirm any potential downtime. My customer reference is 442217. A quicker response channel would be appreciated; I expect better than this for the price I pay.

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing to set out, in detail, an ongoing problem with excessively long telephone wait times when contacting support. Over the past three weeks I have called on 2 March (waited 37 minutes), 6 March (45 minutes), 11 March (52 minutes) and 18 March (39 minutes). On 6 March I used webchat which queued for 28 minutes before disconnecting; on 11 March an advisor (name not provided) put me on hold twice and then transferred me without explanation. I have logged complaints online (refs 8G1A, 8G7B) and asked for an estimated callback window but was only given generic advice about retrying at off?peak times. I work in technology and my time is scheduled tightly around meetings; these long holds are disruptive though not critical, and they make it difficult to get straightforward answers to simple queries such as plan details and outage status. I am seeking a practical solution: either a reliable call?back at a prearranged time, or clear information about when staffing levels will improve so I can plan contacts better. Please respond with a concrete proposal rather than general reassurances.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text includes a specific, time-bound demand ('complete the address transfer within 48 hours') and a request for a 'quicker response channel', which are absent in the correct text. The correct text, conversely, explicitly states the issue is 'though not critical'.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on explicit time constraints and direct demands for quick action, interpreting them as indicators of higher urgency, even when the underlying issue (e.g., an address transfer) is not inherently critical. It fails to adequately weigh the overall context of the request's actual impact.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where specific deadlines or requests for expedited service are present but the core issue is administrative or non-critical, explicitly labeled as 'Low' urgency.

Pair #133 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: Billing query: there is an unexplained Administration Charge of 12.50 on my statement dated 15/03/2026. I have reviewed the itemised bill and the API call history in my account dashboard. I have contacted billing four times (via chat 20/03, call 22/03, email 24/03, chat 26/03) and been given conflicting answers. Remove the charge and refund immediately. If you need further evidence I will supply a screenshot. I expect confirmation within 48 hours.

CORRECT TEXT: Invoice dated 15 March shows an unexpected administrative charge of GBP 65 described as 'set-up fee' that is not in our contract. I run Greenfield Cafe and depend on your connection for card payments and ordering; this charge puts cashflow at risk. This is my first formal contact about the matter. Remove the fee, issue a full refund, and confirm in writing within seven days. I expect a prompt commercial resolution; otherwise I will switch suppliers and recover losses.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text explicitly states a very short resolution timeline ('immediately', 'within 48 hours') and a history of multiple failed attempts to resolve the issue, while the Correct Text, despite outlining business risk and a supplier-switching threat, provides a longer resolution window ('within seven days') and indicates it's the 'first formal contact'.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on explicit temporal urgency markers and a history of repeated, unsuccessful contact attempts as primary indicators of 'High' urgency, potentially under-weighting the actual business impact or the longer-term nature of the threat when a slightly longer resolution window is provided.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where short deadlines and a history of frustration are classified as 'Medium' urgency if the underlying issue's impact is not immediately critical, and examples where explicit business impact with a slightly longer resolution window is correctly classified as 'Medium'.

Pair #134 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I am contacting you regarding what appears to be a loyalty penalty applied to my account. I have been a customer since 2010 and on a legacy discounted plan; my bill increased from GBP 18 to GBP 26 on 1 March 2026 without prior notice. I rang customer services on 5 March and spoke with Gerald, who said he would review my account and get back to me. This is my second contact about the matter. I am not confident using the online portal and would prefer any rectification to be handled by phone or post. Please explain the reason for the increase, restore the previous loyalty rate if there has been an error, and refund the GBP 8 difference for March.

CORRECT TEXT: I am registered disabled and I am writing because I have been demonstrably penalised for staying with you. My contract renewal in January 2026 increased my monthly line rental to GBP 46.50 even though new customers on the same plan were offered GBP 35. I phoned on 02/03/2026 and spoke with Rachel in Retentions (call reference LP-48192). Rachel admitted I was paying more than current promotions but declined to apply the new rate, saying the change was 'outside policy'. I then emailed customer support on 05/03/2026 and was told to ring back. I have made three separate attempts to resolve this through the normal consumer route and each time I have been passed from one script to another. I am on a fixed income and this disparity is not trivial to me. You are aware of the guidance under the Consumer Rights Act and Ofcom's expectations about fair pricing; I expect an immediate price match to the current advertised rate from the date my renewal took effect, an explanation of why loyal customers are charged more, and compensation for the overpayment dating back to January. I have kept all call recordings and email threads. I will accept a response from a manager within 14 days. Failing a satisfactory outcome I will refer the matter to the Ombudsman.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly provides a future deadline for resolution ('within 14 days') and frames its external escalation as conditional and future-dated ('Failing a satisfactory outcome I will refer...'). In contrast, the Error Text, while mentioning a 'second contact' and an inability to use online channels, lacks any explicit future timeframe or conditional escalation, thereby implying a more immediate, unresolved state.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model appears to be over-indexing on the implied immediacy stemming from a lack of a stated future resolution path or deadline, combined with a stated inability to self-serve ('not confident using the online portal'), interpreting these as indicators of 'Medium' urgency. It fails to correctly weigh the de-escalating effect of an explicit, future-dated resolution window, even when strong external escalation threats are present in the 'Low' urgency example.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where customers express multiple contacts and inability to self-serve without explicit deadlines, but where the overall context still warrants a 'Low' urgency classification, contrasting these with examples that contain explicit, but future-dated, escalation paths.

Pair #135 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: Hello - before we start, let me congratulate you on inventing the most user-hostile complaints workflow I've ever seen. Account name: Liam Turner, account ending 4321, Home Fibre 200. I spent twenty minutes answering your "helpful" bot who then redirected me to a form that timed out. I'm contacting you for the first time because I expect a company that bills me every month to at least be able to accept a complaint without the circus. On 20 March 2026 I was billed an extra GBP 9.99 for a service I never ordered; there is no clear way to contest a charge on your website, and the only "support" page simply tells me to restart my router. I'm tech-savvy enough to know that's a non-answer. Please correct the bill, remove the charge, and tell me who will take responsibility for fixing your complaints process so I can avoid wasting more of my time. I expect a substantive reply within 5 working days including the corrected invoice and the name of the person handling it.

CORRECT TEXT: Right - so I raised this once before on 10/03/2026 (case ref 789456) and was put on hold for a very soothing ten minutes while nothing happened. My broadband and VoIP line have been intermittently dropping since 05/03/2026; I run a small consultancy and those dropouts mean missed client calls and a fair bit of embarrassment. I had a live chat on 11/03 with Tom who cheerfully agreed there was an outage in my exchange area and said a priority engineer would be assigned. Nothing was scheduled, and the only update I received was an automated email saying "we are looking into it".

I run this business from home and rely on stable connectivity. I estimate two cancelled client calls and lost income of around GBP 400 directly attributable to your ongoing problem. I would appreciate it if you could actually allocate a technician who will show up within 48 hours, rather than running another round of scripted replies. Also let me know how you intend to credit the account for the days the service has been degraded - my patience is limited and so is my ability to absorb further downtime. I would prefer to keep working with you, but the handling so far has been disappointing.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly details an ongoing service disruption causing quantified business loss (GBP 400) and demands a resolution within 48 hours, building on a history of failed prior attempts to fix the core service issue. In contrast, the Error Text describes a first-time billing error (GBP 9.99) and severe frustration with a broken complaints process, with a 5-working-day resolution expectation, lacking the same level of direct, ongoing business criticality or a history of failed resolution for the primary problem.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be heavily weighted towards explicit, quantified, and ongoing service-related business impacts and short, specific resolution deadlines as primary indicators for 'Medium' urgency. It fails to adequately recognize that severe customer frustration stemming from systemic process failures and repeated difficulty in accessing support, even for a smaller financial issue, can also constitute 'Medium' urgency, especially when a clear, albeit longer, deadline is set.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where significant customer frustration due to systemic process failures and repeated difficulty in contacting support, even for issues with smaller direct financial impact, are explicitly labeled as 'Medium' urgency.

Pair #136 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I am the primary account holder for a family plan (account ending 2147) that currently covers four lines. I have been a customer for several years and recently reviewed our renewal options after receiving a renewal text on 02 March 2026. New customers are being offered promotional rates that reduce equivalent lines by around GBP 10 per month, but my renewal quote increased by GBP 8 per month compared with my current bill. I called customer services on 08 March (reference 112233) and spoke to an advisor named Claire, then called back on 12 March and spoke to Lee, neither of whom could apply the new-customer price or offer a meaningful retention package. I have exhausted the usual channels and would now like this escalated to a manager for review or referred to the ombudsman if you cannot provide an acceptable resolution. Given the cost difference across four lines, this is a meaningful annual amount for my household. Please either match the current promotional rate, provide a comparable loyalty discount, or confirm that I may exit the contract without penalty.

CORRECT TEXT: My business, Harris & Co. Repairs, has depended on your line for telephone bookings for six years. On 11 March I raised a complaint with your retention team (account manager Kevin Patel) about pricing: long-term clients are being charged more than new customers on the same package. Kevin said he would review the account and call back within five working days. There has been no follow-up. Last month we missed two jobs and lost approximately GBP 320 in revenue because callers were presented with a higher tariff message that deterred them from booking. I am not a leisure customer; every call costs me lost work. I am now asking for three things: (1) an immediate adjustment to match the current new-customer rate for our package backdated to 11 March, with the difference credited to our account; (2) a goodwill payment to cover demonstrable lost revenue while this was unresolved; and (3) a named contact who will confirm in writing the adjustment and provide a direct number for escalation. I raised this once already and received an empty promise. My business cannot absorb further delay. Please treat this as urgent and respond with a full resolution within five working days, otherwise I will have to move suppliers and refer the case to the ombudsman because my livelihood is at stake.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states an immediate, quantifiable financial loss already incurred ('lost approximately GBP 320 in revenue last month') and an inability to absorb further delay ('My business cannot absorb further delay'), culminating in a direct threat to livelihood and a specific deadline for resolution. The error text, conversely, describes the financial impact as a 'meaningful annual amount' and frames escalation as a desired future action ('would now like this escalated'), lacking the same immediacy, explicit urgency, and direct threat to ongoing operations.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is failing to adequately distinguish between general frustration or potential future financial impact/escalation (as seen in the error text) and concrete, immediate, and explicitly stated financial losses or threats to business continuity that demand urgent action (as seen in the correct text). It appears to require more explicit and immediate indicators of negative consequences and direct calls for urgency to classify as 'Medium'.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where urgency is conveyed through explicit, quantifiable, and immediate financial losses or business disruptions, coupled with clear deadlines and high-stakes consequences, to differentiate from general dissatisfaction or future threats.

Pair #137 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: On 17 February 2026 my broadband failed at midday and has been intermittent ever since. I reported the fault on 18/02 by phone to Kevin (ticket 88-402) who booked an engineer for 25 February. The engineer never arrived. I called again on 01/03 and spoke to Lucy who apologised and said another visit was scheduled for 04/03; again nobody attended. By 08/03 I rang back and spoke to Maria who promised escalation, and on 15/03 Sophie told me compensation would be applied and the issue escalated to priority due to my reliance on remote healthcare. I have kept a log of missed telehealth appointments and prescription delays - this is not merely an inconvenience. I live with limited mobility and rely on a dependable connection for medical consultations; each missed appointment has had real consequences. Over five calls in six weeks I have been given assurances but no lasting repair or promised credits have been applied. I need a working line and a confirmed engineer appointment within 48 hours, plus an explanation for the repeated no-shows and a clear schedule for when compensation will be processed. Please escalate this internally to a supervisor and contact me with a resolution by 27 March 2026.

CORRECT TEXT: I need to explain the timeline because the problem hasn't been fixed despite multiple promises and it's affecting my kids. We moved the family plan to you on 2026-02-01 - Family Share 40 - because of the unlimited weekend calls, and since then our broadband has been dropping every evening just as homework starts. On 2026-02-10 I spoke to a technician named Jamie who said an engineer would attend the exchange within 48 hours; no one came. I called again on 2026-02-16 and spoke to Latisha who issued a new ticket (ref AX-447) and promised a replacement router the week after. The new router never arrived; I chased again on 2026-02-24 and was told the delivery was delayed until 2026-02-28. That date passed and on 2026-03-05 I phoned for the fourth time - the agent, Mark, admitted there'd been a scheduling error but could only offer another appointment for 2026-03-12 which clashed with my son's after-school club. Each missed commitment means my children miss online lessons and I have to juggle work calls around unstable Wi-Fi. I am tired of being given dates that don't happen and would like a firm resolution: either a guaranteed engineer visit within three working days that fits my availability (weekday evenings 18:00-20:00) or a full month credit for the disrupted service. Please confirm the plan you will follow and the precise time of attendance.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text explicitly links the service disruption to critical 'remote healthcare,' 'telehealth appointments,' and 'prescription delays' with 'real consequences' for someone with 'limited mobility,' and includes direct requests for 'priority escalation' and resolution 'within 48 hours.' The Correct Text, while detailing significant inconvenience and impact on children's education and work, does not mention life-critical services or use such strong, explicit medical urgency language, nor does it explicitly request 'priority escalation' to a supervisor.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-prioritize explicit mentions of critical health-related impacts and direct, high-level escalation requests with very short deadlines, interpreting these as definitive indicators of 'High' urgency, even when the overall context (e.g., duration of issue, type of service) might align more with 'Medium'. It struggles to differentiate between significant inconvenience/disruption (Medium) and immediate, life-critical threats (High) when the former contains strong, but not necessarily imminent, critical impact language.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where critical health-related impacts are mentioned but the overall urgency is still 'Medium' due to the lack of immediate, life-threatening escalation or the availability of alternative solutions.

Pair #138 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: Hello - I want to follow up firmly but politely on an error that was introduced at point-of-sale. On 14 March 2026 I ordered what I explicitly asked for: the Student 6GB SIM-only monthly plan. The sales agent, Priya, instead activated an Unlimited Max plan on my account and confirmed it verbally; I only noticed when my bank statement showed a GBP 12.00 higher monthly direct debit on 20 March. I called back on 21 March and spoke with Priya again (call ref 3319) who said she would correct it and issue a refund for the difference. That correction has not appeared on my account or on my statement.

I'm on a very tight student budget and cannot carry unnecessary charges. Please reverse the plan change, restore the Student 6GB tariff, and refund the GBP 12 charged in error. If you require authorization, include me in any agent notes and quote my student ID 445717. A prompt correction would be appreciated; otherwise I will need to seek an alternative provider who correctly records sales.
CORRECT TEXT: You sold me the wrong package. On 15/03/2026 your sales rep Neil recorded my order as a residential 100Mbps line when I explicitly said this is for my cafe and I need the business 200/200 product. I raised this on 18/03 with customer services and got ticket 992733, but nothing has been corrected. My till depends on a stable upload and the current setup drops during busy periods, costing sales. I need the order swapped to the correct business tariff and confirmation of installation dates within three working days. If you cannot fix this immediately, provide a clear compensation plan for lost trading days and move me to a temporary business-grade connection until the permanent fix is in place.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states an immediate, ongoing operational impact ('My till depends on a stable upload and the current setup drops during busy periods, costing sales') and demands immediate compensatory action or a temporary fix with a specific deadline ('within three working days'). The error text, while detailing financial hardship and a future threat of churn, lacks this direct, present-tense operational disruption and immediate, concrete demands for mitigation.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be heavily weighted towards explicit, present-tense operational disruptions and demands for immediate, specific compensatory actions or deadlines, potentially under-weighting the cumulative impact of financial hardship and clear threats of future churn when assessing 'Medium' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where recurring financial impact, combined with a clear threat of customer churn due to unaddressed issues, is explicitly labeled as 'Medium' urgency, even without an immediate operational collapse.

Pair #139 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I am contacting you again regarding clearly fraudulent activity on my account that your team has not resolved. On 18 March I noticed two premium-rate outgoing calls and a number of third-party subscriptions I did not add. I immediately called your fraud team and was told by Natasha that an investigation would begin and charges would be provisionally blocked. I was given a reference (FR-46204) and assured a full reversal if fraud was confirmed. I received a further call from Simon on 22 March who said the case was 'under review' and that I should expect an update within five working days - nothing arrived. Meanwhile those charges have hit my bank and my credit is under threat. I am a software developer and I have traced this to what looks like an unauthorised SIM change or an account takeover. I have already provided ID and device logs as requested. I am calm but firm: I want immediate provisional credit for the disputed amounts, a full forensic log of SIM activity between 17-19 March, confirmation of how the takeover occurred, and a named manager to take ownership of the case. I have exhausted the normal routes and I will escalate to the Ombudsman and the regulator if this is not resolved promptly. Please respond within 48 hours with the next steps and whom I should expect to speak to.

CORRECT TEXT: On 15/03/2026 my number was ported away without authorisation and I subsequently discovered several unauthorised transactions totalling GBP 350 on my account. I reported the incident immediately and spoke with the fraud desk on 15/03/2026 and again on 18/03/2026 (agents recorded as Tom R. and Sarah P.). Both times I was told an investigation had been opened but I have received no substantive update, no reversal of the charges and no confirmation that my number has been secured against further unauthorised activity. The unauthorised port removed my access to two-factor authentication for work accounts, which is a material security issue. I therefore request an urgent, documented investigation, immediate reinstatement or suspension of the number to prevent further loss, and a full refund of the fraudulent charges. I have exhausted standard support routes and now require escalation to a senior fraud manager; if I do not receive a written response outlining remedial action within five working days I will lodge a complaint with the ombudsman and consider reporting the breach to Action Fraud.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly demands a response within '48 hours' and states a direct, immediate personal financial threat ('my credit is under threat'). In contrast, the correct text sets a longer deadline for remedial action ('within five working days') and describes a more general 'material security issue' rather than an immediate personal financial threat.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on very short explicit deadlines for a response and direct, immediate personal financial threats, interpreting these as 'High' urgency, even when the broader context of the issue and the proposed escalation timeline might indicate 'Medium' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where short response deadlines or direct financial threats are present, but the overall urgency is classified as 'Medium' due to the nature of the problem or the established resolution process.

ERROR TEXT: Account: Margaret O'Leary, 12 years with you. I noticed my monthly loyalty discount of GBP 5.00 was removed on the bill issued 22/03/2026. This is the first time I have contacted you about it. Please restore the discount and credit GBP 5.00 to my account immediately, and confirm when this has been done.

CORRECT TEXT: My business, Harris & Co. Repairs, has depended on your line for telephone bookings for six years. On 11 March I raised a complaint with your retention team (account manager Kevin Patel) about pricing: long-term clients are being charged more than new customers on the same package. Kevin said he would review the account and call back within five working days. There has been no follow-up. Last month we missed two jobs and lost approximately GBP 320 in revenue because callers were presented with a higher tariff message that deterred them from booking. I am not a leisure customer; every call costs me lost work. I am now asking for three things: (1) an immediate adjustment to match the current new-customer rate for our package backdated to 11 March, with the difference credited to our account; (2) a goodwill payment to cover demonstrable lost revenue while this was unresolved; and (3) a named contact who will confirm in writing the adjustment and provide a direct number for escalation. I raised this once already and received an empty promise. My business cannot absorb further delay. Please treat this as urgent and respond with a full resolution within five working days, otherwise I will have to move suppliers and refer the case to the ombudsman because my livelihood is at stake.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text contains multiple explicit indicators of significant, ongoing business impact ('lost approximately GBP 320 in revenue', 'every call costs me lost work', 'my business cannot absorb further delay', 'my livelihood is at stake'), a history of unresolved issues ('raised this once already and received an empty promise'), and clear threats of escalation ('move suppliers', 'refer the case to the ombudsman'). The error text, while requesting 'immediately', only mentions a small, recurring financial loss (GBP 5.00) and explicitly states it's the 'first time' contacting, lacking any explicit escalation threat or severe business consequence beyond the direct financial loss.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model is failing to differentiate between a simple request for 'immediate' action for a minor, first-time issue and a demand for immediate action driven by significant, escalating business impact, a history of failed resolution, and explicit threats of external action. It appears to be under-weighting the cumulative effect of multiple, strong consequence and escalation cues present in the correct text.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where requests for 'immediate' action are present but the overall urgency is low due to the absence of explicit, escalating business impact, repeated failures, or direct threats of external action, and conversely, examples where the combination of these latter factors drives medium urgency.

Pair #141 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: Ticket INC12345678 was opened on 5 March regarding a broadband installation for my shop. I have called three times (8 March, 12 March, 19 March) and have not received a substantive progress update since the initial confirmation. The lack of communication is impeding my planning. I have exhausted the standard escalation steps listed on your site and now request immediate acknowledgement of the outstanding actions, a revised completion date, and to be put through to a manager if you cannot provide that information within three working days. If there is no response I will take the next step with the ombudsman.

CORRECT TEXT: Switched from another provider on 1 March. No updates. Contacted complaints line twice: 8 March (Liam) and 18 March (Priya). Both said 'engineer will call' and nothing. I have exhausted standard routes. Escalate to a manager and provide the ombudsman contact details if you cannot supply a progress update within five working days.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text includes a shorter deadline ('within three working days' vs. 'within five working days'), the explicit urgency keyword 'immediate' ('immediate acknowledgement'), and a more direct, active threat of external escalation ('I will take the next step with the ombudsman') compared to the correct text's request for ombudsman contact details.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on specific keywords like 'immediate' and the numerical value of a deadline, as well as the direct phrasing of an escalation threat, without sufficiently contextualizing these elements within the overall 'Low' urgency of the request (e.g., a broadband installation, not a critical service outage).

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where explicit threats of external escalation and short deadlines are present, but the overall context still warrants a 'Low' urgency label.

Pair #142 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I switched from another provider last month expecting a smoother experience and instead spent 42 minutes on hold when I first tried to call on 18 March. As a new customer this felt odd; I accepted the transfer in good faith but then had to abandon the call because of work. I am raising this for the first time because it seems counterintuitive that new customers should face long queues while establishing services. Please explain why the waiting time was so long and provide an alternative contact method or a guaranteed callback window so I do not have to wait on hold again.

CORRECT TEXT: My business relies on your phone line. I called support on 9 March about the queues; after waiting 42 minutes I hung up. I called again on 11 March and spoke to Alan who said someone would call me back within 48 hours. That call never came. I raised this once before and nothing changed. Long hold times are reducing the time I can invoice clients and are costing me money. Please arrange a guaranteed callback slot within three working days, confirm what compensation you will provide for lost hours on 9 and 11 March, and tell me what you are doing to stop this happening again. I do not have time for another round of hold music.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states critical business reliance and financial loss ('My business relies on your phone line,' 'costing me money') and details a history of failed resolution attempts and broken promises ('called again,' 'That call never came,' 'raised this once before and nothing changed'). The error text, conversely, describes a single past inconvenience and explicitly states it's 'raising this for the first time,' which signals less urgency.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is failing to adequately weigh explicit statements of direct business/financial impact and evidence of repeated, unresolved issues with prior escalation. It appears to be overly influenced by the 'first time' mention in the error text, which diminishes the perceived urgency despite the inconvenience described.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where the urgency is conveyed through explicit statements of critical business or financial impact and a clear history of failed resolution attempts, even if the initial complaint is about a single event, to help the model prioritize these cues over 'first time' mentions.

Pair #143 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: So, it appears "fixed-term" contracts are now open to interpretation. My contract started on 10 October 2025 after I switched from another provider; I received an email dated 15 February 2026 informing me of a 12 per cent price increase taking effect from my next bill. That increase was not part of the terms I agreed to and it was implemented mid-contract on the bill dated 01 March 2026 - my monthly payment has risen from GBP 42.00 to GBP 47.04. I have called three times (18 February, 22 February and 04 March), used online chat twice and received standard responses that do not address the contractual point. Case references: 884512, 889003. Representatives I spoke with included Sam and Nina; none offered a workable resolution. I have exhausted your regular channels and therefore request escalation to a manager. If you cannot reinstate the original price or provide an equivalent remedy, please advise how to proceed with the Ombudsman Services: Communications.

CORRECT TEXT: I am contacting you about a mid-contract price increase that has been applied to my Student Unlimited 24 plan without my informed consent. My contract started on 5 September 2024 at a rate of GBP 15.00 per month and was explicitly represented to me as a fixed amount for 24 months when I signed up. On my latest bill dated 1 March 2026 the monthly charge rose to GBP 19.00, an increase of GBP 4 per month which equates to an extra GBP 48 annually - a significant amount on my limited student income.

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

This is my first formal complaint. I have limited finances: I work 10 hours a week in retail alongside my studies and budget tightly for rent, bills and course costs. A mid-contract uplift was neither communicated to me in a clear, timely manner nor agreed. I require a detailed explanation of the contractual clause that purportedly allows this change, a copy of the notice you sent (date and method), and immediate reinstatement of the original GBP 15 rate or an option to exit the contract without penalty. If you cannot honour the original pricing, please provide a compensatory arrangement that recognises my financial position, such as a reduced rate, account credit for the excess charges since 1 March 2026, or a goodwill gesture sufficient to cover the shortfall for the remainder of the contract.

Please respond with a substantive solution within five working days. I would prefer to resolve this directly, but I will escalate to the Citizens Advice consumer service and Ofcom if necessary.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly states financial hardship ('limited student income', 'limited finances') and sets a clear deadline for a response ('within five working days'), followed by a direct threat of escalation to specific external regulatory bodies ('Citizens Advice consumer service and Ofcom if necessary'). The Error Text, while mentioning exhausting internal channels and the Ombudsman, frames the external escalation as a request for advice ('please advise how to proceed') rather than a direct intention, and does not explicitly detail personal financial hardship.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be less sensitive to implicit or indirect cues of urgency, such as a request for information on how to escalate, and instead prioritizes explicit deadlines, direct threats of external action, and clear statements of personal impact (like financial hardship). It seems to be weighting 'request for advice on escalation' lower than 'will escalate if necessary'.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where the threat of external escalation is framed as a request for information or advice on how to proceed, and where financial impact is stated but not explicitly linked to severe hardship, ensuring these are correctly labeled as 'Medium' urgency.

Pair #144 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: I attempted to cancel my mobile plan today, 24 March 2026, and the experience has been absurdly time-consuming given how straightforward this should be. I'm a busy consultant and I booked time specifically to sort this: I logged into the app, went to Account > Manage Plan, clicked Cancel, and the page froze with error 503. I cleared cache, tried Chrome and Safari, and even used an incognito window. Same error and no confirmation email. I then used the web chat and explained I wanted a cancellation effective 31 March; the chat produced a bot response that asked for my last bill amount and then timed out. I called your customer line and waited 38 minutes before the call dropped. I have the call-time and the chat transcript saved. I am tech-savvy enough to know when a system is failing and where the failure sits - this looks like a backend routing problem, not user error. I do not want to be billed beyond 31 March. If the cancellation cannot be processed immediately via the account portal I expect a human to confirm it within 48 hours and a written confirmation sent to my email with a termination date and final bill estimate. If you need any further technical details (error logs, timestamps, browser versions), I will provide them, but I expect this resolved quickly; I have not had time to chase this repeatedly and will escalate to regulatory complaint channels if I am billed for the next month without proof of attempted cancellation on your systems.

CORRECT TEXT: I have been a customer since 2008 (account 4532-789-001) and am requesting immediate cancellation of my broadband and mobile bundle. I first raised this on 10 March via live chat, then phoned on 17 March and again on 24 March; I spoke with Emma R. and Raj K. who both said the cancellation would be processed and I would receive a confirmation. As of today I have had no written confirmation, no final bill, and no cancellation reference despite four contacts over three weeks. Please confirm the service end date, any final sums due, and issue a written cancellation reference within five working days. If you cannot complete the cancellation, explain the reason and provide an escalation contact so this can be closed promptly.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly details a chronological history of multiple, distinct, and unfulfilled attempts at resolution over several weeks, indicating a prolonged and systemic failure to address the customer's request. The error text, while detailing multiple attempts and an explicit 48-hour expectation, confines these failures to a single day of immediate system issues and a future-contingent escalation threat.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be more heavily weighted towards explicit mentions of repeated, unaddressed interactions over an extended timeline as a primary signal for 'Medium' urgency, potentially under-prioritizing immediate, intense system failures and explicit, time-bound expectations for resolution (e.g., 'within 48 hours') or future-dated, but clear, escalation threats when they occur within a shorter timeframe.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where 'Medium' urgency is driven by intense, immediate system failures and explicit, time-bound expectations for resolution (e.g., 'confirm within 48 hours') or future-contingent escalation threats, even if the issue has not been prolonged over weeks.

Pair #145 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I switched to your service less than a month ago and had expected at least basic accessibility to your support. Instead, what I have experienced is an absurdly long and unpredictable telephone queue that is already costing me time and money. On 24 March 2026 I rang at 09:17 to query an installation slot and was told the wait would be around 20 minutes; I was held for 42 minutes before the line cut out. At 16:03 on 25 March I called again and the IVR loop replayed the same options for ten minutes before a message announced the expected wait was 45-60 minutes; I waited 51 minutes and abandoned the call. I then used web chat on 25 March at 18:12 and stayed connected for 35 minutes answering automated prompts, only to be disconnected without explanation. The pattern is the same: long waits, repeated disconnections, no human contact when promised. This matters because the missed appointments have left my household without broadband during work hours and disrupted a contractor's installation visit. I accept that occasional delays happen, but the total lack of reliable access to support is unacceptable for a paying customer. Please investigate what is causing these queue failures, provide an explanation of the steps you will take to reduce wait times, and arrange a guaranteed callback within three working days at a time I specify. I also expect a goodwill gesture for lost working time and the cost of rearranged appointments. If you cannot arrange a callback, explain why and give me the name and contact details of someone senior who will take responsibility for resolving this.

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing to escalate an ongoing issue with excessive call-waiting times. I have been a customer since 2007 and, having exhausted the usual contact channels, now require managerial intervention. Over the past week I attempted to speak to your team on three separate occasions: 15 March (waited 47 minutes), 17 March (62 minutes), and 22 March (85 minutes) before I was forced to abandon the calls due to work commitments. Each time I queued for general enquiries regarding a billing discrepancy on invoice INV-3324 and never reached a live adviser. I have also used the online webchat twice with automated replies that did not resolve the billing question. As a long-standing customer this level of access is unsatisfactory; reasonable telephone access is an expectation of the service. Please arrange for a senior manager to contact me directly within three working days to discuss the outstanding bill and to explain what steps you will take to reduce waiting times. If I do not receive a satisfactory response I will forward this complaint to the Communications Ombudsman. Contact me at the phone number on file between 09:00 and 11:00 on weekdays. Thank you for your prompt attention.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text explicitly details significant, immediate, and tangible negative consequences such as 'without broadband during work hours' and 'disrupted a contractor's installation visit,' directly linking the service failure to financial loss and essential service disruption. The Correct Text, while detailing service failures, attributes them to a less immediately impactful 'billing discrepancy.'

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-prioritize explicit mentions of direct, immediate, and severe personal/financial impact (e.g., loss of essential services for work, financial costs due to disruption) as indicators of 'High' urgency, even when the overall context and requested resolution timeframe (e.g., 'within three working days') suggest 'Medium' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more 'Medium' urgency examples where the text describes significant personal or financial impact but the requested resolution timeframe or the nature of the escalation still aligns with a 'Medium' urgency level.

Pair #146 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: My business is being impacted and I need this resolved immediately. I operate a small graphic design studio (Bright Oak Creative Ltd, account 008765) and contracted your Business Plus 100 service on 01/09/2025. We are relocating premises and requested formal cancellation to take effect 01/04/2026 because the new site will not be ready for another supplier until May. On 08/03/2026 I phoned support and spoke with Mark in the commercial retention team who said he would process a pro-rata refund for the unused month and issue a cancellation confirmation by email. That confirmation never arrived. Since then invoices INV-2026-03 and INV-2026-04 have been generated and payment was taken on 20/03/2026 (ref: PAY-3321), despite my instruction to cancel.

To be explicit: I require written confirmation that the contract will terminate on 01/04/2026, an itemised refund for the period billed after that date, and a return of any equipment collection instructions. This service is essential to contacting clients and invoicing; the continued billing and the ambiguity over cancellation threaten cashflow and client relationships. If you cannot supply the requested documentation and refund within seven calendar days, I will seek independent advice and consider formally disputing the charges and instructing a solicitor for breach of contract. Please respond with the cancellation reference number and refund timetable.

CORRECT TEXT: I have been a customer since 2008 (account 4532-789-001) and am requesting immediate cancellation of my broadband and mobile bundle. I first raised this on 10 March via live chat, then phoned on 17 March and again on 24 March; I spoke with Emma R. and Raj K. who both said the cancellation would be processed and I would receive a confirmation. As of today I have had no written confirmation, no final bill, and no cancellation reference despite four contacts over three weeks. Please confirm the service end date, any final sums due, and issue a written cancellation reference within five working days. If you cannot complete the cancellation, explain the reason and provide an escalation contact so this can be closed promptly.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Correct Text explicitly quantifies the history of unresolved issues by stating 'four contacts over three weeks,' clearly indicating multiple failed attempts to resolve the problem. The Error Text, while describing an ongoing issue and a single initial phone call, does not explicitly aggregate or quantify the number of prior failed resolution attempts in such a direct and concise manner.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be more sensitive to explicit, quantified statements of repeated failed resolution attempts as a trigger for 'Medium' urgency. It seems to under-prioritize or fail to synthesize 'Medium' urgency from a narrative description of a problem persisting after an initial contact, even when that narrative includes explicit business impact and a qualified legal escalation threat.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where 'Medium' urgency is conveyed through a detailed narrative of a problem persisting over time with implicit multiple failed resolution attempts, or through strong statements of business impact and qualified escalation threats, even without explicit quantification of prior contacts.

Pair #147 | True: LOW -> Predicted: Medium

ERROR TEXT: I have been a customer since 2012 and am disappointed that I am once again having to ask for a cancellation to be actioned. I requested termination of my broadband and line rental on 4 March via your telephone team and then followed up with an online chat on 11 March where I spoke with Michael, who confirmed that the request had been logged and that the final disconnection date would be 28 March. As of today there is no confirmation on my account, the service is still active and the online portal continues to show the monthly charge. I have been loyal to your company for more than a decade and am seeking a full explanation of why the cancellation has not been processed, together with an immediate confirmation of the disconnection date and a final bill showing any outstanding sums. Please escalate to a supervisor if necessary and email me the outcome; I appreciate that administrative errors happen but I would prefer this be resolved without further delay.

CORRECT TEXT: After twelve years with your company I attempted to cancel one of my services and the process has been needlessly obstructive. I called on 20 March to terminate the line associated with my old home broadband service; the advisor (Sonia) confirmed cancellation and gave me reference CXL-2048, promising the direct debit would be stopped immediately. I was then charged on 23 March and, on calling back on 24 March, Mark in Customer Care insisted the service was still active and that no cancellation had been recorded. I was told a supervisor would call back; no call has been received.

This is an unacceptable handling of a straightforward request from a long-term customer. I have been given contradictory information twice and charged for a service I requested to end. I want immediate confirmation that the cancellation is processed, an immediate refund of the latest payment, and a written apology. If you cannot resolve this to my satisfaction please escalate to a manager and advise how to proceed with an Ombudsman referral. I expect a response within seven days.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text contains a direct, unconditional request for escalation ('Please escalate to a supervisor if necessary') immediately following a demand for 'immediate confirmation' of a service status. In contrast, the Correct Text, despite featuring stronger urgency cues like 'immediate refund' and 'Ombudsman referral', frames its escalation conditionally ('If you cannot resolve this...') and includes a 7-day deadline, which signals a less immediate resolution path.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to over-index on the co-occurrence and directness of 'escalate' and 'immediate' when related to service status, without sufficiently weighing the conditional nature of the escalation or the longer-term resolution paths (like Ombudsman or a 7-day deadline) that would keep the urgency at 'Low'. It fails to distinguish between a direct administrative escalation and a more formal, process-driven complaint.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where direct requests for 'escalation' and 'immediate confirmation' of service status are present but the overall context and explicit deadlines (e.g., 7 days) clearly indicate a 'Low' urgency.

Pair #148 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: Low

ERROR TEXT: Family Home 350 plan: evening speeds have dropped to 8-14Mbps since 06/03/2026. Wired speedtests at 20:30 show 12Mbps. Rebooted hub and checked cables. Children cannot do homework with this. What are you going to do about restoring the advertised throughput?

CORRECT TEXT: I am elderly and not confident with technical instructions. My broadband download is only 3 Mbps, measured on 15 March 2026, yet my plan is advertised at up to 35 Mbps. I reported this once before on 3 March (reference 77421) and was told someone would call back; that did not happen. I need a technician visit arranged or simple clear steps I can follow, ideally within the next few days.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The correct text explicitly states a prior failed attempt at resolution ('reported this once before... that did not happen') and includes a direct temporal request for action ('ideally within the next few days'). The error text, while describing a significant daily impact ('Children cannot do homework with this'), lacks these explicit cues of escalation or a time-bound demand for intervention.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be heavily weighted towards explicit indicators of service escalation (repeated issues, failed prior resolutions) and direct temporal urgency (e.g., 'within the next few days'), potentially under-prioritizing the urgency implied by a critical, ongoing daily impact on essential activities when these explicit cues are absent.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where 'Medium' urgency is conveyed through the severe, ongoing daily impact on critical user activities (e.g., work, education) even without explicit prior failed attempts or direct temporal deadlines.

Pair #149 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I bought my handset on a student plan less than eight months ago and it has developed persistent faults that make it unreliable for day-to-day use. Over the past four weeks I have contacted support on 4 March, 11 March, 18 March and most recently 23 March; case numbers are 550124, 552391, 556708 and 559002. I spoke with advisors called Tom, Aisha and then two different repair agents; each time I was told a software reset or a collection would be arranged, but the problems remain. The phone's microphone cuts out during calls, the touch screen intermittently becomes unresponsive and the battery discharges from full to 20% within a few hours, which is not acceptable on a student budget. I cannot afford an out-of-warranty repair fee (quoted at around GBP 75 when I asked), and repeated troubleshooting has not fixed the device. I would be grateful for a prompt solution: either an immediate replacement handset under the contract warranty or a prepaid collection for diagnostics and free repair. Please confirm next steps and a firm timescale within three working days so I can plan around my studies; I am disappointed this has taken several contacts without a durable outcome.

CORRECT TEXT: I have been with this company for over a decade and have always tried to be reasonable, which is why I am contacting you now. I bought an iPhone 13 from your online store on 1 February (order 112233) and the handset will not charge from the supplied cable or wirelessly. The phone is otherwise functional but loses power rapidly and will not accept a charge above 30 per cent. This is a first contact; I have not previously opened a complaint. Please advise the practical next step: repair, replacement or collection. I would like this arranged within seven working days as I rely on my phone for both work and family contact. If you need any additional details, the serial number ends 78K9.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly details a history of multiple, failed attempts at resolution over several weeks, including specific dates and case numbers, and expresses disappointment over the lack of a 'durable outcome.' In contrast, the correct text explicitly states 'This is a first contact; I have not previously opened a complaint.'

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's urgency classification mechanism appears to heavily weight the presence of a detailed history of unresolved prior contacts as a strong indicator of 'High' urgency, potentially overshadowing other cues (such as the requested 3-day timeframe) that would suggest a 'Medium' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where a history of multiple, unresolved contacts is present, but the overall urgency is still 'Medium' due to the nature of the problem or the requested resolution timeframe, to help the model differentiate between frustration/persistence and immediate critical need.

Pair #150 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: I've been with your company for 12 years and this is the first time I've felt I needed to ask for formal escalation. On 2 March I noticed two SIM swaps and three outgoing premium-rate calls on my account which I did not authorise. I phoned customer services on 3 March and spoke with Rachel (ref 847392); she confirmed the account would be frozen and said fraud would investigate. On 9 March I spoke to Tom (ref 855101) who told me the freeze wasn't applied and that a manager would review. I have followed every step suggested by your agents and supplied copies of my ID and police reference 2023/4568, but the disputed charges of GBP 182.40 remain on the bill and the account was active for two days after I reported the issue. I am asking for a manager-review and a full reversal of the fraudulent transactions, and if you cannot resolve this promptly please pass the matter to the ombudsman. I am disappointed that after a decade with you I have had to reach this point, but I want a clear timeline for resolution within the next five working days.

CORRECT TEXT: I've called three times over the last two weeks because our family plan was targeted by scam texts that led to several premium-rate charges on 11 and 12 March. I manage the kids' allowances and those charges wiped out our top-up. I spoke to Liam on 13 March who removed two of the charges but said the rest needed investigation; then I called again on 16 March and was told a different ticket owner would call back - they didn't. My daughter keeps getting messages asking to 'verify' her number. I need two things: immediate refunds for the unauthorised premium charges and a block on premium-rate and international-pay services on all lines on my account while you sort this. I'm not asking for sympathy, I'm asking for the account secured and a timeline. Please treat this as urgent - I can't keep chasing while my kids lose their credit and I worry about identity theft.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text contains explicit mentions of a high-severity, past fraud event ('SIM swaps') and a critical security process failure ('freeze wasn't applied' after reporting), coupled with formal escalation language ('formal escalation', 'ombudsman', 'timeline within five working days'). The Correct Text, while also urgent, describes an ongoing but less immediately catastrophic issue ('scam texts', 'daughter keeps getting messages') and a general request for urgency without the same level of formal threat or past security failure.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on the historical severity of fraud types (e.g., 'SIM swaps') and formal escalation/threat language (e.g., 'ombudsman', 'formal escalation', firm deadlines) as direct indicators of 'High' urgency. It is failing to differentiate between a serious past event with a formal complaint process and an actively escalating, immediate crisis, which would typically warrant a 'High' label.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment training data with more examples where severe past events or formal escalation language are present, but the overall context (e.g., lack of immediate, ongoing, or rapidly escalating threat) still warrants a 'Medium' urgency label, to teach the model to weigh the immediacy and ongoing nature of the threat more heavily.

Pair #151 | True: MEDIUM -> Predicted: High

ERROR TEXT: On Monday 16 March my handset started shutting down mid-call while I was on a delivery run. I run a small courier operation and that phone is my primary way to accept bookings, navigate, and confirm drops. By 18 March I had spoken to your agent Aisha, who logged fault reference 90217 and said a replacement would be sent; I have received nothing and the device now fails to hold a charge for more than 30 minutes. As a result I missed a scheduled commercial drop and lost a GBP 120 job fee that I had agreed with a client that morning.

I raised the fault once already and was promised a loan handset; that did not happen. I need either an immediate replacement handset or a working loan device while mine is assessed, and I need a record of the lost income covered or reimbursed. Please advise how you will get a working device to me within the next two working days so I can resume operations.
CORRECT TEXT: I am contacting you regarding the replacement handset provided under my contract which has developed repeated faults and is causing a practical problem for me. I am registered as having limited mobility and rely on my phone for scheduled healthcare calls; since 4 January 2026 the handset intermittently fails to power on, misses incoming calls and sometimes reboots during conversations. I have raised this matter by telephone on 11 January, 25 January and again on 8 February, speaking to advisers Helen J. and Omar B., and each time I was told a replacement would be sent but nothing arrived. For clarity: ticket reference 41092 was opened on 11 January and remains unresolved. As a vulnerable customer I request a priority replacement device or a full refund for the handset within ten working days, together with confirmation that any essential numbers for healthcare contacts will be retained and forwarded if necessary. I would appreciate a formal written update and an accessible point of contact for follow-up.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The Error Text explicitly states an immediate, quantifiable financial loss (GBP 120 job fee) and directly links the device failure to the complete cessation of the user's livelihood ('resume operations' within 'two working days'). In contrast, the Correct Text highlights vulnerability and reliance for healthcare, but the impact, while serious, is framed as a risk to scheduled calls rather than an immediate, complete operational shutdown or direct financial loss, and requests a longer resolution timeframe ('ten working days').

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on the combination of explicit, immediate financial detriment and a very short, demanding resolution timeframe ('two working days' for 'resume operations'), interpreting these as indicators of 'High' urgency, even when the true label considers the situation 'Medium'.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where significant but not life-threatening financial losses or operational disruptions are explicitly stated alongside short resolution demands, but are correctly labeled as 'Medium' urgency.

ERROR TEXT: I switched my home and phone service to your company from Sky under order reference 778811 on 14/02/2026. The installation appointment was booked for 17/02/2026 and the porting of my number was due to complete on that day. Since then there has been no substantive communication: the last update on the portal was 17/02/2026 and I have had two calls to your helpdesk (Kate on 23/02, case 778811-23K) and a complaints email reply on 03/03/2026 that offered no timeline. I have now exhausted the normal channels and require escalation to a manager or the Ombudsman if you cannot supply a firm plan immediately. Under the standards expected of new customer migrations, you are obliged to keep me informed of progress and any delays; your silence has left me unable to confirm the switch with my contacts, and I have lost an evening of work waiting for the engineer who did not arrive. Please provide within 48 hours: (1) a confirmed date and two-hour slot for installation and number porting, (2) a precise explanation for the delay since 17/02/2026 and why I received no interim updates, and (3) details of compensation you will offer for the time and inconvenience caused. If you fail to respond with a satisfactory plan, I will take this further via alternative dispute resolution channels.

CORRECT TEXT: I am a student (Ethan Morris) on a limited budget and I am contacting you for the first time regarding a repair request which has had no progress updates. My broadband experienced repeated drops starting 15 March 2026 and I reported the fault to your tech team the same day. I was given a fault reference but no completion date, and since then I have received no further communication - no appointment window, no engineer confirmation and no interim advice on how to maintain access for my online seminars. The intermittent connectivity is having a clear financial impact as I have had to buy mobile data top-ups to attend lectures. Please advise the current status of the fault, provide a realistic timescale for repair, and confirm whether a temporary data allowance or credit can be applied while the issue is outstanding. A clear update within 48 hours would be helpful so I can plan study and finances.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text contains explicit, direct threats of escalation to external bodies (Ombudsman, alternative dispute resolution) and firm ultimatums with specific deadlines ('immediately', 'within 48 hours') tied to these threats. The correct text, while requesting a 48-hour update, frames it as 'helpful' and focuses on personal impact (financial, study planning) rather than external escalation or punitive action.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be heavily weighted towards identifying explicit 'threats of escalation' and 'strict deadlines with consequences' as primary indicators of 'High' urgency, potentially overlooking the overall context of the issue itself (which might be 'Medium'). It struggles to differentiate between a strong demand for resolution within a timeframe (which can still be 'Medium') and an immediate, critical threat requiring 'High' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Add more training examples where customers express strong demands, set firm deadlines, or mention escalation channels (e.g., 'Ombudsman,' 'ADR') but the underlying issue's impact is still classified as 'Medium' rather than 'High'.

ERROR TEXT: I run a small catering business and purchased ten company handsets and a business line from you on 12 January 2026 (account 44-19-221). Since 05 March 2026 multiple handsets show repeated SIM errors and no network registration. I have called support on 06 March and 11 March, spoken to Mark and then to Lydia, and completed every diagnostic your scripted agents suggested. The faults have rendered three of my delivery drivers unable to take orders or update customers. I have documented loss of earnings totalling GBP 1,240. I have now exhausted the normal complaint routes and the issue remains. Under the Consumer Rights Act 2015 the goods supplied must be fit for purpose and of satisfactory quality. These handsets are clearly not. I am therefore formally requesting immediate remedial action: either full replacement of faulty devices within five working days or a pro rata refund for devices that fail to network, plus compensation for demonstrable loss. If you do not escalate this to a senior manager and provide a binding timetable by close of business on 29 March 2026 I will refer the matter to the Ombudsman and consider legal remedies to recover my losses. This is not a negotiation; it is a statement of my rights and the impact on my livelihood.

CORRECT TEXT: I am writing because the handset supplied as part of my contract (Model: Galaxy A14, supplied 02/02/2026) has developed a recurring fault: the screen freezes and the call function drops intermittently. I am not confident with technical matters and rely on a phone for medical appointments and contacting family; this intermittent failure began on 03/03/2026 and has persisted. I raised this once before with your adviser Paul on 14/03/2026 (call reference 2278345) and was told a technician would ring back; no one has contacted me and the problem remains. Under the Consumer Rights Act 2015 I understand goods must be of satisfactory quality and fit for purpose; given the handset is within the expected period of use I request a replacement or a repair within seven days, or a refund if neither is practicable. Please confirm by telephone (I prefer a landline call) or by post. I would appreciate a clear timetable rather than further verbal assurances. Yours sincerely, Agnes Ward

1. Linguistic Delta:

The error text explicitly states a quantified financial loss (GBP 1,240), directly threatens referral to the Ombudsman and legal remedies with a specific deadline ('by close of business on 29 March 2026'), and uses assertive, non-negotiable language ('This is not a negotiation'). The correct text, while detailing a persistent fault and personal reliance, lacks these specific, high-impact financial figures, explicit legal threats with deadlines, and an overtly confrontational tone.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism appears to be over-indexing on the presence of explicit financial quantification, direct threats of external legal/ombudsman action with specific deadlines, and highly assertive language, interpreting these as definitive signals for 'High' urgency, even when the underlying issue's immediate criticality might still align with 'Medium' urgency.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where customers express significant financial impact or explicit threats of legal/ombudsman action with deadlines, but the overall context still warrants a 'Medium' urgency label.

ERROR TEXT: I am writing on behalf of my family plan account (Family Share 30GB, account holder: Rebecca Hardy) to complain about the absence of meaningful updates. We reported the ongoing loss of evening data for multiple devices on 1 March, chased progress on 8 March and again on 16 March, and have received only automated messages and a single brief call stating the ticket had been 'escalated' (reference 987654321). This is the fourth time I have had to prompt you, and I am now formally requesting a substantive status report within 48 hours explaining: the cause of the failure, the remedial steps taken to date, an estimated completion date, and any compensation for the predictable disruption to the children's schoolwork and my work calls. Under the Consumer Rights Act and Ofcom guidelines I expect transparent communication and timely fault resolution; please confirm receipt of this email and provide the requested update without further delay.

DeBERTa Telecommunications Urgency Model

Please advise the current status of the fault, provide a realistic timescale for repair, and confirm whether a temporary data allowance or credit can be applied while the issue is outstanding. A clear update within 48 hours would be helpful so I can plan study and finances.

1. Linguistic Delta:

The FAILED text explicitly states a history of repeated attempts to resolve the issue ('chased progress on 8 March and again on 16 March', 'fourth time I have had to prompt you') and incorporates formal, almost legalistic language ('formally requesting', 'Under the Consumer Rights Act and Ofcom guidelines'). In contrast, the CORRECT text states it's the 'first time' contacting and frames its 48-hour request as 'helpful' rather than a formal demand, despite similar underlying issues.

2. Algorithmic Blindspot:

The model's attention mechanism is over-indexing on explicit historical escalation cues and formal/legalistic language, interpreting these as definitive indicators of 'High' urgency, even when the immediate impact or threat level aligns with 'Medium' urgency. It struggles to differentiate between a highly frustrated customer with a medium-urgency issue and a truly high-urgency situation.

3. Actionable Fix:

Augment the training data with more examples where customers express significant frustration, mention prior escalations, or use formal language, but the overall urgency remains 'Medium' due to the nature of the problem or the requested resolution.
